CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE FIRST MEETING OF THE NEW YEAR LAST EVENING.

Mr. Ginna Elected President. Mr. Runyon City Clerk and Mr. Mundy Janitor—The Mayor's Message—The Excellent Condition of the City Finances—Other Business.

The new city Common Council held its first meeting of 1893 last evening. The Council remains the same as last year with one exception—Councilman Millington takes the place of Councilman Gallup.

Mr. Frank W. Runyon, whose term as City Clerk expired at noon yesterday, called the meeting to order. All the members were present except Mr. Case.

Mr. Ginna, who so ably filled the president's chair of the last Council, was unanimously elected to that office.

Mr. Ginna, after being escorted to the chair by Messrs. Scott and Frazee, and making a pleasant little speech in appreciation of the honor conferred upon him by the Council, announced that the first business of the Council would be the election of a City Clerk.

Mr. Mundy nominated Mr. Frank W. Runyon, and Mr. Frazee nominated Aaron W. Rand.

City Clerk.

A ballot resulted as follows:

Rand	4

The election of Mr. Runyon was, by motion, made unanimous.

Mr. Mundy was elected Janitor by a unanimous vote.

Mr. Smith moved that the rules governing the Council of 1892 be adopted as the rules of the present Council. Carried.

The president announced the following committees:

Alms Committee—Bird, Frazee, Weber.

Auditing Committee — Millington, Weber, Frazee.

Fire and Buildings—Erickson, Bird, Marsh.

Finance—Fisk, Marsh, Johnston.

Laws and Ordinance—Johnston, Frazee, Fisk.

Licenses—Weber, Case, Millington.

Police and Public Lights—Marsh, Johnston, Erickson.

Printing and Stationary—Frazee, Millington, Bird.

Street—Vice, Fisk, Case.

Water and Sewerage—Case, Erickson, Scott.

The Mayor's message was read and ordered filed. It is as follows:

PLAINFIELD, N. J., January 3, 1893.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—While an annual message from the Mayor to the Common Council is not mandatory, it is customary. It hardly seems necessary in the present instance. With the exception of one new member, the Council of 1892 is practically a continuation of that of 1891. Its meetings have been held monthly during the year, and its members are thoroughly familiar with all of the questions of importance as affecting the welfare of the city. It is not likely, therefore, that I can present to you any entirely new suggestions at this early date, with which you are not more or less familiar. The purpose of this message, however, for the purpose of giving prominence to a few thoughts which are suggested to me as I look back over the events of the past year, with an earnest desire to co-operate with you in the effort to secure to the people an efficient and economical city government.

FINANCE.

It is interesting to note the change that has taken place during the past few years with reference to the annual expenditure of the public funds.

Two years ago in addition to the amount required for the support of the city poor and the cost of maintaining the Fire Department, ten thousand dollars was all that our charter permitted us to raise by taxation in any one year for city purposes. This, together with the small amount received from licenses, fines, etc., for many years was the only help upon which to defray the expenses of the city.

In 1892 the sum required to meet the demands upon the city treasury was about seventy thousand dollars. Of this amount there was expended—

For work upon streets	$15,250.00
" Police	6,000.00
" Lights	4,900.00
" Fire Department	13,100.00
" Salaries and commissions	9,000.00
" City Poor	3,000.00
" Library	2,700.00
" Miscellaneous	7,900.00

This seems to be a very marked and rapid increase, but, in fairly considering the needs of the city, it is difficult to see any material saving can be effected. The public officers to attend to the business of the city, such as police protection, the Fire Department, ten thousand dollars will be required to meet the interest on the bonded debt of the city, and the ordinary expenses of the city government, which are necessary to the prosperity of the city, and the comfort and convenience of its citizens, will not admit of any material reduction. A decrease can be reached early in the year as to the amount of repairing necessary to be done, also the amount of new work that can be done during the year. Estimates for doing the work can then be invited from responsible contractors, and the work to be awarded to the lowest responsible bidder. We have no doubt that a considerable saving could be effected in this way. At all events I think the suggestion worthy of consideration.

While I do not wish to be considered as underrating the importance of the work that has been done upon the streets, I realize that other wants are pressing their claims upon us, and will endeavor to show that the present excessive expenditure in any one department may result injuriously to the public welfare. The amount of money demanded for unnecessary improvements should be correspondingly reduced, should occasion so absolutely require it, and we ought to go ahead too fast. Our city should grow easy and natural and should be judged by its healthy growth. The economy that will protect the people against unnecessary expenditure.

CITY POOR.

The care of the poor is still a vexatious problem. During the past year a new building has been built to the poor house, otherwise the same conditions prevail as did a year ago. The house can be properly be called a house of indolence, and in its present condition should no longer be tolerated. Some changes should be made during the year concerning the unsteady condition of the place and the disorderly character of many of the inmates. It seems to me that we owe it to the community as well as to the City Poor to provide a building where the deeper class can be cared for under proper moral and sanitary regulations. We have not yet reached a point where such a proper solution of this question until the City owns the Poor House and becomes directly responsible for its condition.

In considering this matter, I have counselled with those who are earnestly engaged in relief work and who have the best interests at heart. Upon this subject, and of all the various plans considered, none seem to meet with as much favor as the Poor Farm.

The purchase of a few acres of land with a small house upon it, not far from the City, and a good deal of grading and would not cost very much. To this, add such a building as would be necessary to accommodate the dependent poor, and appoint an overseer who would live in the farm house and have the control over the inmates of the Poor House with authority to compel labor from these who are able to work. With proper care and compulsory labor, we could with certainty count upon doing away with the immoral and unsanitary conditions of our present system, and at the same time compel the beneficiaries to contribute something to their own support. That this would result in the moral and physical improvement of the inmates, especially the children, can hardly be questioned. I believe that the people are ready to pay the necessary increase in the tax rate that would be necessary to relieve the City from the present unsatisfactory condition in connection with its care of the poor.

In the meantime, I recommend that the Poor House be put in thorough repair and provision made to give to the inmates the same care and assistance that we are spending on the portion of the poor who have never resorted to the Poor House.

To secure this recommendation not meet with favor, then require the landlord of the present house to put it in thorough repair as a condition for its occupancy by the City. This having been done, let the place be kept in a thoroughly clean condition, inside and out, at the expense of the City.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

In view of the possible appearance of cholera in this country next spring, the importance of proper sanitary conditions throughout the City should be kept constantly in mind. The streets should be kept clean, the North avenue sewer should be closely watched, especially at times of heavy rains, and the accumulation of any unhealthy deposit. The condition and influence of this sewer should be made a special study. The recent deposits on North avenue having no outlet for the escape of noxious gases, except through the pipes in private houses, whether these gases go through these pipes or not, is a question which I have already connected and the sewerage from these flows directly into the brook, which, by the way, passes through the City. Originally a receiving basin existed on Seace street to receive the sewage from the North East part of the City, and while but this having been filled up by order of the Board of Health, should not all the connections East of the North avenue receiving basin be discontinued?

The gravel pit should be filled up and the further deposit of sewage should not be prohibited. The fact that so many householders quit garbage with their refuse gives us reason to fear that the deposit of refuse within the city limits, and this should be prohibited by ordinance. Every yard, garden and outhouse should be required to have a cover of earth, or other suitable material to prevent the escape of noxious gases and the breeding of flies. The importance of carrying the same through the public schools.

CARE OF SCHOOLS.

Care should be taken to discover and prevent any direct household contagious and infectious diseases.

An appropriation should be made for the purchase of a pest house outside the city limits. This is very important and should not be neglected. In case of the outbreak of any contagious disease such a place will become an immediate necessity for the isolation of patients.

All low places throughout the city where water stands to the detriment of the public health should be filled up.

The people should be frequently reminded of the importance of proper sanitary conditions at their homes. The occasional publication in the newspapers of the following issued by the Board of Health last year will be useful in keeping the subject before the people. A house to house inspection may also be desirable.

SEWERAGE.

The sewerage problem has been under consideration during the past year by a committee appointed by the Common Council at its meeting of Feb. 1st. The Committee has been taking steps in its efforts to thoroughly investigate and understand the subject, and I think will be prepared to submit a report early in the year.

One very encouraging result of the Committee's work is the demonstration of the fact that an efficient system can be provided at a moderate cost. No thorough system, however, will meet the views of bonds. It is only right that the people should understand this at the outset. Any attempt to meet these views by accomplish this work is to avoid ourselves of the city's credit at a high rate of interest, and then put ourselves in a position to do the work on a strictly cash basis. Under the supervision of men working only for the good of the city, the sewers can be built by an issue of bonds in any one year, and should run for a term of years, and thereby the establishment of a sinking fund to provide for the entirely paid off at maturity without subjecting the people to much more of a burden than is now imposed by the present expense of cleaning cesspools. Under existing state laws the amount that can be issued in bonds for the purpose of constructing sewers, not to exceed in any one year, two per cent. I should not, and I feel quite confident that the Council will not, favor the issuance of bonds to the full extent allowed by law, except by the people. If the sewerage necessary for the maintenance of public health, and the comfort and convenience of the people, and of course it follows that it is legitimate to issue bonds in order to construct sewers, and that they run for a term of years. Should the people not favor this view, then of course the sewerage problem will have to be abandoned for the present.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

In my last annual message I suggested that the introduction of water for fire purposes would possibly result of benefit to the fire department that would benefit the city. I am still of the same opinion. One of the steamers, it seems to me, could be dispensed with entirely, while the other will only be required occasionally. Hose carts can now be used with greater economy. They can be drawn by one horse instead of two, and they require but little room for no fuel. I would recommend that one of the steamers be sold, and the purchase of hose carts be considered. I am also informed by the Board of Engineers that at least seventy-five per cent. of all our fires would be extinguished by such an engine.

I would also suggest the advisability of the location of a hose cart in the vicinity of the manufacturing district West of Plainfield avenue, and another in the vicinity of Grant street, as the district is filled almost entirely of frame buildings and should have fire protection close at hand.

Provision should also be made for the Netherwood district at the earliest possible date.

The time is not far distant when other important changes tending to the economical management of department will have to be considered.

AMENDMENT OF LIQUOR ORDINANCE.

Section 14 of the ordinance regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors whereby over a fine shall be imposed and collected for the benefit of any of the poor unless one-half of such fine shall be paid to the person making the complaint.

The Corporation Counsel informs me that this provision as it applies to our present management conditions is unjust law, and makes it difficult for him to secure conviction in cases of trial by jury. I would recommend the repeal of section of the ordinance referred to be so amended that the regular policemen shall be excepted from the provision referred to.

BUILDING METHODS.

The reforms instituted by you during the past year in the letting of the various city treasurer suggests the propriety of adopting a more specific provision for the care of public documents and vouchers in the custody of the City Clerk.

The City Clerk is provided with a fire proof safe sufficiently large to contain all important papers intrusted to his care. This safe should be properly filed for ready reference, and care should be taken to properly preserve all papers. The establishment of proper system now may save much trouble in the future.

In this connection I would also suggest the adoption of some safe guard against the payment of claims a second time. The large number of bills presented at each monthly meeting, and the haste to get them through the various committees before adjournment renders it possible that the same claim twice over. Claims against the city cannot be too closely scrutinized. It could be arranged that the City Clerk should occupy a portion of the Mayor's office and keep the books and papers there, which I think it would be of advantage to the city.

I must not lose sight of the fact that the influence of our administration of public affairs may last many years after we shall have passed from power. Therefore, the adoption to-day of correct business methods, and the appointment of competent, trustworthy officers to fill the various public offices, will give a right direction to public affairs which will require little or no change in the future. The reverse of this is also true. With lax business methods and incompetent public officers, public affairs will drift into disorder and confusion, the public will suffer therefrom, and it will become the duty of a succeeding city government to correct the evil.

Let us, therefore, be watchful and diligent lest we may leave to our successors the legacy of waste and extravagance as the legitimate result of a perfunctory performance of public duty.

Respectfully submitted,

L. GILDER, Mayor.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Blaine's Personal Influence.

In personal influence and magnetism no living statesman has ever equaled Blaine. No Republican statesman ever aroused the wild, thrilling enthusiasm among his followers that he did, from the old "plumed knight" days in 1876 down to the Minneapolis convention in 1892. But the power of arousing enthusiasm does not always mean success.

The monuments that will preserve Blaine's name in lasting remembrance among his countrymen are three—reciprocity, pan-Americanism and his great book "Twenty Years of Congress." If he had let politics alone and devoted his splendid powers to literature, he would have perhaps achieved more illustrious fame than he will as it is. As far back as when he was Garfield's secretary of state he evolved the pan-American idea—a closer union of commerce and friendship between the United States on the one side and the Latin American republics on the other, and arbitration of all the differences arising among those republics instead of the destructive wars that have hindered their development. Whatever results flow from the pan-American congress will be due to Blaine and largely to his tremendous personal influence among the delegates.

The other Blaine idea was reciprocity. The original reciprocity scheme submitted by him to congress when he was secretary of state provided that "the president of the United States shall have power to open the ports of the United States to any or all of the products of the other American nations and colonies whenever and for so long as they shall admit to their ports duty free or at reduced rates an equivalent amount of the natural and manufactured products of the United States." While the reciprocity law finally passed by congress did not go so far as Blaine wished, it has opened to us the trade of six of the Spanish-American republics and Cuba and several other colonies under more favorable conditions than are allowed to any European nation. Populations including 40,000,000 of people are embraced in the nations with which these commercial treaties of reciprocity exist.

New Year's Resolutions.

I will mind my own business strictly during all of 1893. I will not gabble of gossip about anybody behind his or her back, and I will not say anything about a person that I would not say to him. If I hear an unpleasant remark made about anybody in his absence, I will not run straightaway and tell it. It hasn't I think he ought to know it." The feeling that prompts me to thus repeat such remarks is not friendship at all, but only a desire to spread malicious gossip.

I will not run in debt for anything unless I have a sure prospect of paying. I will not ask anybody to go my security for a loan; no, not even my father-in-law.

If I work for wages, I will give the best service I can to my employer and give it cheerfully. I will not shirk my work or slight it, and I will not cherish any feeling of spite or jealousy against any fellow workmen who gets advancement more rapidly than I do. I will not try to advance myself at the expense of anybody else, so help me!

If I employ men to work for me, I will treat them exactly as I think I ought to be treated if they hired me to work for them. I will never forget that all mankind are of one flesh and blood.

I will not scramble to get the best of everybody all the week in business and then think I can get forgiveness for it by going to church on Sunday and putting a dime in the contribution box, or even a hundred dollars. It can't be done.

Finally I will not tell the same story over more than ten times during 1893, not even if it is my dearest chestnut.

A horrible scene at a recent execution by guillotine sets one to wondering whether there are anywhere else in civilization such desperate creatures as those of the Bon class in Paris. The condemned man wrenched at the last moment, threw himself down and clung desperately to the ground, kicking, howling and begging wildly for his life. The keepers were forced to tear him away by main force and carry him in their arms to the guillotine. Even there he fought, writhed and shrieked, both while they bound him and after he was tied fast to the plank. Only the drop of the glistening knife and the fall of his head into the basket stopped this scene of horror, which was enough to make a person of any sensibility faint and sick. But the crowd of men and women from the Paris slums actually enjoyed it. They laughed aloud at the wretch's struggles and jeered and taunted him till his head fell and only the bleeding body was left. Then they dispersed, joking and laughing as before. It was the best show of the gay season to them. Why the French authorities permit these awful public executions is past understanding. Such scenes sow seeds of blood and destruction that will grow and bear fruit for a thousand years

It looks as though some Americans had plenty of money when Wallace & Forbes pay $41,000 for the trotting stallion Stamboul. Of course they expect to get their money back in the breeding of trotters, but it only shows what the public is willing to pay for excitement and amusement.

THE LAWMAKERS MEET

Big Senatorial Fights Open in Many States.

EDWARD MURPHY'S GOOD CHANCES.

His Friends Sure That He Will Succeed Hiscock in New York—Hawley's Chances in Connecticut—Pennsylvania Republicans Name Their Legislative Officers.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—The legislature met here at noon. The governor's message was delivered after the senate and assembly had organized. Both houses will adjourn until Monday night in order to give the speaker of the assembly time in which to prepare his standing committees. The new speaker chosen is William Sulzer, of New York, who was named for the place by the Democratic caucus. Mr. Sulzer is next to the youngest assemblyman ever elected, ex-Senator Edmund L. Pitts being the youngest man who ever held that position. The other officers of the assembly are Charles H. De Freest, clerk; Michael B. Redmond, sergeant-at-arms; Edward A. Moore, doorkeeper; Anthony J. Walkewiak, first assistant doorkeeper; William C. Filkins, second assistant doorkeeper, and Thomas J. Hassett, of Steuben, stenographer.

Many to Lead Republicans.

The Republican assembly caucus to nominate a Republican candidate for speaker, and thus to designate the leader of the minority during the session of 1893, resulted in the selection of Assemblyman Malby, of St. Lawrence, who defeated Hamilton Fish, Jr., by a vote of 28 to 23.

Reuben L. Fox, of Oneonta, was nominated for clerk; J. H. Manville, of Whitehall, for sergeant-at-arms; Albert Needick, of Ithaca, for doorkeeper, and William Loeb, of Albany, for stenographer.

Democratic senators discussed in caucus the constitutional convention bill passed last year. It was decided to postpone the convention until the second Tuesday of May, 1894, and to elect the delegates at the next November election in such a way as to give the Prohibitionist and Labor parties representation.

The Fight for Senator.

The all absorbing topic is the contest for United States senator. Judge Griffith and other friends of Edward Murphy, Jr., from Troy, have opened Rooms 37, 38 and 39 in the Delevan House as the headquarters in which the senatorship canvass in behalf of Mr. Murphy will be carried on. Edward J. Perkins, secretary of the Democratic general committee of Montgomery county, has assisted with resolutions indorsing Murphy, which, he said, were adopted at a meeting of the Democratic general committee of Montgomery.

Richard Croker, of Tammany Hall; Senator Hill, Edward Murphy, Jr., and Lieutenant Governor Sheehan held a conference here, and then all but Mr. Hill called on Governor Flower. Mr. Hill has gone to Washington, but will return here to attend the reception to be given at the executive mansion by Governor Flower next Monday night to the Democratic state electors, members of the legislature and state officers.

The Kings county members of the legislature refuse to commit themselves on the United States senatorship.

Unless all signs in the political sky fail, Edward Murphy, Jr., will succeed Frank Hiscock in the senate of the United States. No name but his is even seriously hinted at. The opposition of Cleveland has simply crystallized all factions and made them practically unanimous. It is stated here that there is a universal feeling that Mr. Cleveland must be taught that, although he is president-elect, he is not the boss of the Empire state, and in giving that lesson Messrs. Hill, Croker, McLaughlin and Sheehan will make it as direct, forceful and as comprehensive as possible. They are determined that the Trojan shall not be sacrificed for the "personal comfort" of Mr. Cleveland.

The governor received the public at the executive chamber between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock. A long reception line, eighteen feet long, representing the ship of state, was placed upon the governor's desk. From the mainmast floated two streamers, one bearing the words, "I don't care a——for votes," and the other the words, "No debt. No cholera." It was a gift from James Oliver, of New York city, and pleased the governor very much.

The Extra Session Question.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—A secret conference between the president-elect and Speaker Crisp was expected to result in some authorized announcement on the subject of an extra session. While these anticipations have not been realized, a statement on good authority is being passed around among the Democratic leaders. This is to the effect that while no final decision will be made on the question of an extra session of congress until February, by which time the cabinet of President-elect Cleveland will probably have been selected, the probabilities are decidedly against an extra session before next autumn. Mr. Cleveland, it is stated, has said to Democratic leaders in congress that he will call congress together in special session.

He also told them that it would not be convoked before autumn unless the financial situation and the condition of the treasury made it absolutely imperative that congress should meet in the spring to provide the government with the necessary amount of revenue to meet its expenses. He wished to avoid the necessity of an early extraordinary session.

Very soon after the holiday recess the subcommittee of the house committee on ways and means appointed to investigate the condition of the treasury will begin its work. If its report declares that there will be an actual deficit in the treasury unless additional revenue is raised, Mr. Cleveland may call an extra session in the spring.

Senatorial Caucus at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 3.—At the Republican senatorial caucus a resolution was adopted providing for the holding of a joint caucus of the Republican members of both houses on Jan. 17 to consider the nomination for United States senator to succeed M. S. Quay. The caucus elected the following officers: President pro tem., J. H. S. Goble, of Lebanon; chief clerk, F. W. Smiley, of Venango; journal clerk, James L. Brown, of Philadelphia; reading clerk, J. M. Corson, of Bucks; messenger clerk, W. C. Rogers, of Jefferson; assistant clerks, Henry B. Thorpe, of Bucks, and D. C. Eastman, of Somerset; sergeant-at-arms, Colonel James McK. Hobb, of Allegheny; sergeant-at-arms, John H. Hyers. As the senate is Republican they will be elected. The Democratic caucus of the lower house nominated Walter E. Ritter, of Lycoming, for speaker, and R. R. Kearns, of Pittsburg, for clerk.

The caucus of Republican members of the house selected C. C. Thompson, of Warren, for speaker, and Charles E. Voorhees, of Philadelphia, for chief clerk.

The Connecticut Legislature.

HARTFORD, Jan. 3.—The Connecticut legislature, which convened Jan. 7, 1891, and has continued by sessions through two years, has just expired by limitation. The new legislature will convene Wednesday. The Republicans will control the house by fifteen plurality. The senate is a tie, and the retiring secretary of state, a Republican, will have the casting vote in the organization, but after this election of the Democratic state officers Lieutenant Governor Coly will become presiding officer. The Republicans will elect a Republican United States senator on the 17th inst. General Hawley's friends are confident of his re-election.

Populists Claim Control.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 3.—Political interest in Kansas is now centered in the organization of the legislature, for on it depends the election of a United States senator. The Populists have a close majority of 10 in the senate, but on the face of the returns the Republicans have 63 of the 125 members of the house certain and probably 64. Notwithstanding this fact, Populist leaders claim that the house will be under their control.

Republicans Vote for a Populist.

HELENA, Mont., Jan. 3.—The house attempted to organize here. A motion was carried by the Republicans, aided by two Populists, to proceed to the election of temporary chairman. The Democrats objected and left their seats. The remaining twenty-five Republicans and two Populists proceeded to ballot, casting all votes for Chowen, the Populist, amid great cheering by the Republicans. They then adjourned.

White Will Succeed Felton.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 3.—A sensation was caused by the withdrawal of W. W. Foote, Democrat, from the senatorial contest. He said his chief supporters declare in favor of Stephen M. White, the only other Democrat in the field. This practically insures the election of White to succeed Charles N. Felton, Republican. The balloting for senator will begin in a week.

Cleveland Not a Spectator.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—President-elect Cleveland passed New Year's day very quietly in his home. I have not time and do not intend to go into railway speculation."

SHOOTING AT ST. LOUIS

William Barrett Wounded by Ex-Minister Morgan's Son.

DEATH AND DIVORCE MAY FOLLOW.

The Sensational Affray Was the Outcome of a Society Scandal in Which Buttery Magnate Edgerton's Daughter Figures—Many St. Louis Society Men Are Accused.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 3.—Harry H. Morgan was arrested charged with abandoning his wife. Morgan is a son of Philip H. Morgan, of New York, who was United States minister to Mexico under Garfield. The row at that time was secretary of legation, and when he returned from Mexico he settled in this city. He became engaged to Miss Mollie P. Edgerton, a daughter of Colonel W. P. Edgerton, now a resident of Kansas City and a railway magnate. Colonel Edgerton objected to the match and an elopement was the result. The young people were happy at first, but were finally estranged. The wife charged her husband with cruelty, and he accused her of receiving visits from other men. Finally they separated.

Kidnaped by Her Father.

Four children had been born to them, all but one of whom died. The survivor, a little girl named Gladys, was kidnaped by her father and taken, as he told the mother, to Paris. Her legal advisor told her she could not get the child back from a foreign country, and she had consulted to accept the situation as best she could when she learned that Gladys was in the possession of Morgan's relatives in New York. Then she acted. The arrest of Morgan was the first step, and now she will bring suit for divorce and for possession of her child.

The husband in return threatens to bring a counter suit. He says he will name over five of the leading society men of St. Louis as co-respondents in the case. The wife defies him to prove his charges.

Shot Through the Heart.

William Barrett, husband of Mrs. Morgan's sister, met Morgan on Easton avenue after the arrest. There were words, but no blows. Morgan drew a pistol and fired. Barrett fell wounded. He will die. A moment more and the police had Morgan under arrest. He is now in the city prison.

TYPHUS FEVER SPREADS

The Scourge's Alarming Progress in New York.

OVER SIXTY CASES NOW IN SIGHT.

Nearly All of Those Developed in One Week in a Bayard Street Lodging House—One Patient in a Children's Home and on the Street.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—In spite of all the protestations of the sanitary authorities, there is no doubt that typhus is spreading with appalling rapidity. Up to Sunday night no less than forty well developed cases and three suspected cases of the disease had been observed within four days. Since then the three suspects have been taken to the pesthouse on North Brother island, and in addition ten fresh cases have been reported. Even this does not express the worst, for there were well defined rumors that a number of additional victims had been removed from the lodging houses in the vicinity of Chatham square whose names will go to swell the official list of sufferers. In all fifty-three cases have been reported since the first outbreak of the contagion.

One Victim in a Hebrew Home.

The three suspected cases who were taken from 34 Bayard street on Saturday to the Reception hospital and transferred from there to North Brother island were those of J. Entwistle, aged fifty-seven years; Patrick Haffry, aged twenty-six years, and Michael Dean, aged forty-three years.

The case that gave the most cause for alarm was that of Henry Nastasky, a lad of eleven years, who walked into the Reception hospital and was instantly pronounced to be in the incipient stage of typhus. He said that he had been in the Hebrew Children's home at 95 East Broadway up to two days previous, since which time he had been wandering about the streets. His was the only case reported during the day that was not directly traceable to the Bayard street lodging house.

Only two deaths among the patients at North Brother island have been reported so far. They were those of Johannes Feldstein, aged sixty-eight years, who was removed from 78 Division street on Thursday and who died yesterday morning, and Louis Gantlick, who was taken from the Bayard street house on Saturday.

Immigrants Brought the Scourge.

There are fifty-nine lodgers under quarantine at 34 Bayard street. When one develops typhus he is at once removed.

Typhus was brought over last year on the Massilia, which arrived at this port on Feb. 11 with a steerage full of Russian Hebrews. Of 218 cases in all thirty-nine were fatal. The early symptoms of the plague are headache and slight fever, these being succeeded by eruptions and excessive fevers.

Connecticut Labor Statistics.

HARTFORD, Jan. 3.—The manufacturing statistics in the report of the Connecticut bureau of labor statistics for 1891 represent forty lines of industry, having an invested capital of $134,682,000, producing goods valued at $159,888,000 and affording employment in productive labor to 92,850 people, to whom $60,506,000 was paid in wages during the year. This is 27.05 per cent. of the cost of the goods manufactured, and the value of stock and material was 60.27 per cent. of the cost. On the output there was a net profit of $13,716,000, which is 10.18 per cent. on the capital employed.

Parnellites Attack Their Enemies.

DUBLIN, Jan. 3.—A party of Parnellites at Kilrush, who were celebrating the new year, filled themselves with Irish whisky and determined to wreak vengeance on the anti-Parnellites. They wrecked the Workingmen's club, Temperance hall and the residence of the town commissioners, who are supporters of Mr. Timothy Healy. The police were not visible.

M'GLYNN'S LETTER SUPPRESSED.

When the Pope Learned This He Forgave the Priest.

NEW YORK, Jan. 3.—The Herald says: Rev. Dr. Edward F. McGlynn has been welcomed back into the fold of the Catholic church simply because the pope considered that injustice was done him when he was excommunicated. Archbishop Corrigan's charges against Dr. McGlynn, disobedience and preaching false doctrines, have not been acted upon at all by Mgr. Satolli in restoring Dr. McGlynn to his full powers as a priest. These charges still hang over the head of Dr. McGlynn, but it is extremely doubtful if they will ever be pushed. The case will probably never be reopened.

Dr. McGlynn was excommunicated for "contumacy" in not having gone to Rome when summoned by the pope to answer the charges made against him by Archbishop Corrigan.

He was excommunicated because a letter which he dispatched to the pope, after receiving the subpœna from him ordering him to Rome within forty days, was suppressed before it reached its destination by a church dignitary to whom it had been given for transmission.

Had this letter reached the pope, as it said, Dr. McGlynn would not have been excommunicated. The doctor did not know that his letter had miscarried and was surprised to find himself excommunicated.

Among the speakers were Mayor William Waddle Hyde, Charles Dudley Warner, the Hon. Henry C. Robinson and Judge Nathaniel Shipman. The principal subscribers were the late Junius S. Morgan, of London, who contributed $100,000; his son, J. Pierpont Morgan, of New York, $50,000; Mrs. Lucy Morgan Goodwin and J. J. and F. Goodwin, of this city, $50,000. There were thirty-one subscriptions of from $1,000 to $4,000 each.

THE BIG RAILROAD FEUD OVER.

New Reading and Pennsylvania Fall Out and Made Up.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—The feud over coal tolls existing between the Pennsylvania and Reading roads has been settled at a meeting held by officers of the two companies.

A prominent railroad official says: "The time and cause of the partial estrangement of the two great railroads date to a meeting of the traffic agents of the coal carrying roads held in New York Aug. 31 last, when a proposition was presented to advance tolls on anthracite coal, which proposition the Pennsylvanians refused to countenance. The proposed increase amounted to twenty-five cents per ton on all shipments of anthracite to Buffalo and all other points in New York state, the roads west of Buffalo making a corresponding advance on shipments to Chicago. This increase went into effect Sept. 15 and was joined by all the lines interested except the Pennsylvania.

"Further than this, the Pennsylvania road declined to make an advance in the rate, then under consideration, upon shipments to Philadelphia and maintained its position despite several unpleasant obstacles. The recent arrangement restores the joint tariffs to the rates prior to September last, at which time the joint rates were withdrawn by the Reading railroad. The settled feud is ended, and we return to the old rates which the Pennsylvania railroad refused to alter in the logical result."

CARING FOR APPAREL

A WOMAN TELLS HOW SHE KEEPS HER GARMENTS FRESH.

This Fair Creature Says That It Is the Abuse, Not the Use, of Clothes That Makes Them Look Shabby—A Scheme That Demands Constant Care.

"There is no special secret," remarked the well dressed woman, softly moralizing a bit of tulle across her knees, "I have simply learned the art of taking care of my clothes, and estimate that I save hundreds of dollars thereby every year."

"The precise knowledge we are seeking" exclaimed the hostess. "And now do, like a sweet soul, tell us all about it."

"Why, a friend of mine, a Parisienne, taught me years ago in France," replied the woman in the good gown. "She showed me a thousand and one devices for preserving the freshness of my things, and now, whenever I am complimented upon looking particularly smart, I always waft her a silent blessing across the seas."

"Go on," urged the gossip encouragingly as a second round of tea was poured.

"Well, in the first place she broke me of that ugly, extravagant habit women have of flinging clothes about on chairs and beds and leaving them there to get crumpled and stringy. The instant I take a heavy dress off I shake the skirt lightly, pass a brush through its silk ruffles, and remove every particle of dust from both material and trimmings. It is then slipped over a wire sack to prevent limpness in hanging, a big violet satchet is suspended inside, and the whole enveloped in a long, loose, white cotton bag, that draws up with strings and keeps it clean, crisp and perfumed for future use.

"The waists of my frocks," continued the thrifty narrator, "are never hung under any circumstances. I have roomy pasteboard boxes for every one of them, lined with cotton batting that has been liberally sprinkled with sachet powder and finished in pink or blue muslin. A slip pasted on the end shows me which bodice is in the box, and consequently there is never the least confusion. After brushing a waist I lay it at full length, pull out its bows, pass the lace through my fingers, and smooth every inch of ribbon. Next I proceed to stuff the sleeves and shoulders with tissue paper, crushed lightly and thrust in to hold the garment in shape. Unless you have tried this scheme you have no idea how it preserves the fine lines and freshness of bosque or jacket. Another important rule I observe is never to put a bodice away with a tarnished neck ruche or stained shields. One is always less hurried when disrobing than dressing, and it is impossible to infuse clothing with that delicious odor of fragrance every woman corets unless she is fastidiously dainty in these details. After every two or three evenings I wash my shields in warm water, sloaded with ammonia, dry them in the sun, and they last for years.

"I appreciate how much trouble it demands," smiled the well dressed woman, "but it is all done in those odd minutes that would otherwise be idle. If you once acquire the habit of caring for your clothes such attention becomes second nature. For example, I never take off a pair of boots without immediately boring or buttoning them on their trees and rubbing them thoroughly with a soft flannel cloth. ing gloves to protect the toes of my patent leathers. By cutting off the fingers and slipping the cuticle up over the foot of the shoes they are protected from sudden changes of temperature and dust, both of which cause them to crack badly. French chalk rubbed on tan, and as soon as they are creased turn on a waterfall that frightens a man half out of his wits—at least for a time. But just here we wish to whisper a word of warning to those ever-sweet, ever-like babies, think they will be given the more if they only cry for it. Men are weaklings, and are likewise keen to perceive when they are being "worked," to use a little slang that is so apropos we know it will be pardoned.

"If tears are ever ready to start, they will have no more effect on the hard hearted tyrant than the water on the proverbial duck's back. If you are sure you look pretty when you cry, go ahead and cry, but it has been our experience that the "violet eyes suffused in dew" are frauds of the novel writer's conception, Swollen lids and red noses are more truthful, though less sentimental, and unless the shower comes actually from the heart we would advise keeping the tears well in check, for crocodile ones are of no avail, and continuous rainstorms, as we know, do not tend to freshen up the leaves, but stick only unsightly mud to the ground.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Waste in the Kitchen.

The ignorance of our people as regards the economy of the kitchen has frequently been commented upon by foreign observers. The charges of waste and extravagance cannot be denied. With inexhaustible and varied resources in the way of food products, excellent and cheap, but few know how to extract from this profusion the best results. This comes from a lack of knowledge or of interest in a subject which should command the closest attention. There is not a household in the land where at least one-third of the expenses of living might not be saved by an intelligent supervision of the kitchen by the woman of the house. We allude now solely to people of moderate means, to whom economy is a matter of moment.

How few of our women in this class know how to prepare from simple materials an appetizing and delicate soup! As an invalid nourishment, on a certain occasion the cook of the writer was removing the grease from the jelly of soup stock. A young butcher who had recently married came into the kitchen for coffee. He watched the cook's movements, and at the close he asked what she did with the jelly. She replied that she made it into soup. "Why," he said, "my wife throws that away and makes soup of the grease."—New York Sun.

A Tribute to Woman's Carefulness.

"If there is one thing we dread," said a salesman in a large establishment devoted exclusively to men's and boys' wearing apparel, "it is a woman who comes in to choose a suit or overcoat for her husband. Of course the husband is along, but he hasn't a word to say. She selects every thing, and while trifles there that would utterly escape his eye. She sees a little spot on a button, she notices that the slip at the back is not exactly straight, and that some perhaps guy a little too widely. When the tailor comes to make the needed alterations she bosses the job as she would with a dollar a day dressmaker, until the wonder is he doesn't throw the chalk in her face and leave her to fix it herself. Excuse me; when I see a woman coming I mentally manage to be very busy elsewhere."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Woman's Tears.

All men hate to see a woman cry, and in most cases give in to anything she wants as soon as they see the first tear start. Women know this weakness in the opposite sex, and some of them use it to their advantage. They have their tears on tap, and as soon as they are crossed turn on a waterfall that frightens a man half out of his wits—at least for a time. But just here we wish to whisper a word of warning to those ever-sweet, ever-like babies, think they will be given the more if they only cry for it. Men are weaklings, and are likewise keen to perceive when they are being "worked," to use a little slang that is so apropos we know it will be pardoned.

Why She Does Not Call.

"There are certain families," said a woman of fastidious tastes, "of whom I am very fond, but I rarely go to their houses for reasons which may seem rather strange to other mothers, but which nevertheless are good and sufficient. I couldn't begin to tell you the number of dresses and wraps that have been ruined by the injudicious application of bread and butter and jam. There are a number of places where I used frequently to visit, where the children are permitted to eat at all hours of the day, and where the darlings think that the reception room is the nicest place in the world in which to enjoy their between time lunches.

"I spoiled two dresses in one season on this account. Now while I might not mention it to another living soul, when children of the families I've had to do

Miniature Fountain of Fire.

A burning candle, a common clay pipe and some pieces of tinfoil comprise the necessary toolsfor executing and producing a brilliant scene of fire without the slightest danger. The tinfoil must be cut in strips about one-half inch wide, and these are laid opposite the light. The metal be comes inflamed and falls in the shape of incandescent globules on the table, rebounding and doing no sort of damage to the combustible above. Sometimes these globules divide and form a series of others, which dance over the table, as shown in the accompanying sketch. With a good strong light and plenty of tinfoil a perfect fountain of burning, disseminating globules can be made.

The experiment is without the slightest danger. The globules, covered by the oxide which is formed during the process of combustion, leave but a little white trace, which is promptly rubbed off the oilcloth covering the table.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Picking Out a Profession.

Let a boy decide upon his profession at fifteen, and though he may not immediately enter it he saves for preparation all the time his companion loses by putting off his choice until he is of age. And this early time is most valuable time, for it represents the distinctively acquisitive period of life—the period when the mind receives impressions most easily and retains them most tenaciously. The technique of any trade or business or profession is readily acquired by a youthful mind. Later on it seems to be grasped slowly and with difficulty. My advice to boys is that they anticipate their life work as much as possible. Get into the spirit and atmosphere of it, take the preliminary steps—in a word be full of enthusiasm.—Harper's Young People.

Kindness to a Blind Fish.

An unusual incident is that related by a naturalist who took great interest in the nesting of fish in the neighborhood about Bayreuth. He used to feed them out of a long handled spoon. The trout soon learned to look for him at a certain time, and eagerly waited for the appearance of the spoon. One poor fish, the naturalist noted, was for a long time always pushed aside and seemed always to take the least. It was blind. But after awhile a companion took pity on it, and thereafter led it up to the spoon and saw that it obtained its share of the food.

Fishes are called cold blooded animals, but this seems to indicate that they are capable of more intelligence and feeling than is usually credited to them.—Animal World.

How Children at Play Polish a Statue.

The statue of George Washington in front of the subtreasury has a queer appearance. From the knees down it is brightly polished, while above it looks rusty and neglected. The cause of this difference may be discovered after a balmy hours, when the janitors' children take possession of Wall street. In their games of tag and hide-and-seek, they rub up against the knees, shins and feet of the father of their country, and the glass is the result. Perhaps when they grow taller more of the statue will be thus polished.—New York Sun.

A Boy Who Followed a Suggestion.

A physician once twitted a youngster at the time of the arrival of a new member of the family by saying, "I suppose your nose is out of joint, and I suppose you will put your little brother in the ash barrel." Next morning the parents of the young hopeful heard him puffing and struggling on the stairs, and on looking out they saw him trying to carry the baby toward the yard. "Here, you little scamp!" called the father, "what are you up to?" "Doh to put little brudder in ash barrel," was the reply.—New York Recorder.

Johnny's Golden Dream.

Little Johnny wasn't lazy, but he did hate to get up in the morning. His mother was constantly scolding him. One day Johnny came very late and his mother said to him, "Johnny, why did you not rise earlier this morning?" Johnny looked her squarely, but he was equal to the occasion. "Mother," said the rogue, "I dreamed that I found $500, and me and Charley Smith were having such fun spending it that I was afraid to wake up until I had got rid of all the money."—Boston Herald.

Was Not Amused.

They tried to please the baby;
All sorts of tricks they used;
But, stranger to say, he didn't coax
To be at all amused.

An Iceland Baby's Lamb.

In Iceland, that country of gnats and old fashioned customs, it has always been the fashion to present to the baby when its first tooth appeared a lamb, to be its very own, cared for and tended as no other pet could be, and never to be parted with.—London Tit-Bits.

Too Much.

"James, have I ever failed in my duty as a father?" said the gray haired man, with an anxious look on his face.

"No, father," answered the young man, "I have supplied all your needs, always helped you to your studies, got you out of scrapes and taken an interest even in your amusements, have I not?"

"Why, yes. Certainly."

"I don't claim that I've done any more than my duty, but I have no done any less than my duty, have I, my son?"

"No."

"No, I don't think I have. And if I should ask you to make a slight sacrifice for the good of the family, you would assume of having any selfish motive, or of wishing to do anything contrary to your best interests, would you not?"

"Why—certainly not," said the youth, somewhat mystified, "but what does all this?"

"I am not given to anticipating trouble," the old man went on, with the sadness look deepening on his face. "I am no calamity howler, and I try to look at the bright side of things, but I see no way out of the difficulties that beset me now—unless unless"—

"Unless what?"

"Unless you help me out, my boy! In the financial speculation in which I am now engaged I am standing every nerve, supplying every item of my capital, and even pushing my credit to its utmost limit. I should not have the stock if I called upon to invest a large sum in extensive building operations. It may be a sacrifice for you, James."

"But what can I do?" exclaimed the bewildered young man. "How can I help you out of the—"

"How can you help me out? Listen, my boy! This house has sheltered us from your earliest recollection. It has been a good home for us all. It has been supply large for all the purposes of home—until lately. But the time has come when one of two things must be done: Either I must build a larger house—"

"Or what? Speak, father!"

"Or you must give up your amateur bicycle racing! The house won't hold any more of your prizes."—Chicago Tribune.

They Were.

"These folks think they're pretty aware," said the burglar to himself, flashing from its concealment under the edge of the parlor carpet, back of the piano, a well stuffed pocketbook and slipping it into an open-ing in his coat.

"And they are!" he ejaculated in deep disgust as he opened it a few hours later and found it to contain a check made on the sin of stealing.—Chicago Tribune.

CRESCENTS DROP A GAME.

This Time to the Abeyonne of Elizabeth.

The Crescent League bowling team visited Elizabeth last evening and bowled a Journal league game with the team of that place.

The objectionable feature of "rooting" has been eliminated by the new rule adopted at the last meeting, and the games are now devoid of so much yelling, which has characterized previous ones.

Van Emburgh kept up his usual high standard by bowling 171, but Van Winkle was way below his average and only bowled 125. Potts of the Abeyonne bowled a great game and rolled up the magnificent score of 208.

The Abeyonne took the lead at the start and held it to the end. The nearest the Crescent League got to the victors, was in the fifth frame, when there were only two pins difference. The score:

UNION COUNTY COURT.

THE JANUARY TERM OPENED YESTERDAY MORNING.

Senator Marsh Sworn in as Prosecutor—County Clerk Gerber Administers the Oath for the First Time to Grand Jurors.

The January term of the Union county court opened yesterday at Elizabeth. There was a large attendance of members of the bar.

Senator Fred C. Marsh was sworn in as the prosecutor for the term. The grand jurors entered court at 10.30, headed by Sheriff Hicks.

They were the first grand jurors to whom the oath was administered by County Clerk Gerber. They are as follows:

Foreman—Charles Ross, Elizabeth.
Elizabeth—John Voorhees, Michael Byrnes, George A Squire, Henry Claus, Charles E. Richards, Franklin M. Brown, Frederick L. Hedstritter, Walter Frohwerk, James D. Matheson, John Carroll, Wickliffe Sayre.
Plainfield—Sidney E. Flower, Solomon F. Dunn, William Kirk.
Rahway—Silas Leonard, Moses H. Acken, Andrew Halliday.
Union—Leonard R. Pearse.
Westfield—Augustus K. Gale.
Summit—J. F. Chamberlain.
Cranford—Henry L. Freeman.
Linwood—Jos. A. Patterson.
Springfield—Nicholas C. Dox.

Judge Van Syckel said there was no special matter for the court to charge the jurors, and they could immediately enter upon their deliberations.

The grand jurors selected as their attending constables Amos Mollett, of Plainfield, and Isaac Dunn, of Rahway. The jurors then retired.

The term promises to be one of much interest, as there are notable cases on both the civil and criminal calendars to be tried.

There was one member of the bar whose absence was lamentably noticeable, and that was the late ex-Chancellor Williamson.

Just prior to the adjournment of the circuit court, Judge Alward of the committee of the Bar Association presented resolutions adopted in memory of the late ex-Chancellor Williamson.

The committee appointed to take suitable action on the death of the ex-Chancellor, included Mr. Nelson Runyon of this city.

In memory of the late ex-Chancellor the court adjourned.

NO MONEY YET.

Members of the Iron Hall are Getting Anxious.

The members of the Order of Iron Hall, which was recently placed in the hands of a receiver, are beginning to think it is time they received some money. When the receiver was appointed three months ago, there were $8,000,000 available. Of this sum $700,000 were held by the national officers of the concern at the head quarters in Indianapolis, while the remaining was in the reserve funds of the various subordinate branches throughout the country.

Nothing of importance is known in this city of the course the proceedings are taking, or in fact, what position the matter stands. A receiver is a sort of autocrat, and being responsible to no one but the court, he does not, as a general thing, make public what he is doing or what steps he is taking to settle the matters in his charge.

KILBRIDE VS. GUINEE.

One Hackman Suing the Other for $5,000 Damages.

Some time ago Hackmen Kilbride and Guinee were arrested at the North avenue depot.

Mr. Craig A. Marsh is counsel for the plaintiff, and Mr. Lindabury for the defendant.

Drs. Davis and Simpson, ex-City Judge Codington, Chief of Police Grant and Policemen Lynch and Kiely were subpœnaed as witnesses, and they left town for Elizabeth this morning.

Screw Ferryboats for the New Jersey Central.

The New Jersey Central Railroad Company is building two force-and-air screw ferryboats at Wilmington, which are to begin running on Feb. 15 on the new route from the New Jersey Central station to the foot of Whitehall street, New York. The new boats are to be faster than any now in use by the company, and it is expected to make the trip to the Whitehall street slip in the same time that is taken for the trip to Liberty street. The new boats will be run chiefly in connection with the Royal Blue trains, in order to land passengers at a point in this city where all the raised roads may be reached at the South Ferry station. The new boats, which will be named the Easton and Munch Chunk, will each be 238 feet long, 62 feet beam, 24 feet over guards, and 14.4 feet hold.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If you want to get a reputation as a fine converser, let people whom you meet talk all the time about themselves and their affairs without your putting in a word.

A company has been organized to force salt water by pressure into New York city, so that it may be used in cases of fire or for running elevators and small machines by hydraulic pressure. It would be a good thing, too, to have it where it can flush the streets of the big city and make them clean and wholesome. There might be salt water bathing houses established also.

Brave and faithful Mme. de Lesseps, watching by the bedside of the delirious old count, must win the admiration of the world. She says: "I am somewhat of a fatalist, like my husband. In the most difficult moments of his life he has always believed in success and happiness and allowed events to take their course. I practice his philosophy. I believe this prosecution was inevitable and am not afraid of it."

A committee of the New York legislature is going to find out whether taxes in New York oppress either capital or labor, and, if so, how. A joint committee of members of both houses is holding testimony and gathering facts in all directions to ascertain how the taxation, assessment and interest laws affect the industries of the state—commercial, agricultural and manufacturing—as well as the condition of the wage worker. Another thing they are to ascertain is whether capital is being driven from the state by restrictions affecting corporations. The committeemen are further empowered to introduce, as the result of their deliberations, any bill into the New York legislature which in their judgment will either increase the indirect revenues of the state or equalize the burdens of taxation.

Poetry from Texas.

We have always admired the great state of Texas. No words can express the enthusiasm with which in our mind's eye we view its great plantations, which can grow cotton enough every year to supply the world; its great plains, which can grow beef enough to almost supply the world too. Most of all we admire the lively, free and independent genius that takes its rise beneath the flag of the Lone Star. We expect the artists, millionaires, inventors and statesmen of the future to hail from this state.

Texas is the native home of ideas. That we knew. We look to see her supply us in the future much of the world's literature as well as the world's cotton. We have felt certain that Texas had a fair fighting chance even to spring upon us the longed for poet of the future. But some lines we have lately read from the Texas White Ribbon inclines us to think that the poet of the future is already here. Such wisdom, as well as poetry, we have not met with in a long time as is contained in the following lines. They are also full of a fine common sense exceedingly rare in the work of the most famous poet:

When you've got a thing to say,
Say it! Don't take half a day.
When you for sale's got little to it,
Cross the whole thing in a minute!
Life is short—a fleeting vapor—
Don't you fill an eight page paper
With a tale which, at a pinch,
Could be covered in an inch!
Boil her down until she simmers;
Polish her until she glimmers.
When you've got a thing to say,
Say it! Don't take half a day.

A Hausfrau Verein.

The women of Austria, at least in Vienna, are in advance of those of America in one respect. Twenty years ago a number of ladies determined to settle once for all two evils that were seriously affecting a matter dear to the German woman's heart—her housekeeping. One was the prevailing high price and poor quality of food, clothing and furniture; the other the poor quality of household service.—It is always a few enthusiasts who carry on every good enterprise, and a few of those among the ladies interested undertook to settle both questions.

They formed at once the Hausfrau verein, or housekeepers' union. They established their own co-operative store and it has been in operation ever since. At this store are kept for sale not only groceries, but house furnishing goods of the best quality at a reasonable price What so many hundreds of both men and women in America have failed to do this German housekeepers' union has done with shining success—maintained a profitable co-operative store. Everything sold there is of the best quality, weight and measure guaranteed, and at a moderate price. The union also keeps for use and reference a list of reliable shops where goods not on sale at its own store can be bought on favorable terms.

Another admirable achievement is to be placed to their credit. They have reformed the domestic service of Vienna by maintaining a cooking and household training school and an intelligence office. Some 3,000 housekeepers belong to the union. A servant going from one to another must have her last mistress' recommendation. A diploma from the Hausfrau verein cooking and household training school insures both good help to a mistress and a sure situation at any time to its possessor. Here is an excellent suggestion for American ladies in our towns and cities.

LAMONT NAILS ONE LIE.

He Says Cleveland Is Not Dictating Senatorships.

NO FAVORITE EVEN IN NEW YORK.

The President-elect Is Not Favoring Any One In New Jersey or Any Other State, but He Will Remember the Men Who Aided Him.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Colonel Daniel S. Lamont authoritatively denies that Mr. Cleveland is dictating the selection of Democratic senators in various states, "but says that it is true that the president-elect will not forget the men who favored his nomination. "This dictation falsehood," said Colonel Lamont, was started with malice. It has been taken up by opposition newspapers and has traveled all over the country. I state authoritatively that Mr. Cleveland has not dictated, interfered or even suggested the election of any one in the states in which there are Democratic legislatures and where contests are being made.

"I may say that in many of the states Mr. Cleveland does not know who are candidates for the senate except through general report. In New York of course Mr. Cleveland has stated his objections to Mr. Murphy, as he had a perfect right to do, but he has not gone beyond his own state."

"It has been specifically charged that Mr. Cleveland was trying to name the senator in New Jersey.

"That statement is absolutely false as to New Jersey or any other state. Mr. Cleveland has no candidate for senator even in his own state."

Lament for Postmaster General.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Daniel T. Lamont is to be the next postmaster general of the United States. It is said there is high authority for saying this first appointment has been decided upon by President-elect Cleveland within the past forty-eight hours. Mr. Lamont has been mentioned for secretary of the navy. He is reported to have said to Mr. Cleveland that if it was really the purpose to honor him by a cabinet office, there was only one that he really hankered for. It was that of postmaster general. Mr. Lamont has been a successful newspaper man, a successful private secretary, and he was ambitious to put his executive abilities to the supreme test of the postoffice department. Mr. Cleveland, it is understood, has promised him the opportunity.

Mr. Lamont is now general manager of the allied street railway lines of New York. The office was given him through the influence of Mr. Whitney, and he receives, it is said, $15,000 a year—about twice the salary of postmaster general.

Mr. Cleveland is said to be earnestly considering the name of ex-Senator James B. Eustis, of Louisiana, for secretary of state. Mr. Eustis is not very well known as a national politician, but he is a man of a great deal more than average ability. He is a man of wealth and would be able to entertain handsomely, which is always expected of the secretary of state.

A Breezy Session at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 4.—The opening session of the house here was quite a breezy one. The returns of election of members of the house, as certified by the secretary of the commonwealth, were presented by Mr. Harrity and others. When Crawford county was reached Chief Clerk Charles E. Voorhees substituted for the returns certifying the election of Wilbur P. Higby, Democrat, the document signed on Saturday last to William H. Andrews, Republican, by Judge Henderson, before whom Andrews had raised the question of the legality of Higby's election. The Democrats, led by Messrs. Fow, Wherry and Ritter, made an ineffectual attempt to check this action. They objected again, when the reading of the roll of members present reached Andrews' name, but Voorhees downed them with his resounding gavel, although it was necessary to threaten Mr. Fow with the sergeant-at-arms before he would take his seat. Mr. Fow denounced the proceeding as an unheard of outrage. Chief Clerk announced that the returns of the election officers were superseded by the decision of the Crawford county court.

Higby and Andrews Both Sworn.

After the members had been sworn in and Caleb C. Thompson, of Warren county, had been elected speaker over Walter E. Ritter, of Lycoming, the Democratic nominee, it was discovered that both Andrews and Higby had taken the oath. Higby arrived first and took possession of the seat assigned to the Crawford county member. Andrews will probably slip into the seat the first time Higby vacates it, and thus the war promises to go merrily on.

Besides Voorhees for chief clerk the other officers are: A. D. Fetterolf, of Montgomery, resident clerk; Fred W. Fleets, of Lackawanna, journal clerk; Jere B. Rex, of Huntingdon, reading clerk; Robert S. Conklin, of Lancaster, message clerk; George R. Hooper, of Chester, sergeant-at-arms; Edward Hildbrand, of Philadelphia, postmaster; Frank Van Dusen, of Tioga, doorkeeper.

Governor Pattison's Message.

The message of Governor Pattison is practically a review of the operations of the state government for two years past and touches upon some three score subjects of public interest and of state concern. The state has been bountifully blessed except by the calamities by flood and fire at Titusville and Oil City and the spirit of insurrection at Homestead, where, he says, "under the plea of correcting abuses civil authority was suspended and the officers of the law were defied. To restore and maintain order the whole military force of the state was moved. Our cost in this trouble will not be considered if it be followed by greater love of liberty, obedience to law and respect of the public authorities."

The state's receipts for 1892, including the balance on hand, were $17,726,618; the expenses $15,737,976.61, leaving a balance in the treasury of $1,000,644.95. The expenses of the national guard, including $75,223.46 expended in the suppression of the disturbances at Homestead, was $538,030.14. The total public debt of the state on Dec. 1, 1892, was $8,594,462.25, showing a reduction of $1,417,76.

The governor believes personal property should pay more taxes and urges that a revenue law be framed by which the entire cost of the state government should be paid by the taxation upon corporations and collateral inheritances, and the receipts from taxes upon other forms of personal property be bestowed upon the several counties to relieve the real estate therein.

He recommends that the office of mercantile appraiser be wholly abolished and that all officers be paid by salaries and not by fees. He pronounces the Reading railroad combine "an especially flagrant illustration of the manner in which the constitution is defied" and urges remedial legislation. He denounces the senate's action that it had no jurisdiction in the Buckley case. The Baker ballot law is commended as satisfactory upon the whole, and the governor points out the constitutional and political reasons for the early representative, senatorial and congressional apportionment.

The long delay in making a reapportionment of the senatorial districts of the state is emphatically denounced.

The enormous cost of the state printing is the subject of criticism, and great pecuniary savings are shown are recommended.

The governor says Allegheny county made no effort to suppress the Homestead disorder and should pay the bills of the militia. Pinkertonism should be prevented, the governor believes.

The national guard is highly commended for its efficiency, organization, discipline and zealous obedience.

Fought Bulkeley to the End.

HARTFORD, Jan. 4.—The outgoing senate's last act was a snub to the governor. It is customary for the two bodies on the last day of the session to appoint a joint committee to wait on the governor, but the senate adjourned abruptly, appointing no committee, thus refusing to the end to recognize the governor. The house appointed its own committee to notify Bulkeley, who came into the chamber and adjourned that body. The senatorship question is the burning issue of the day.

The prevailing opinion seems to be that Senator Hawley is sure of being elected by the new legislature, which has just convened.

Hawley supporters have come on from all over the state, and they say his nomination will be made on the first ballot in the caucus. Governor Bulkeley, Judge John M. Hall, of Willimantic, and the Hon. Henry C. Robinson, of this city, are also mentioned. The Republicans appointed a caucus committee, which will call the caucus for nominating a United States senator. The Republicans of the house met in caucus in the hall of the house of representatives. Isaac W. Brooks, of Torrington, was chosen for speaker. The senate Democratic caucus nominated Senator Holden, of Ansonia, for president pro tempore.

They Will Control the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Chairman Carter, of the Republican national committee, gives it as his opinion that the Democrats, aided by the Populists, will wrest the organization of the senate from the hands of the Republicans in early March. He does not share the belief of Senator Warren, of Wyoming; Senator Felton, of California, and Senator Perkins, of Kansas, and other senators from northwestern states that their legislatures will be able to return Republicans to succeed the United States senate to succeed those whose terms will expire with this session.

He also entirely gives up the hope of a Republican senator from Montana that he denies ever having been a candidate to succeed Senator Sanders. In Wyoming and Idaho he believes the Republicans and Democrats will join in electing Populist senators, and that all of them will vote with the Democrats in reorganizing the senate next March.

So far as Wyoming is concerned Senator Warren does not agree with Mr. Carter and has left for Cheyenne to look after his interests. He believes that he will be re-elected. Nevertheless the conviction is growing that the senate will be reorganized and controlled by a fusion between the Democrats and Populists.

To Caucus for Senator Tuesday.

ALBANY, Dec. 4.—Speaker Sulzer will appoint a committee on contested seats to immediately look into the contest of George H. Beals for the seat of Mr. Lounsbery, the Republican member of assembly from Ulster county, and also to consider the Columbia county contest. The legislature will adjourn until Monday night, when the standing committees will be announced by Speaker Sulzer. The Troy friends of Edward Murphy, Jr., held open quarters all day at the Delavan House. It has been determined to hold the caucus of the Democratic members of the legislature, at which will be selected the party candidate for United States senator, on Tuesday evening next.

To Suppress the Drink Traffic.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 4.—A call has been issued for a conference in this city next Monday. The conference will join in for the formation of a political party for the abolition or suppression of the drink traffic in the United States, and for such other moral, economic, financial and industrial reforms as are needed in the country. Arrangements will then be made to hold a convention for western Pennsylvania in this city in February. The call for the new party is the result of 300 signatures of men and women who desire unification of interest from adherents of other parties on the prohibition and equal suffrage platform.

Populists Hold the Key.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 4.—Hon. E. D. Weed received a telegram from Chairman Carter, of the national Republican committee, stating that no one had been authorized to present his name before a caucus for United States senator. It is therefore believed probable that Colonel Sanders will be returned. Three Populists hold the balance of power, but they are said to be favorable to Sanders' return.

ROBBED THE PRINCESS.

Kate Rickert Trots Out the Talleyrand Skeleton.

REVENGE THE MOTIVE OF HER ACT.

She Is Under Arrest for Stealing the Princess Ruspoli's Jewels and Tells How an American Woman Bought a Marquis and a Divorce with Her Money.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The mystery which has surrounded the handsome young woman brought to the Tombs police court three times during the past week by Detectives Wade and Hanley has been thoroughly cleared up. Her name proves to be Kate Sheridan Rickert. She was born in Ireland twenty-two years ago.

Her story involves the names of the present Marquis de Talleyrand and his son-in-law, Prince Ruspoli, who is attached to the Italian legation at Washington. Mrs. Rickert has been employed in the family of Prince Ruspoli as a nurse in this city, in Washington and at Lenox, Mass., during the past summer and fall. She is an extremely pretty and engaging young woman, and can speak four languages and play a Chopin nocturne with the skill of a Paderewski.

Consequently when she disappeared from Washington two months ago consternation was caused in the Ruspoli household. By a curious coincidence $2,000 worth of jewels and fine clothing were also missing.

A Skeleton Trotted Out.

Superintendent Byrnes' men caught her on Saturday last at Fifth avenue and Forty-second and took charge of her bag. The second she left the depot.

Upon her person were found pawn tickets for articles belonging to the Marquise Ruspoli, and even the clothing she wore was the property of her former employer. She was escorted to police headquarters, where she admitted her guilt. As a measure of retaliation she told of an alleged scandal in the family of the Marquis de Talleyrand, grandnephew of the famous Talleyrand of Napoleon's time. Her statements ran to the effect that a Mrs. Frederick Stevens, an American, became infatuated with the gallant marquis of the historical name.

He is said to be a little, insignificant looking fellow, but Mrs. Stevens looked only at his title. Her anxiety to have a title led her into the folly of having her husband. He consented to let her have a divorce, she settling a sum of money on her children. Talleyrand's wife got a divorce also. But even after divorces were obtained and Mrs. Stevens became the wife of the Marquis de Talleyrand she did not get the title of nobility. The Stevens set out to be two Marquises de Talleyrand. The first wife refused to give up the title and besides threatened to make trouble.

In order to avert this scandal Mrs. Stevens settled an annuity on the rightful marquise and is paying it to her. The father of the marquis has also settled the difficulty of a title, the consideration of a sum of money that Mrs. Stevens also paid he abdicated his second title of Duke de Dino in favor of his son.

Thus the marquis became the Duke de Dino and his second American wife the duchess. They are now living in France.

Wore the Princess' Gowns.

The Marquis de Talleyrand and his son-in-law, Prince Ruspoli, are said to be interested in New Jersey real estate in the vicinity of Lakewood. The young Irish girl was given certain liberties in the Ruspoli household not usually granted to nurses. Evidences of this familiarity can be seen at police headquarters, where pictures are in the possession of Inspector McLaughlin showing Mrs. Rickert in various attitudes, dressed in the gowns of the Princess Ruspoli, with the jewels of the princess gleaming upon her neck and bosom.

In court the young woman either acted a most consummate part or else she was genuinely affected by her embarrassing position. When brought before Justice Grady she was on the point of breaking down.

The history of the young woman has not yet been fully investigated. It is known, however, that she has been a professional nurse for some years, and that she has been employed by the wealthiest families. She holds recommendations from some of the best physicians in the city, including Irish, German and English whently.

Justice Grady having no jurisdiction in the case, Mrs. Rickert was placed in the custody of Detective Wade and Hanley and Inspector police, who took her to the capital.

Letters in French and English from the two gentlemen of position who had been attracted by the pretty looks and clever ways were found in her possession. After her arrest she wrote both of them to aid her, but she was too astute to commit herself even to try the strength of their affection.

gradually growing worse. Three years ago I got down so low that I could scarcely walk. I looked more like a corpse than a living being. I had no appetite and, for two weeks, ate not a mouthful. My weight was reduced to 98 lbs. and had no more color than a marble statue. Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended and I thought I would try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I noticed that I had better, and several more, the improvement of the kidneys and liver was so marked that I could see it myself. After two bottles I could walk to the depot without hurting me. Why, I got on Monday so I had to do it three days. I have since fully recovered, thanks to

THE PANAMA CANAL SCANDAL.

No More Arrests Will Be Made—Ex-Ministers on Trial.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The case of the deputies charged with having received money from the Panama Canal company was opened by Magistrate Franqueville. The accused are Jules Roche, ex-minister of commerce; Maurice Rouvier, ex-minister of finance; Baron Jacques, member from Corsica; Baron Jean de Soubeyran, member from Vienne; Antonin Proust, member from Deux Sevres, and Joseph Dugue de la Fauconnerie, member from Orne.

There is reason to believe that no more deputies are implicated in the Panama canal scandals, and therefore no more arrests are expected.

M. Charles Floquet authorizes a denial of the reports that he intends to resign the presidency of the chamber. The statement that he had ever helped a Russian statesman obtain $60,000 francs from the Panama company, M. Floquet said, was an unqualified falsehood, got up by his enemies merely to blacken his reputation. M. Floquet added that to his certain knowledge the current rumors of disagreement in the cabinet were without the slightest basis in fact.

M. Bourgeois, minister of justice, is seriously ill.

ROMANCE FROM READING.

How Katie Kutz Lowered a Window and Won a Millionaire.

READING, Pa., Jan. 4.—Katie Kutz, aged thirty, a cook in the Hotel Penn restaurant here, was returning to Reading from Allentown about six months ago when it began to rain. The rain beat into an open window near which an elderly man was sitting asleep, and she closed it. When he awoke he thanked her; they engaged in conversation, and finally he asked for her name and address. They have regularly corresponded, it is said, are engaged to marry.

The man's name is Leon Pechoir, and he is said to have vast business interests in Cuba, Peru and Brazil and is reported to be worth $2,000,000. A nephew, now in Lehigh university, is said to be his only near relative.

Miss Kutz says he wanted to marry her at once and take her to his South American home, but as she is so attached to this section he promised to close out his business interests there and return and settle down in Reading. Pechoir is fifty-three years old and, it is said, became attached to Miss Kutz because she is a good cook and closely resembles his first wife.

SHOT HER SWEETHEART

Jealous Nora Bott Kills Her Lover and Herself.

MYSTERY SURROUNDS THE CRIME

The Girl Calls Edward Smith to the Door at Whitehall, There Are Two Shots, and Both Are Found in the Throes of Death.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Jan. 4.—At Whitehall, a quiet hamlet on the eastern slope of the Blue Ridge mountains, in Morris county, Nora Bott, a young woman of twenty-six, shot her lover, Edward Smith, through the brain and then killed herself with a second bullet. For more than a year they had been keeping company, though it is stated that they were not engaged to be married. Smith had not quite reached his majority. He was employed in the maintenance of way department of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad and boarded with his brother Abram.

Two Pistol Shots Heard.

The couple went together to a party at the home of Eugene Courter, which is fully 1½ miles from Whitehall, on the Pine Brook road. None apparently enjoyed themselves more than Edward and Nora. About 7 o'clock Nora went out at the front door. A moment later Smith followed her. In a short time the other guests heard the reports of two pistol shots. Eugene Courter ran out and saw young Smith dying on the ground and Miss Bott lying near him dead.

Smith was shot in the left temple. He had both hands in his trousers pockets. The girl was lying almost at the foot of the front porch, partly on her side, with the pistol beneath her.

The positions of the two and the pistol indicated very clearly that she had fired the shots. Smith lived but a few minutes.

Jealousy the Probable Motive.

So far no motive for the double tragedy has been discovered. Nora Bott was apparently of sound mind and happy disposition. Nothing but good feeling seemed to exist between her and Smith, and their relatives assert that there had been nothing wrong in their relations.

There is a surmise that Nora might have become jealous, as Smith was seen walking with a Miss Small. It was also stated that Miss Bott was in love with young Smith to a greater extent than he was with her.

Deskins, constable, was fatally wounded, and Judge Montville Deskins was killed. Shepherd Cole, coroner of the county, and Patrick Brice will die. A trivial quarrel started the shooting.

She Wants Her Son's Body.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Jane McDrury, mother of Patrick McDrury, who was smothered in a cargo of grain in the steamship Bolivia in Brooklyn, has not given up her fight to get her son's body, which was taken to Glasgow. Mrs. McDrury has laid the matter before the secretary of state at Washington.

Holiday hairpins and backcombs are lovelier than ever, says Elsie Bee in Jewelers' Circular. A two pronged hairpin of shell has rays of gold radiating in a shell shaped form, and at the end of each is a diamond. These and the trefle work pins, with a diamond in the points of intersection, are among the prettiest. The backcombs are broad, with short teeth and deep, broad tops, some work with perforations. Some of these are magnificent. One had a quaint top, with cross bars of diamonds and a round floral form of jewels between.

Jeweled pins and brooches of all sorts in regard work are not, as heretofore, exclusively of diamonds. There is a large increase in the use of colored stones. These are combined in the most interesting manner. In one such brooch the center was an opal. Diamonds composed the second row of stones and sapphires the third. These ways all separated slightly by the gold mounting.

Empire and Russian Modes.

Striped velvets are made up into pretty empire gowns with open jackets, the sleeves of silk. Black satin ribbon is applied to many of the skirts and carried through a box plait at the side. Many of the empire gowns have jacket bodices ending in wide sashes, and there are several varieties of the Russian blouse. One of these had three box plaits in back and front of the bodice. Silk cord was drawn through these box plaits, and a yoke of cloth appeared above them.

Besides the materials are once more in the fad, and everything that sounds of Russian modes is greedily accepted in Paris. Traces of the Muscovite are apparent in the brown, blue and other colored woolens, which display a yellow band at the hem, with patterns in red, green and blue worked with black tambour. Velvet jackets, with a black fringe upstanding pile, are used for trimmings.

THEY DIED TOGETHER.

Wagner Kills Mrs. Spohr and Then Shoots Himself.

BOSTON, Jan. 4.—Louis Wagner killed Mrs. Fanny Spohr and himself. Mrs. Spohr had been living with Wagner for a year. She had been divorced from her husband, and her little girl lived with her. The child heard the report of firearms, followed by her mother's screams. She tried to enter the room, but the door was locked.

A policeman broke the door down, and the bodies of Mrs. Spohr and Wagner were found stretched upon the floor. Each was shot through the right temple, and each had died instantly. It is probable that the cause of the tragedy will never be known.

Big Turnout of Troops.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Secretary of War Elkins has informed the committee on military parade in connection with the inauguration of President-elect Cleveland that it would be possible to assemble at Washington by March 4, without extraordinary expense, an unusually large number of troops. Consequently the inaugural procession next March will contain probably a larger representation of the army of the United States than on any similar occasion.

No Sunday Newspapers in Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—The supreme court has confirmed the conviction of Thomas Matthews, publisher of the Pittsburg Sunday Leader, for publishing his paper on Sunday, Dec. 27, 1891, under the blue law of 1794. The court commends the act, but says that a "too liberal enforcement of the provision may put it in more danger from its friends than from its foes.

GOOD HEALTH

THE SLOW HEART.

A Somewhat Rare Condition, More Common in Men Than in Women.

A medical authority defines the slow heart as a condition where the beats do not exceed forty or fifty a minute. A relation is traced between large bodies, having in many instances slowness or deliberation of motion and the slow heart. It is mentioned that the elephant and the horse have, respectively, only twenty-eight and forty beats per minute. Dr. Taylor has found bradycardia, or slow heart, to be present in tall men, recording six cases where there was great muscular development; each man being over six feet in height. It is more common in males than females, in early than advanced life. It has been found to bear some relation to the condition of the stomach, being occasionally present after eating and in persons who are dyspeptic.

A number of causes of bradycardia, in strictly diseased states, are cited. Among them it is found to be present where there is degeneration of the heart wall, pure and simple, or degeneration attendant upon valvular disease; in diseased coronary arteries, causing an imperfect blood supply. In blood diseases; after fever, when the period of excitement has passed; as a result of certain drugs, as tobacco, cocaine, aconite, nitrate of potash.

Of cases of normally slow heart, one of the most celebrated is that of Napoleon Bonaparte, whose pulse rate, according to Corvisart, was under forty beats to the minute.

A Simple Water Test.

Into a perfectly clean bottle having a stopper of ground glass put five ounces of the water to be tested. To the water add ten grains (by weight) of pure granulated white sugar. Cork tight and set in a window exposed freely to light, but not to the direct rays of the sun. Do not disturb the bottle and keep the temperature as near 70 degs. Fahrenheit as possible.

If the water contains organic matter, within forty-eight hours will be abundance of whitish specks will be seen floating about, and the more organic matter the more specks. In a week or ten days, if the water is very bad, the odor of rancid butter will be noticed on removing the stopper. The little specks will settle to the bottom, where they will appear as white, flaky masses. Such water should not be used for drinking purposes, according to health authorities recommending the foregoing simple test.

Eyes of Different Color.

In exemplification of this curious and rare phenomenon a New York physician tells of the recent appearance of a girl of about fourteen whose eyes were a distinct contrast in color, the right eye being dark hazel and the left light blue. Both were perfect in their respective colorings and devoid of any defect in form or size.

When Tired and Chilled.

"When you come home tired and chilled heat your feet through and through, drink a cup of scalded milk, wrap up warmly in bed, and we will warrant sound sleep and refreshment," is the comfortable if not strictly novel advice of an exchange.

The Sensibility of Women.

In a singular paper by Professor Lombroso, of Turin, it is stated that the sensibility of touch and pain is less acute in women than in men. This hypothesis is maintained by recounting numerous experiments and demonstrated by figures. Whether the conclusions arrived at will be generally received is somewhat doubtful. It is hardly true, in this country at least, that girls have to undergo the tyranny of their brothers and endure the cruel preference of the parents for their male children, or that women are the slaves of their husbands and of social prejudices.

ETIQUETTE

IN THE DRAWING ROOM.

The Convenient "At Home"—The Art of Entertaining Successfully.

In times gone by the parlor was, as it is now, the finest room in the house. But of late years, according to English ideas, it has been designated as the drawing room. At the present day it is the apartment par excellence exclusively to the ladies of the household, for the walls of which the best authorities tell us that paper of a solid color or small pattern is decidedly preferable. Its color should be of a subdued tint, forming a background for the etchings, engravings and pictures that will adorn this particular room. Nowadays also, according to Good Housekeeping, from which we quote, an "At Home" takes the place of old fashioned parties, and although we have the 5 o'clock tea, the musicale and the luncheon, yet the "At Home" meets the requirements of all society people.

The invitations should be sent a week in advance. When the evening arrives the hostess should be in readiness at the time appointed, standing at the entrance of the drawing room to greet her guests as they enter the room.

A good hostess must have the breverty of a general, the manners of a diplomat and a perfect knowledge of human nature, besides knowing how to bring congenial people together. The shy and diffident should be made her special care, and people of note should not be overlooked. When a collation is served, the servants should be taught their duties, and waste should be obtained for those who are unable to stand. A clever story may be rendered, a poem recited or some music be given for a short time only. Conversation is the pleasure of all good talkers, and a continual showing of talent to a great bore so exercise one prevail. Make very light of your house a person of consequence; expect for yourself neither glory, admiration nor attention. Bring people together who have like ideas and congenial tastes. Never converse more than a few moments with any one person, be attentive to all, and you will have acquired the great and true secret of the art of entertaining.

A Give Away.

The many hundreds of girl children who are being called Columbia will bear in this name an indication of their age, which it is possible some of them will not relish in the years to come when—well, when they are not as young as they used to be.

How One Farmer Got Rich.

A correspondent of The Rural New Yorker had a talk with that rarest of men—the individual who got rich by farming. He told the secret of it in the beginning. "The way we accumulated our little pile was simply by spending less than we made." That is plain enough, an open mystery. Then the farmer continued, "It is extravagance and bad management that is the matter with the farmers—extravagance and bad management."

He told of his own good management. Part of it was to give all his live stock the best food, stabling and care, so it would come out fat and profitable. The other part was to skimp on the human live stock in the household:

We never bought anything we could get along without. When we thought we needed an article we always considered well to see if we couldn't substitute something we already had before buying it. When we did buy anything we took good care of it and made it last two or three times as long as most people do. We found that we could get along very well without tea and coffee by using milk instead, either hot or cold. Just as best suited us at the time. That was quite a saving. We sold our cream, chickens and surplus fruits and vegetables to our grocerymen, of whom we bought our groceries, and at the annual settlement he invariably owed us a small sum in cash.

When we loaned our first $300 out at 10 per cent. and it brought us $30 at the end of the year, we thought it was like finding money. We soon had another $300 drawing interest, and then another, and in a few years we were receiving more in interest than we made off the farm. Then we eased up and worked only to make a living off the land. When our pile reached $30,000, which it did in what seemed to me a remarkably short time after we made the first loan, we sold the farm for a good price, moved into town and have been taking it easy ever since.

There is a sort of Poor Richard ring about the above that is refreshing. The old man goes on to say that anything but oak bottomed rocking chairs and rag carpets on the farm is wicked extravagance. But before deciding whether this is the wisest way for a farmer to live one would like to know what became of the human live stock on that farm, how it liked the skimmilk and bacon diet, while the eggs, butter and chickens were sold off to swell the old man's pile of real estate mortgages. It is true that the way to get rich is to spend less than one makes. Economy is all well enough, but there is a line where economy ends and degrading skimping begins. "Whisky and tobacco and loafing about town have stolen many a man's farm from him," as the old fellow says. But it would be better even to be not quite so rich and give the farm children a good education and turn a few sunbeams of joy and beauty into their lives.

The English Do Not Read Tennyson.

So says W. T. Stead in The Review of Reviews. The laureate was not a popular poet at home, not even well known, and he never will be while the present copyright on his books lasts. Everybody knows Tennyson in America. He is considerably more familiar to the popular mind than Emerson or William Cullen Bryant. The reason is simply a commercial one, in Stead's view. Here there was no copyright on his poems, and the price was within reach of everybody.

In England, although he made more money out of poetry than any other writer ever did, yet he or his publishers kept the price of his works at such a figure that only the aristocracy and the rich middle class could afford to buy them. "The English nation lives in the cottage," John Bright and long ago, and the cottager cannot buy gilt edged poetry. In illustration of this, Stead tells us that he himself was the son of a nonconformist minister, and therefore his family was rather above poor people in means and standing; but Stead's father never received only $400 a year. He saved a shilling now and then and made additions to his scant library when he could, but those additions never included Tennyson. The poems of the laureate of England were too dear for English people to buy. Stead was a man grown before he owned a Tennyson, and for this reason he thinks he has never fully appreciated the poet.

The visit of Monsignor Satolli, papal legate, is one of the most important recent events in the history of the Roman Catholic church in America. Besides bringing Pope Leo's instructions with regard to the public school question, Monsignor Satolli will also investigate the serious question whether a papal court for trying disputed cases shall be established in America. All questions of dispute of a graver nature than those which the archbishops are empowered to settle have been heretofore referred directly to Rome. But this is a great and growing country, and the Roman Catholic church here is increasing in proportion to the population. Besides being a large country, it is also a frisky country, where people are apt to differ in the matter of views. Questions for settlement have been sent to Rome with such frequency as to make them a burden at the headquarters of the propaganda. If, therefore, in the judgment of Monsignor Satolli, the time has come when there shall be a Roman Catholic canonical court in the United States, where American church questions may be disposed of here at home, then such a canonical court will be established as a permanency by the pope on the recommendation of Satolli. But whether this will be done is known as yet to no one except perhaps Satolli himself.

Of course! Tom Mann has testified before the British labor commission that in the matter of developing and adopting improvements in machinery America is far ahead of England, and that within Mr. Mann's own knowledge when British firms wish to get the best and latest machinery they send to America for it.

THE EMERALD.

Facts and Traditions About a Stone Which Fashion is Just Now Favoring.

The emerald is the crystal of silica or flint, with the addition of a few other substances among which is the oxide of chromium, whereto it owes its color. And its color is its chief value, for in hardness it is inferior to the sapphire and far below the diamond, according to a concordance of gems. Like the ruby, the emerald was a gem greatly prized and much idealized by the ancients. Like other noble gems, too, the emerald cured diseases when reduced to powder and taken internally. If worn by a child, it was a sure preventive, to "fits," convulsive or epileptic. Placed on the lips it stopped hemorrhage. As an amulet secured the sack it dispelled vain terrors, put to flight evil spirits and cured fevers. It restored sight and luxury when these had failed, and in olden times, when "animism" was the true faith, no one need fear entrance, paralysis of the optic nerve or aphasia who had an emerald for his silent physician. But if powerless to prevent or cure any evil it delivers into absolute bondage. It is worn, bound to crystal, evil or confess itself vanquished in the combat it sustains. Besides these wonder working properties the emerald blinded snakes if they dared to gaze on its lustre.

South America furnishes the finest emeralds, and the Mexicans were possessed of emeralds which sound to us almost fabulous for size and beauty. The chief priests of these Mexican temples wore an emerald ring on the first finger of the right hand; also a bracelet set with a countersunk emerald, and in the exhortation of a Mexican mother to her daughter the emerald takes the place of a symbol. "And thy father has polished and reshaped thee legitimate, even as a precious emerald, that thou mayst appear before the eyes of the world even as a jewel of perfect virtue."

Some say that the Peruvians worshiped a huge emerald, as big as an ostrich's egg, and offered to it as tribute of praise and adoration other emeralds of smaller size—as children given to their parents or vassals delivered up to their lord. Cortez got from the Golden Castile five emeralds of priceless value. The first was cut into the form of a vase with its lip beaten, the second was a kind of toy or "charm"—a hunting horn; the third was a fish with golden eyes; the fourth was a bell, or which the stopper was a large pear shaped pearl; the fifth was a cup set on a golden foot rimmed with gold and bearing four golden chains fastened to a pearl by which it might be worn as a jewel on the breast.

Railways of the World.

Latest obtainable statistics of the railway mileage of the world, as quoted by The Industrial World, show that the mileage at the beginning of 1892 was 167,756 in the United States, 14,002 miles in Canada and 5,625 miles in Mexico and Argentine Republic. In Europe the German empire comes first, with 28,709 miles; France second, with 24,310 miles; Great Britain and Ireland third, with 23,605 miles; Russia fourth, with 19,945 miles.

Westerburg and Denmark are the countries which have made the least progress in the construction of railways since 1886, while in Asia, apart from the 16,875 miles of lines in India, the Transcaspian line, recently constructed by the Russians is 263 miles in length, the Dutch colonies have 120 miles of railway, the French 45 and the Portuguese 36, while there are 125 miles in China and 18 in Persia.

In Africa the colony of Algeria and Tunis comes first with 1,967 miles, the Cape Colony second with about 1,600 miles, Egypt third with 965 miles, Natal fourth with 341 miles, while the Orange Free State has 120 miles and other minor states about 200 miles. In Australia the figures are 2,702 miles for Victoria, 2,273 miles in New South Wales, 1,616 miles for Queensland, 1,275 miles for South Australia, 401 for Tasmania and 1,320 for New Zealand.

Superstitions of New Year's Day.

Finish whatever you begin to do on New Year's day, or you will "half do" things all the year.

Be sure to have money in your purse and your purse in your pocket, so you will not lack the same during the year to come.

Wear a new suit if possible; at any rate dress a model or tidy appearance.

Should you chance to put on any garment wrong side out when dressing in the morning, take off all your clothes and dress entirely over again unless you wish to invite ill fortune.

Be the first to wish the cook a happy New Year.

Do not stumble or fall on the stairs; but should you do so in going up stairs, threatened ill luck may be averted by carefully shaking the left foot behind you.

A present of a basket of eggs or oranges brings good luck to the house into which they come.

The foregoing are only a few of the many superstitions which the Scotch people connect with what is to them the most joyous holiday of the year. But most important of these all is that for fortune good luck there is nothing so fortunate as that a man, especially a tall and fair man) should be the first to set foot in the house on New Year's morning.

Famous Pearls.

M. Arthur Blocke, the valuer of the French crown diamonds, tells that the most curious among famous pearls is that which three centuries ago the French traveler Tavernier found in the shape of a pea. It was valued by the Grand Mogul, for a sum equivalent to about $675,000. It is still in the possession of the sovereigns of Persia. Another eastern potentate owns a pearl of 124 grains which is quite transparent. It is to be had for the sum of $200,000.

An Ancient New Year's Gift.

Gloves were customary New Year's gifts in the Sixteenth century, and when in consequence of the expense they could not be purchased "glove money" was given instead, and at the present time gloves are always a welcome gift to a lady on New Year's day or any other day.

A Tenacious Tree.

The Force of Water Used in Mining.

So tremendous is the force of streams issuing from the pipes of miners under a large head of water that they would produce instant death if directed against a man standing near and would probably cut his body in two.

THE SAME OLD STORY.

He told her of the ladyless knights Who lived in daydream by; And how they shed each other's blood To win a lady's eye.

And down her cheeks the soft tears spall— "That seems an strange today," she said.

He told her how, in gusset old towers That turned down from view, On storm isolated seas, fair maids were locked, And all beauties of love, After battle they bled— "That seems an strange today," she said.

He pictured Shagpeare's writes, And what her beauty was. And how he sang to knights' power, An emotive and lyrical lass. She sighed to think where love had led— "That seems an strange today," she said.

And then he told her how his love For her had grown so great That he would die if she said no. And how he'd sit and wait. She laughed and kissed her pretty head— "I've heard all that before," she said. —Brooklyn Life.

What We Wanted.

A big raw boned fellow came stamping into the room and moved up an office to a desk. He took in the West Virginia mountains and walked up to a very little man behind a desk in the corner.

"I want to see the tavern keeper," he said angrily.

"What for?" asked the little man in a nervous tone.

"None of your business," snapped the visitor. "I want to see the tavern keeper. that's what."

"Well, tell me what you want with him and I'll find out if you can see him."

"Whether I kin or not," persisted the big fellow, "I want to see him, and I'm goin to."

"You'll have to tell me what you want first."

"Tain't none o' your mix. I want to see the tavern keeper, an' I want to see him, an' I will."

The little man was beginning to look gray.

"I say you won't unless you tell me what you want with him."

"He beat me out of a dollar, an he's a liar an a thief, an I want to see him."

The next minute the little one was right on top of him, and in about a minute and a half he had him down in the corner eating on him.

"Well," he said, puffing like a porpoise, "I'm—the—tavern—keeper. What's—you—want—now?" "Nothing—about" The big fellow underneath only groaned.—Detroit Free Press.

A CARPENTER INJURED.

FREDERICK MANNING FALLS FROM THE SECOND STORY OF A BUILDING.

He Lands on his Arms and Knees Twisting his Elbow Joints Out of Their Sockets—Two Doctors Put them Back in Place.

Mr. Frederick Manning, who resides on Grant avenue, was seriously injured on Tuesday.

He is employed by his brother, Mr. James Manning, the builder, who has the contract for the erecting of Mr. John French's new residence, on West Seventh street.

Mr. Manning was at work nailing the cornice over a bay window, on Mr. French's house, and, it is supposed, lost his balance. He fell to the ground, striking on his elbows and knees.

Both elbow joints were twisted out of their sockets, and his knees were badly bruised. He was able walk home. In falling he managed to twist his body, in trying to save himself, in such a manner, that the most of his weight was upon his elbows when he struck the ground.

Two doctors attended him, and the bones were put back in place, but it was a painful operation for the injured man to bear.

THAT ELECTRIC RAILWAY.

Westfield's Town Committee Meets to Consider the Matter.

The Town Committee of Westfield met last evening, a full board being present. After considering some minor business the board gave attention to Foster M. Voorhees, representing the Electric Railway Company, who requested, the privilege of laying tracks in the town. Mr. Voorhees did not ask to run the tracks past the depot, as the company propose to make some point near the depot the terminus of their road. The matter was discussed at considerable length, but no definite agreement was reached. Mr. Voorhees apparently preferred to have the route along South avenue to Elmer street and from Elmer street to Rose place, thence along South avenue to the depot. The committee preferred to have it from South avenue along Elmer street to North avenue and along North avenue to the depot. The question was also raised as to whether it was best to have the tracks placed at the side of the road or in the centre. The committee adjourned to meet Mr. Voorhees again on January 17.

Rev. A. H. Lewis of this city will continue to supply the Round Brook Congregational pulpit for the present.

Rev. J. W. Richardson will preach to-night in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Theme: "Coming to Himself."

Mr. Paul Tidden's first piano recital was given in the Casino of the Union County Country Club Tuesday morning. He rendered several difficult selections in a manner showing him to be an artist of exceptional talent. His next recital will be given at the Casino next Tuesday morning.

A telegram from Gloversville, N. Y., last night informed Mr. P. M. Hulett of West Front street of the sudden death of his youngest brother, Daniel W. Hulett, a prominent glove manufacturer of that place. Young Mr. Hulett was visiting his brother here only ten days ago, and, as he then seemed in excellent health, and no word of his illness since had been received, the telegram was a great shock. Deceased was only twenty-six years old and married. Mr. P. M. Hulett left Plainfield for Gloversville immediately upon receipt of the telegram. He and his wife have changed to make some warm friends here during the short time they resided in Plainfield, and all will feel deep sympathy for them in their sudden bereavement.

A Seventeen-Year-Old Suicide.

A 17-year-old grandson of Joseph Barton of Somerville committed suicide in his father's barn, near Middlebush, on Christmas. He had procured a pistol from the house, and, going to the barn, fired one ball through his head and another into his heart. He died the next day. He had injured his head a few weeks before and it is supposed that he was temporarily deranged at the time he committed the act.

OUR DRINKING WATER.

IT IS AS PURE AND WHOLESOME AS CAN BE FOUND.

There Is No Underground River—It is Simply the Rain Water Falling Upon the Earth and Percolating Into the Lower Strata.

Plainfield's abundant water supply, says a local historian, is not caused by an underground river, as claimed by the Scientific American, but from rains from superficial earth, 25 to 75 feet deep, lying upon the basement rock, being one continuous mass of loam, sand and gravel, which is saturated its whole thickness down from an underground level about 18 feet below the surface. Through this compact mass there is no such rushing of a river, as has been described, to jostle the pebbles against each other, but only the steady movement of the particles of water among the interstices of unconsolidated sand and stones.

Some suppose that the natural, incessant movement of the ground water is the cause of the smooth and polished gravel. This is not so, for geology has clearly determined that the true cause of this condition of smooth pebbles is the action of surface water ages before this planet was inhabited by man, and long prior to the deposition of the sand and gravel where they are found to-day.

"The supply of our drinking water, stored underneath this city, says this same authority, is solely the rain water falling upon the surface of the ground and percolating into the lower strata. The quantity of this supply depends entirely upon the rainfall of the locality, and its inexhaustible sufficiency may be approximately estimated by the annual precipitation of rain and snow, remembering the known laws of evaporation and absorption. The depth of rainfall upon Plainfield amounts every year to 40 to 45 inches or more than twenty-five gallons of water to each square foot of surface. It has been ascertained that about one-third to one-half of this is carried off in our two brooks, the remainder being disposed of by evaporation, absorption by vegetation, and infiltration into the earth. Taking the superficial area of that portion of Plainfield lying westerly of Netherwood Heights and between Berrkman street and Terrill road (the N. E. city boundary) being the territory in which the water works are located, and assuming that 15 to 20 inches in depth of the annual rainfall, penetrates the soil to the water-bearing strata of an average thickness of twenty feet of continuous saturation, by mathematical calculation it will be seen that the immense volume of water retained in this subterranean storage. The capacity of the gravel formation for receiving this water of percolation, varies according to its coarseness and compact nature. In the greater part of our deposits of sand and gravel below the level of saturation, the voids average about 20 per cent., which will permit of a sufficient quantity of water for plant-growth, stream-flow and domestic and manufacturing purposes. To conclude let it be remembered that this drinking water is as pure as can be found anywhere in nature, which is accounted for by the clean siliceous ground structure. The character of the soil and subsoil through which the rain passes, and the lower strata of sand and gravel which is permeates, will necessarily impart to the subterranean water supply somewhat of their constituents. Numerous tests of many samples of our soil and underlying earth have given satisfactory results. Those show that 80 parts in 100 are lo-soluble sand; less than four parts in 100 are organic matter; only a slight percentage of lime, and no traces of chlorine. With such a high standard for the water-bearing strata, only the purest of drinking water could be expected which chemical analysis sustains. The average of total solids in one gallon of our city deep-rock well water is 5.50 and gravel wells 7.35. The average impurities in the same quantity of reservoir water, taken from half a dozen different cities near Plainfield, have been stated in official reports as 9.20. No purer or more wholesome drinking water can be found anywhere in the world than is obtained from our best protected wells in Plainfield."

—A. M. Vanderbeck is retailing his stock off at wholesale price. He will close his business here about March 1, 1893.

She will appear here in conjunction with C. B. Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger's comedy company, which will produce "The Prodigal Father," a mirth-provoker, pronounced far above the average. NOTWITHSTANDING THE CLAUSE.

The Insurance Company Must Pay $1,050.

Mr. John R. Cash, the publisher of the Westfield Leader, yesterday had his day in court, and came off victorious. The NEWS extends its congratulations to Brother Cash and wishes him many happy returns of the day.

The suit was brought by Mr. Cash against the Phoenix Insurance Company of Philadelphia to recover $1,050 loss sustained by the fire which a year ago destroyed a block of buildings in Westfield. The Insurance Company refused to pay the loss on the ground that the property was mortgaged and there was no consent to the mortgage indorsed on the policy. The policy contained a clause to the effect that if the property should be mortgaged without having the company's consent endorsed, this policy should be void. Wallis Edwards & Buncsted of Jersey City, were counsel for the Insurance Co., and claimed that this clause was fatal to the case.

Mr. Cash employed Craig A. Marsh to try the case for him, and that lawyer got around the point made by the Insurance Company's lawyers by convincing the court and jury that this Company had in some way become stopped from claiming the benefit of the forfeiture clause in the policy. The jury rendered a verdict for $1,050, being the full amount claimed with interest.

The policy was one of the several which Mr. Cash had and the form is known as the standard. There are all kinds of traps in these forms, and, but for the fact that a jury can pass upon matters of fact when they think when the matters at issue are brought before them properly, the person who insurers his property pays the loss and pays in good faith, would stand a poor chance.

Dismissed the Case.

The case of John H. Hartman vs. Wolfe, came up before Justice Crosby this afternoon. The Justice granted a non suit and dismissed the case. The plaintiff claimed that the defendant had wrongfully held his lay bedder. Mr. Wm. M. Stillman represented the plaintiff and Mr. Harry C. Langan the defendant.

Frightened by the Cars.

Mr. William H. Shotwell's horse ran away yesterday afternoon on New street. The animal was frightened by the cars, and gave a lunge forward, breaking both traces, but Mr. Shotwell held on to the reins and stopped the frightened beast, thus avoiding what might have been a serious accident.

A Small Fire in North Plainfield.

A bed in Hermann Parsh's house on Harrison street, North Plainfield, caught fire this afternoon, and, but for the prompt work of the firemen, the house might have been destroyed. As it was only the bed and some furniture were burned. No alarm was sounded.

CONTESTING HIS WILL.

FIGHTING OVER RICHARD J. CLARKE'S THOUSANDS.

He Died At the Albion Hotel, in this City, June 10th—The Bulk of His Property Left to Mrs. Schell in His Last Will.

The contest over the will of the late Richard J. Clarke, formerly the proprietor of the Franklyn Coffee House in Maiden lane, New York, who died at the Albion Hotel in this city on June 10 last, was before Surrogate Ransom yesterday morning. The contestants are the dead man's only relatives, two sisters, Mrs. E. Clarke of 165 Tompkins avenue, Brooklyn, and William J. Clarke of Winooski, Vt., to whom nothing was left in the will. They allege that Mr. Clarke, although of sound mind, was influenced by Mrs. Alice L. Schell, to whom he bequeathed the bulk of his estate, which amounted to about $250,000.

The relatives also allege that Mrs. Schell secured so great an influence over him that she was able to make him sign a codicil, dated Sept. 3, 1891, which made her the principal beneficiary under his will. A will dated Nov. 9, 1888, was presented for probate by Lawyers Mitchell & Mitchell of 49 Wall street, and its admission was opposed by the two cousins.

The first witness yesterday was B. F. Lee, a lawyer who had witnessed the will of 1888. He was considerably surprised when another will was produced made in 1887, which Mr. Lee admitted had also been drawn up under his direction. To the two will Clark had left Mrs. Schell only $1,000.

Mr. John M. Mitchell of Mitchell & Mitchell testified that he had gone, in company with his chief clerk, G. E. Remson, to Mr. Clarke's room in the St. Nicholas Hotel on Sept. 3, 1891, and had witnessed the codicil. This was put in evidence.

Mrs. Schell herself was a witness. She is a well-preserved woman of medium height, apparently about fifty years old. She said she was the widow of Alexander M. Schell, who died eighteen years ago. She had known Clarke ever since she was a child, and had met him in Baltimore. Ever since that time they had been close friends.

She then told the story of how she and Clarke came to be at the Albion Hotel, when Mr. Clarke died.

The case was then adjourned until to-day.

Millionaire Schaus's Will.

The will of millionaire Schaus of New York was filed for probate yesterday. It was thought that his daughter Mabel, who it will be remembered, eloped with the late Dr. Charles Stillman of this city, would be disinherited. One of the first provisions of the will is the creation of a trust fund, the income of which is to revert to her.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Newspaper Artist.

The artist for whom there is work and pay and a degree of fame that ought to satisfy almost any man is at present the person who can make a picture in black and white—in other words, the illustrator. Illustrated journalism has opened up a new field to the ambitious young artist. The noblest ambition that human breast can feel is to do the best work for the greatest number of people. The newspaper artist, therefore, who can express a whole series of emotions in a tiny one or two column sketch is the master of his craft today. The artist who sits in his studio, rolls his eyes to heaven and rubs together rose madder and ground nummy tints is out of date. The young man or woman that can tell a whole story in a few strong, spirited lines in a newspaper column or in a book picture is the artist that is wanted now. It will be so for fifty years to come at least, for book and newspaper illustrating is only now at its beginning. There are splendid possibilities of expression before it all untouched as yet.

If a promising boy or girl is full of a wild desire to go and be an artist, the thing to do is to learn to draw, not to paint. A first class draftsman can always paint; a painter cannot always draw. The drawing taught in the common schools may give smoothness of touch, but not much else.

It is the human figure the young American world be artist must learn to draw in a spirited and lifelike manner, not in a way that suggests a tailor's dummy. Begin, say, with the nose. Watch a host of all sorts and expressions. Take a paper and piece of charcoal and draw noses for months. Then take eyes and depict them in the same way. A well known artist in New York spends most of his efforts on the human back. It is wonderful what different expressions he throws into different attitudes of the same pair of shoulders.

Take one part of the human body after another—heads, arms, legs and trunks. When you can draw all these with spirit and expression combine them. A successful illustrator recommends pupils who have attained some skill to make a special study of legs—legs in motion and at rest, legs fat and thin and straight and bowed. The newspaper artist who understands his business can put more laugh into a picture two inches square than many a professional humorist gets into a whole lecture.

Millionaires Who Divide.

One school of reformers calls constantly on the rich to divide up their fortunes among the poor—to disgorge their ill gotten gains for the loss fortunate. But the fact is that this process is already going on constantly, though the millionaires got no credit for it. That is rather discouraging, even to a hoisted plutocrat. The greatest need in our American education has been manual training schools. Only these will enable American mechanics and industrial artists to compete successfully with the skilled workmen of Europe. There government appropriations have been lavished on trade schools and art schools alike for centuries.

In our new country we have had nothing of this kind. While American youths are quicker mentally and mechanically than those of the Old World, they are deficient every time in the technical training that will enable them to compete with foreign workmen and artists. But now come three American millionaires in three great cities and establish out of their own generosity manual training schools perfect in every equipment. Charles Pratt did it for Brooklyn, Mr. Drexel did it for Philadelphia and Philip Armour is doing it for Chicago. These gifts, in precisely this shape, are the best that could be offered to working people.

What is really the most important step toward the annexation of Canada to the United States has been taken in the establishment at Toronto of an evening paper whose avowed object is to work for the union of the two countries. In its first issue the new paper, The Sun, calls attention to the difference between the progress of the states and the slow growth of the Dominion, and claims that *the contrast is owing entirely to "our un*happy separation from the republic of the United States." The Sun, loves England, but believes the future of Canada depends on its union with the United States. It will resort to none but constitutional and peaceful agitation in its advocacy of annexation, nor will it favor annexation without the consent of her majesty and the British parliament, but it is going to work this peaceful agitation for all it is worth.

An English woman took a razor in her mouth to hold it while she used both hands to tie down a shelf. She drew in her breath suddenly, and the razor shot down her throat. It was tightly closed, but it rasped and scraped considerably as it passed through her esophagus. They hurried her to a hospital, where she complained of severe pains in the stomach, which was not strange. Surgeons gave her chloroform, cut her stomach open, took the razor out, sewed up the gash, and all was well. The woman went about her house cleaning again as though nothing had happened. But she will have a razor between her teeth again.

LATE CABINET GOSSIP

Lamont and Carlisle Located by the Politicians.

LODGE AND HALE FOR THE SENATE

They Are Nominated by the Republicans of Massachusetts and Maine Respectively—Governor Morris, of Connecticut in the Chair—Mrs. Lease Retires.

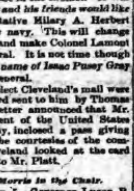
NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—As the time approaches for Mr. Cleveland's departure for Lakewood the interest in the makeup of his cabinet increases. Only two names are mentioned positively as having been decided upon—Senator Carlisle for *secretary of the treasury and Colonel Daniel S. La*mont. Colonel Lamont is mentioned both as postmaster general and as secretary of the navy. Even in the event of the appointment of Colonel Lamont, it is still reported from very excellent sources that the Hon. William C. Whitney will be secretary of state.

It is well known that Mr. Whitney does not want any place in the cabinet. It was also said that he and his friends would like to see Representative Milary A. Herbert secretary of the navy. This will change the programme and make Colonel Lamont postmaster general. It is not time though to withdraw the name of Isaac Fisser Gray for postmaster general.

In President-elect Cleveland's mail were a letter and a card sent to him by Thomas C. Platt. The letter announced that Mr. Platt, as president of the United States Express company, inclosed a pass giving Mr. Cleveland the courtesies of the company. Mr. Cleveland looked at the card and returned it to Mr. Platt.

Governor Morris in the Chair.

HARTFORD, Jan. 5.—Governor Luzon B. Morris, of New Haven, the fifty-fifth governor of Connecticut in succession, was inaugurated here with appropriate ceremonies. This fact that Governor Bulkeley has held over for two years by reason of the deadlock between senate and house gave renewed interest to the proceedings. Governor Morris was escorted to the capitol by Governor Bulkeley, the retiring governor, and his staff, and the First regiment and companies of the Governor's Foot and Horse guards. A governor's salute of seventeen guns was fired in Bushnell park, in front of the capitol, when the procession arrived, and along the line of march flags were displayed.



LUZON B. MORRIS.

Both houses were in joint session, and Governor Morris read his inaugural address to the joint session, following which each house separated and adjourned for the day.

Governor Morris, in his address, urged a constitutional convention to revise the state's organic laws in accordance with the demands of the times.

The legislature, he said, was not representative of the people, and the constitution was obscured by too many amendments. He continued: "If we are to retain popular government in Connecticut the constitution should be so changed that the votes of the people as cast on election day shall have their full effect. It is seldom that the executive officers of this state are those who have received a plurality of the people's vote.

The Plurality Vote Favored.

"In forty of the forty-four states of the Union a plurality vote elects the state officers. In every state admitted into the Union during the present century a plurality vote elects. In this state a plurality vote elects the presidential electors, members of congress, state senators and representatives, sheriffs and judges of probate. No good reason can be shown why the executive officers of the state should not be elected by a plurality vote."

The governor says the recent ballot act is defective and should be simplified. There should be a new law that would obliterate a man who sells or buys a vote, and proper punishment for men who try to bribe legislators. The governor also recommended reform in the manner of taxing bonds and stocks and in doing away with grade crossings, and urged that an appropriation be made during the exposition of the Connecticut exhibit at the World's fair.

The senate's vote for clerk showed 19 votes for Charles W. Comstock, of Meriden, and 18 for Edward G. Hutchinson, of Essex, the senate dividing upon party lines. Comstock was finally chosen. Both parties claimed the right to organize the senate, but Senator Hotchkiss, democrat, was elected president pro tem., receiving 19 votes. Eleven Republicans voted blank ballots.

The Rev. Willis H. Stone, an Episcopal minister of this city, was elected chaplain, *and the various messengers and doorkeep*ers as nominated by the Democratic caucus were appointed.

A partisan debate occurred in the senate on a resolution notifying the retiring governor (Bulkeley) that the senate was ready to receive any communication he had to make. Senator Pierce, a member of the Republican senate, objected to recognizing Governor Bulkeley by the passage of the resolution, but it passed—13 to 11.

Governor Bulkeley notified the senate that he had lent $60,000 to the various departments during the past two years and submitted vouchers for the amount. His appointment of George Haven, of New London, brigadier general of the national guard in place of General Watson, resigned, was tabled.

In the house the ballot for speaker resulted as follows: Isaac W. Brooks, of Torrington, 133; George M. Dunn, 103.

Stockbridge in the Lead.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 5.—The senatorial situation has not materially changed. The situation is: Stockbridge, 37 votes; Lapo, 30; Hubbell, 5; Woodman, 5, with the other seven votes distributed among various dark horse candidates. The Stockbridge people still confidently claim enough to nominate on the first ballot. W. A. Tatum, Republican, was elected speaker.

For an Antiseditious Senator.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 5.—While the independents and Democrats agreed on the organization of the house, they had trouble in the senate, and no organization can be effected. There is talk of the antiseditious members of all parties combining to elect a United States senator. Paddock stock consequently dropped and Majors stock advanced. Majors is the Republican lieutenant governor. Crounse, governor-elect, is growing to a respectful candidate. Congressman Bryan, Democrat, seems to be in the lead, however, being a favorite with the independents.

Mrs. Lease Withdraws.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 5.—Mrs. Mary E. Lease has sent an open letter declining to be a candidacy for the United States senate. A letter to Chairman Breidenthal of the People's party state central committee, contains her withdrawal. She says she withdraws in the interest of harmony and so as not "to render possible the election of one who is not in full affiliation with our principles. I therefore consider it my duty to say that I shall not permit my name to be presented or my claims to be considered at the convention to be held for state treasurer and Fred A. Powers for attorney general. The Republican state committee renominated S. H. Mauley for chairman.

The sixty-sixth Maine legislature was organized here. In the senate A. M. Spear was elected president. In the house A. B. Savage was elected speaker.

Lodge to Succeed Dawes.

BOSTON, Jan. 5.—The senatorial fight was practically settled by the election of Congressman Henry Cabot Lodge in a fully attended caucus of Republican legislators. When the election occurs two weeks hence Mr. Lodge will receive the unanimous support of the Republicans in each branch of the assembly as the successor of United States Senator Dawes and will be elected.

White's Field Now Clear.

HACKENSACK, Jan. 5.—Kenneth Lynch withdrew from the senatorial contest, thus leaving the field clear for Stephen M. White. Two Democratic senators and two Democratic members of the lower house since refused to support White. Counting the three Populists for White, he still needs three votes to elect.

Populists and Democrats Win.

HELENA, Mon., Jan. 5.—The house was organized by Populists and Democrats, the former getting the speaker and the latter clerk. The Democratic canvass for senator is very lively. The general impression is that the contest between Hennessy and Clark will become so bitter that either Dixon or Maginnis will win the toga.

Dr. Senner for Phelps' Place.

BERLIN, Jan. 5.—The Tageblatt says that Dr. Senner, of the New York Staats Zeitung, is believed to have been selected by President-elect Cleveland to succeed William Walter Phelps as United States minister to Germany.

News from Albany.

ALBANY, Jan. 5.—With an almost unanimous vote the legislature passed the bill to hold the constitutional convention, and in the assembly Mr. Ainsworth offered a bill favoring national quarantine. It was referred to a committee.

Connecticut Assemblymen to Caucus.

HARTFORD, Jan. 5.—The Republican members of the general assembly will meet on Wednesday next at 2 p. m. in the hall of representatives and hold a caucus for the nomination of a United States senator.

Faulkner's Seat Not Safe.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 5.—Ex-Governor E. W. Wilson and ex-Senator Johnson E. Camden are developing considerable strength, and the re-election of Senator Faulkner is regarded as by no means certain.

To Renominate Hiscock.

ALBANY, Jan. 5.—The Republican members of the state legislature will hold a caucus next Wednesday night, when Frank Hiscock will be renominated as United States senator to succeed himself.

Casey May Be Re-elected.

BISMARCK, Jan. 5.—The Populists and Republicans have been engaged in a bitter row, which has solidified the Republicans, and it is the general impression that Senator Casey will be re-elected.

Bate Will Win in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 5.—The Democratic members of the legislature will probably renominate William B. Bate, who is a candidate for re-election.

In New Hampshire.

CONCORD, Jan. 5.—Robert N. Chamberlain (Rep.) was elected speaker of the house and John McLane (Rep.) president of the senate.

Organized by the Republicans.

DENVER, Jan. 5.—The Republicans have organized the board of 25—and may probably control the senate.

Senator Davis Renominated.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 5.—At the Republican senatorial caucus Senator Davis was nominated by acclamation.

Illinois Democrats in Control.

SPRINGFIELD, Jan. 5.—Democrats organized both branches of the *Illinois legisla*tures.

OVER A SCORE KILLED.

Fatal Fight Between a Sheriff's Posse and a Mob.

THE BATTLE IS STILL RAGING.

The Mob Takes Calvin Snipes from Jail and Lynches Him, the Sheriff's Posse Follows, and the Two Armed Bodies Meet in a War of Extermination.

JOHNSTON CITY, Tenn., Jan. 5.—The report comes from Bakersville, N. C., that Calvin Snipes, the murderer of Isaac Osborne, was arrested at that town. In the struggle that took place eleven of the sheriff's posse were killed, as also were eleven of the mob. It was one of the bloodiest riots that ever occurred in North Carolina, and a messenger just from there says that both sides are still fighting and many more people are being killed. Those of the sheriff's posse who were killed are James Williams, Dan Ritchie, Robert Jones, Philip Sams, Elmer Johnson, William Reed, Tom Beckner, Wallace Laws, Nathan Pannel, George Hallifield and Tom Hale. Those of the mob are John Worth, William Osborne, Theodore Bullif, William Perry, John Osborne, Phillip Crowder, Jim Nance, Will Butler, Haggey Byrd, Owen Thomas and Jack Phillips. The whole country is going wild over the war between law and order, and recruits are arriving hourly from the adjoining cities for both sides.

One Murder Caused the Trouble.

Aaron Wiseman and Calvin Snipes were partners in an illicit distillery in Mitchell county, N. C., and he had told William Osborne and Isaac Osborne, two brothers, where the distillery was situated. William Osborne reported the distillery to the officials at Bakersville, N. C., and helped them to destroy it. Wiseman and Snipes suspected Isaac Osborne as the reporter. On the night of Aug. 27, 1892, Snipes and Wiseman, armed with Winchester rifles, went to the home of Isaac Osborne, called him out and riddled him with bullets. Wiseman and Snipes were arrested, but sufficient evidence could not be obtained against Wiseman and he was released. Snipes was *bound over to the superior court on cir*cumstantial evidence. He was placed in jail and after being confined about two weeks confessed to the killing.

Attacked by the Mob.

As threats of lynching were rife the sheriff mustered a small posse to guard Snipes in prison. A mob of 400 gathered in Bakersville and at once surrounded the jail. The sheriff barricaded the doors, but the mob battered in the main doors down with a log for a ram. The mob swarmed into the jail and overpowered the guards. The sheriff refused to tell where he had secreted the keys of the jail cell. The door was burst in and Snipes was dragged out and marched through the town and into a mountain pass where a halt was ordered.

The sheriff swore in half a hundred deputies and at once started in pursuit. He hoped to recover the prisoner, but before he reached the timber the mob had strung Snipes to the limb of a tree and was pouring volleys of bullets into his body when the sheriff and his men came up.

A Battle to the Death.

The brave sheriff ordered his men to arrest the ringleaders of the mob. The mob at once opened fire on the sheriff and his men, who as quickly replied with guns and revolvers. The combatants scattered among the trees, and a regular guerrilla war began. The battle lasted an hour or so before both sides paused to care for the wounded. Then the fight was renewed, and the latest news from the battlefield said that they were still fighting. Twenty-two fell before the first cessation of hostilities. Others have no doubt been killed since. The number of wounded could not be learned.

Deaf for a Year
Caused by
Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read:

"I have been deaf in my left ear as a result of catarrh. I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for many years. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians attend it, but no improvement was apparent. I read about Hood's Sarsaparilla, and concluded to give it a trial. After using one bottle I could hear some, and after the use of a second bottle my hearing was restored. I consider my case a remarkable one, and certainly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who have catarrh." HERMAN HICKS, 30 Carter Street, Rochester, N. Y.

AN ALLEGED BOOMERANG.

Canadians Believe a Blow at Their Railroads Would Injure Us More.

OTTAWA, Jan. 5.—Evidence secured here by the government goes to show that should President Harrison carry out his threat of withdrawing bonding privileges from Canada on goods in transit through the United States the effect would be even more serious against the interests of the American roads than against the Canadian railways.

This is borne out by the fact that the carrying of foreign goods through the United States last year amounted to $70,000,000. If nonintercourse was declared the United States roads would lose all this traffic.

The President Will Not Act.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Secretary Foster has reported in reply to a resolution passed by the house relating to the control of and regulations governing the shipment of goods over Canadian lines of transportation to and from the United States, under the provisions of section 3,006, Revised Statutes. The great consular seal business is not covered by the section named. It is understood that President Harrison will report the facts to the house and leave to congress the duty of changing existing regulations. The law gives him authority to impose new regulations or amend the old ones, but he will not use it.

Secretary Foster has reached the conclusion that, under all the conditions surrounding the case, it would not be wise to interfere with the consular seal traffic originating in the United States and destined to points in the United States.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—The reason why the commander of the Monongahela at Lisbon failed to accord official honors to Archbishop Jacobini, papal nuncio to the court of Portugal, was because the United States does not recognize the Vatican, and consequently Archbishop Jacobini had no official standing in the eyes of the Monongahela's commander.

MANY MORE NEW CASES

Twenty-three at New York in One Day.

FIVE OF THE PATIENTS ARE DEAD.

Among the Victims Is Kate Anderson, a Nurse—One New Patient Has Been Serving Soup to Tramps Who Are Now at Large—Much Alarm Felt.

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—There is no occasion for any wild eyed alarm, but the fact remains that the typhus fever has gained a footing in New York which involves some general danger to the community. That the board of health is fully aroused to this is at once evident and gratifying. Not only is the full force of the health department working night and day to stamp out the plague, but at the regular meeting a resolution was passed asking for $5,000 to be expended in employing thirty additional inspectors for thirty days, all of them to be physicians. The fact since of this action of the board is sufficient to show how serious the gentlemen of that body regard the situation.

Over Twenty New Cases.

Six deaths from typhus fever. Twenty-three more persons found to have the plague. That was the day's record. St. Vincent's hospital was the unfortunate patient. Kate Anderson, nurse in the almshouse on Blackwell's island, died of the scourge, and there were a number of additions to the list of infected houses. In all ninety-two cases have been reported since Dec. 1, 1892.

Aside from Kate Anderson there were four other deaths in the riverside hospital—Daniel Brennan, who was removed from Bellevue hospital on Tuesday; Henry Knebel, removed from the Homeopathic hospital on Ward's island on Monday; John Belsky and Henry Gray, sent from 34 Bayard street.

A case of typhus was removed from the rear tenement house at 202 West Nineteenth street. The victim, Jerome Baitgly, lived on the top floor with his wife and two children, who have probably caught the contagion. Baitgly did odd jobs for a living. Just before being taken sick he had been distributing circulars for the Stephen Merritt mission. He had also been ladling out soup to tramps and poor people in the mission house. Many of these have probably caught the scourge and are wandering about the streets. The situation is looked upon as quite alarming.

To Guard Against Cholera.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Representative Outhwaite, of Ohio, has taken up and in view of the danger of cholera invasion will press vigorously at this session of congress a proposition for the frequent exchange of soiled paper money for new notes. McGLYNN'S FAMOUS LETTER.

Bishop Keane Says It Was Forwarded by Cardinal Gibbons.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5.—Bishop Keane, being asked as to what he had to say in regard to the recent statement concerning the "suppressed letter" in the McGlynn case, said: "It is very singular that the parties who have so carefully reproduced the old story of 1887 have failed to give also to the public the official statement by which the story was at that time disposed of. On Sept. 12, 1887, a statement was given to the press of the country explaining the reasons why Dr. Burtsell's letter was not handed to the propaganda. Briefly stated, the letter was directed to Cardinal Gibbons, then in Rome, and not to the propaganda.

"Instead of 'suppressing' the contents of the letter, Cardinal Gibbons was very merciful to communicate them to the cardinal prefect of the propaganda. Cardinal Gibbons was in no way authorized to act as an intermediary between Dr. McGlynn and his archbishop, and therefore scrupulously avoided interfering in a matter in which he had no direct concern, and his visit to Rome had in view a different purpose."

SOME OF DEPEW'S STORIES.

Mr. Chauncey M. Depew is properly considered the great metropolitan joke fount dry. So it has come about that whenever the great American republic hungers and thirsts for a sparkling epigram and merry jest it goes to the surrounding foundry and leaves its order. The foundry does the rest. A careful statistician has figured it out that the foundry has been turning out funny stories for thirty years. The average is four a day. So in three decades it has tickled the ears with something like 43,800 stories.

Some people account for Mr. Depew's marvelous fund of stories by the fact that the crowds of daily visitors to the Grand Central station bring grist to his mill, and that, as he has a splendid memory, when he hears a good story he puts it in a mental pigeonhole to be taken out and used at an appropriate time. That is to a certain extent true. Then again many of his stories arise from incidents that happen in the office, on the street, in the railway train—anywhere. He takes liberties with the incidents when he frames them into stories. He embellishes them and exaggerates them. Some of his stories are pure and deliberate inventions.

Some are inspirations—humorous fictions concocted while on his feet addressing an assemblage. He invests them with such an air of probability, especially when he lays the scene "up at Peekskill," that men have come to him and said, "I remember first rate when that happened. I was living next door to the man you tell it of."

"You have a wonderful memory," says Mr. Depew with a grave face. And then perhaps he thinks, "We liars must stand by one another," and holds his peace.

The first story with which Mr. Depew made a public hit was one he originated when he was a Yale student. Since he first told it, thirty years ago, it has been often repeated, has been appropriated by other people who had no right to it, and has indeed, like many other stories that he invented, become common property. If it were to be told in public tomorrow it would be pronounced a chestnut and nobody would think of giving credit for it to its originator and original teller. Mr. Depew placed the scene not in Peekskill, but in a failing community where the "corner grocery" and the most successful kinds of culprits are regarded with high favor.

Story Number 1.

The wife of a fisherman was approached one day by a fellow worker with a statement that her husband had been drowned. Her grief was inconsolable, and her despair was heard through the whole village. She went into convulsions. Next day they came to her again with the somewhat alleviating announcement that he could have been found. "Why," she said, "it's condition is dreadful." "Well," she said, "tell me the worst." "Well," said they, "madam, he is covered with eels." "Covered with eels!" "Yes, madam; we hated to tell you, but it is true. He is covered with eels." "Well," said the widow, giving her views, "eel him again."

Another story that has gone all over the country is about a spotted conch dog that wouldn't wash:

Story Number 2.

The husband of a lady in Peekskill got rich in the foundry business, having been previously a molder. So the wife set up a carriage. Some one told her she ought to have a coach dog; otherwise the establishment would not be complete. So she came to a dog fancier in New York and bought a nice spotted conch dog. A week or so afterward she was out one day and got caught in a tremendous rainstorm, which washed all the spots off the dog. In great fury she went back with the dog to the dog merchant and said: "You scoundrel! Why did you cheat me by selling me this dog as a conch dog?"

Said he: "It's all right, madam. I did not cheat you. He is a couch dog, but there is an umbrella goes with him, which I forgot."

Here is a story Mr. Depew tells of Georgia:

Story Number 3.

*I went to a hotel in Geor*gia one day and said to the clerk, "Where shall I autograph?"

"Autograph!" said the clerk.

"Yes; sign my name, you know."

"Oh, right here." I signed my name in the register. In a little while in came some Georgia crackers. One of them advanced to the desk.

"Will you autograph?" asked the clerk, with a smile.

"Cert'nly," said the Georgia cracker, beaming. "Mine's eye. What's yours, fellows?"

The clerk treated with good grace. Then he leaned back and glared at me. I felt sorry for him and was somewhat conscience stricken. "Too bad," I said. "This is what comes from speaking a foreign language in one's own country."

No, it is a story by which Mr. Depew shocked an English duchess. She was one of those insular old ladies who are very anxious to know if all those dreadful things told about America are really so. Mr. Depew took her in to dinner.

"Is it really true," she asked, "that your divorce laws are so lax that American courts sometimes grant divorces in half an hour? I have been told so by people who have been there."

"Indeed it is not true. Such stories are told for their own countrymen who have been in the United States, but by Americans who delight in shocking the English people by outrageous stories about Americans. I know of only one state and one town in my country where the divorce laws are so scandalously lax as they describe. That is a small town in Indiana.

"There are two great American railways which have very luxurious trains, fast trains, which we call limited expresses. One of these trains passes over the New York Central railway, of which I have the honor to be the president, and the other over the Pennsylvania. It is customary, I believe, one half hour before the limited express on the Pennsylvania road reaches that town, for the conductor, or guard, as he is called in Britain, to announce that that train will stop half an hour at the next station for those desiring to obtain divorces, and that the court house is at the right of the station and directly across the street.

"So many Americans, I regret to say, avail themselves of this escape from matrimony that the Pennsylvania limited express is never without passengers. Sometimes, if the divorce has been mutually agreed upon by husband and wife, they travel together in the greatest luxury and good will imaginable, and where either party intends to marry again it is, I believe, not uncommon for the new bride and bridegroom elect to accompany a third party the two persons about to obtain their divorce. The court is always in session when the train arrives, so that the petitions may be filed, cases argued and decrees entered well within the limits of half an hour, which the railroad allows.

"A clergyman has his office next door to the court house, so that one and sometimes both of the divorced persons may be united to others seeking conjugal happiness immediately after the late marriage has been dissolved, so at the end of half an hour the Chicago limited resumes its flight west, and the couples who came to the court house together in the morning are already off on their second honeymoon." The duchess threw up both hands in horror and said, "A civilization which permits such outrages as that is simply dreadful!"

At a Yale alumni dinner held shortly after Andrew Carnegie's declaration that a college education did not do a man any good and was a waste of time Mr. Depew remarked:

Story Number 5.

A college friend of mine translated from the law to railroading, rescued a bankrupt corporation from ruin and placed it upon a prosperous basis and then administered its affairs with consummate ability. When he returned twenty years afterward to his country home and sat as of old upon the nail keg of the corner grocery the wise men of the neighborhood gathered about him, and one said, "Well, Bill, what are you getting a salary of more than $10,000 a year?"

My friend said it was true.

"Well," said the local oracle, "that shows what cheek and circumstances will do for a man."

Eli Perkins attributes the following story to Mr. Depew. He says that he once got talking with Depew about the subject of supply and demand. He asked the president of the Central if an instance had ever occurred when the price of an article did not depend on supply and demand. Mr. Depew said:

Story Number 6.

Well, the other day I stepped up to a German butcher and out of curiosity asked, "What is the price of sausages?"

"Twenty cents a pound," he said.

"You asked twenty-five cents this morning," I replied.

"Ya. Dot was when I had some. Now I ain't got none. I sells 'em for twenty cents. Dot makes such a reputation for selling cheap, und I don't have noddings."

"You see, I did not want any sausage, and the man did not have any. There was no demand and no supply, and still the price of sausage went down.

Story Number 7.

This story about Mr. Greeley has been often told, but Mr. Depew was the first to tell it, and he was a witness of the scene.

To interrupt Horace Greeley when he was in the throes of bringing forth an editorial was a danger which no friend, no enemy, none but a fool, dared to encounter. I was once in his editorial sanctum when the fool was there. He was one of those itinerant and persistent gentlemen with a subscription book. He was canvassing a while old Horace was writing away with his pen up his chin. Horace had a habit when any one would interrupt kicking, and so he kicked at the subscription fiend. Finally, when he saw that he could not get rid of the intruder by this means, he stopped in the middle of a sentence, turned around and said very tragicly in that shrill voice of his:

"What do you want? State it quick and state it in the fewest possible words."

"Well," said the subscription fiend, "I want a subscription, Mr. Greeley, to prevent the cremation of my fellow human beings from going to hell."

"I don't give you a d——d cent," said Greeley. "There don't half enough go there now."

Mr. Depew has done good service by his stories, not only for his party, but for his railroad. Here is one of his reminiscences, which embodies a good story and tells how he applied it:

Story Number 8.

There was an antimonopoly party in the state. The railroads were the special objects of attack. They came to Albany in great numbers and were assisted by some commercial bodies from New York. A public hearing was heard upon a bill which would have affected the railroads. All the members and lobbyers were present and a large audience besides. After the orators in favor of the bill had made their arguments I made a long and exhaustive reply in defense of the railroad companies. Feeling ran very high, and my address did not produce much effect. Then I told this story:

A New Bedford whaler had a very taciturn skipper and a mate who treated the officers and crew very badly. The mate, who was on the lookout, called: "Thar she blows, an' thar she breaches." The captain growled, "I don't see no blows, and I don't see no breaches." As the mate described the whale more clearly he yelled more confidently, "Thar she blows, an' thar she breaches," and received in gruffer tones the same answer. The mate, being confident of his whale, sang out once more with great enthusiasm, and the captain said, "Mate, if you think thar she blows an thar she breaches, you can lower the boat an go for her."

The mate's capture was soon alongside of the ship and fried out eighty barrels of sperm oil. The mollified captain said: "Mate, when we get back to New Bedford you will be mentioned in the report. You will get an increase in salary. Maybe you will be promoted." And the mate said: "Cappen, I don't want no promotion. All I want is common civility, and that of the d——dest commonest kind."

The whole legislature burst into long continued, uncontrollable laughter. The bill was laughed out of the house; it was laughed out of the senate. The story went into every paper in the state, big and little, daily and weekly. It became the commonplace of every barroom and the incentive to a discussion of the railway question in every corner grocery, and the result was the bringing together of the anglerailroad and railroad people by the lapsing of the demands on the one side and concessions on the other. Here is a concluding reminiscence:

Story Number 9.

I presided at the state convention three years ago, and in describing the political forces which I learned nothing and whom experience taught nothing I said they reminded me of a small bay of Pocatello children, not unwandering among the children's graves in the churchyard eating green apples and singing, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." I heard of a delegate at that convention who went at the fifteenth of his wits a year or so afterward, and who, when the minister gave out the hymn, had to ask the audience at the convention suddenly burst upon him and broke out into a laugh. I have been told that my life would be sacrificed if I ever entered his town.—New York World.

Two Business Women.

One of the many great schemes plying between San Francisco and the ports on the opposite side of the bay is owned and managed by a woman. Some years ago Mrs. Sims' father became an invalid and was obliged to put his shipping business in charge of an agent. Through the dishonesty and carelessness of agents the business had ceased to be profitable, when Mrs. Sims determined to go on deck herself. Since then has personally superintended the stevedores and truckmen, bossed the gangs of sailors, given orders to the captain, and managed the entire business to keep the tally of the rawhides that not infrequently form part of the cargo, negotiating for the toughest and superintending repairs at dry dock. Syracuse has another successful business woman in rather a different line. Several years ago this woman's husband failed in business, and on account of poor health was unable to support his family. Assuming the burden of the family, she began in a small way to knit goods for the wholesale trade, and to-day, through good management, a prosperous manufacturer, employing 1,000 women at work, which may in most cases be done at home.—New York Sun.

Real Womanliness.

There is among most of a certain temperament a confusion of ideas as to womanliness and sentimentality. They seem to be under the impression that real womanliness includes helpless little ways and terms of endearment and in that outward display of affection which the world will always regard coldly or unsparingly. Those qualities which radically distinguish woman from man are qualities of character, of mind, of soul. They are matters of inheritance very frequently and in any event are traits improved by cultivation, by self control and by unceasing vigilance and discipline of life.

Affection with its tender manifestations, its own peculiar vernacular, is something so sacred that it should be forever guarded from the eyes of the scoffing and censorious multitude. It is no more intended for the platform, for the routine of the public meeting, for interpolation in the minutes of the session of a convention than are the silks and jewels of festal array are meant to be dragged through the dust of the highways, worn in the ordinary avocations and in the light of noon.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Growth of a Flower Garden.

In a little village in Sussex there is a veritable milky way of lilies, where thousands of white lilies and elegant chalice Arums, and where women gardeners tend and pack and ship the fragrant product. Twenty-five years ago a single lily bulb was given to Mrs. Bates, a farmer's daughter, who tended the gift with the devotion women bestow on flowers, and when six bean bulbs had resulted from the original one, and Mrs. Bates, finding that her children, as she called them, had outgrown the sunny window where they grew, she planted them in the corner of a field. Ten years ago a daughter of Mrs. Bates, inspired by the enterprise of the times, set some bulbs to the London market, and now, in association with her sisters, has made the Bates lilies famous for their beauty and perfection. The daughters are keen business women, interviewing the chief buyers at the London market and selling without the interference of agents to private customers. Bulbs and cut flowers are sent to the Riviera. The average produce is 800 dozens a week, which are packed by women in the garden.—London Letter.

Women Wear Out Too Young.

"I could never understand why women who have passed the heyday of their youth try to conceal their age and pretend to be younger than they really are," said John F. Bliss, a guest at the Southern. "Of course every woman would like to be young and beautiful, but turning the clock backward is the most illogical thing they can do. When I see a woman who looks to be forty-five or fifty trying to be skittish or to wear what she will look like when she has numbered her twoscore years. When I see one who looks ten thirty admitting that she is forty I mentally help reflecting that she will be charming at sixty. If concealing her age made a woman look young, if it kept wrinkles and gray hairs at bay, I could understand the practice, but when its only effect is to create the impression that she never was fresh and pretty and then an Egyptian mummy would be a beauty compared with her old age I confess that it is too much for me. But logic is not woman's forte."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Homemade Dusters.

There is a way of making long handled dusters so that they are nearly or quite as good as feather dusters. To manufacture these dusters it is necessary to be content to get several very large sheets of tissue paper. Fold the paper, which may be of any color, until it consists of about twenty-five thicknesses deep. A large sheet of thick paper will fold into perhaps twenty-four thicknesses. Now cut it exactly as if you were cutting paper dolls, making the fringe about four inches deep. Have the fringe strips very narrow, letting them be scarcely wider than a match. When you have cut the full length of your paper strip bind it securely around the stick and trim with ribbons.—Exchange.

Afraid of "Roasting."

"The tendency in cooking schools," says an authority in this domestic science, "is toward the survival of the fittest. The work is said not to be a temptation to let such an excel prepare it, rather than risk the wasteful failures of the inexperienced, who are the doubly handicapped." Is it?

Other than cooking school managers may take a hint from this. Little daughters are always beating to dabble in cake and dough, and mothers are frowning on their yearnings. Let the small daughter "learn" if they do spoil some good materials. In cooking, more perhaps than in anything else, do our "dear girls" love to prove "stepping stones."—New York Times.

Carpet Sweeping Without Dust.

When a thicker nap you can sweep the dirt. Let carpet without raising much of a dust by placing outside the door of the room to be swept a "sail of clear, cold water, wet your broom, knock it against the side of the bucket to get out all the drops, sweep a couple of yards, then rinse off the broom again, continue the until you have gone over the entire surface. If the carpet is very much soiled the water should be changed several times. Slightly moistened Indian Meal has been used by the best housewives. Some, if not all of these methods, is also excellent as a dust settler.—Exchange.

In the Home.

Woman is at her best when she surrounds in making a home—a house made pretty, cosy and charming, not necessarily with costly but with tasteful ornamentation arranged with her own deft fingers; a bright, cheerful fireside; everything scrupulously clean. Find a true hearted woman in this position, and surely she is then at her best.—New York World.

ADVICE TO NED.

"It is very delightful to love, we are told;
But what can I do," said he,
"If the maiden I happen to love be cold,
And her people don't care for me?"

Well, among the first things I would recommend,
That bear on the subject at all,
Is to make her small bills on your taily bought friend,
So he'll take himself off when you call.

And agree with her father's political views,
Will the mother's religious belief,
And you'll find their consent they will hardly refuse—
If your worldly goods be not too brief.

Then if while the sun shines you wish to make hay,
Let your visits be short, for you know
'Tis far wiser to go while she wants you to stay,
Than to stay till she wants you to go.

And if she be pretty, admire her great mind.
In proof'tis needless to quibbling or feature,
If her commonplace sayings are quite witty you find,
You'll be held most favoring of creatures.

Other fellows have said she was lovely before,
But if your demeanor be clever,
You may show to your most hated rival the door
And make her adore you forever.

But if she be plain, though possessed of some wit,
Let her know you consider her pretty;
To say nothing, "Your smile, dear, with beauty is lit,"
Will go farther than crying "How witty!"

If you'd make a most lasting impression, dear Ned,
Dilate on her beauty and grace;
For she'd probably give all the sense in her head
For the none on a pretty girl's face.

MILLIONS OF THEM IN THE NEW ISSUE OF POSTAGE STAMPS.

The First Assignment of the Columbian Series of Postage Stamps Received by Postmaster Pope Yesterday—The Invention of Postage Stamps.

Postmaster Pope received the first assignment of the new postage stamps yesterday. They are larger than the old series and are printed with brown ink. Appropriate to the Columbian Exposition, printed on the face of the stamp is a portrait of Columbus and the priests at their landing at San Salvador.

In connection with the above the following may be of interest:

"The invention of postage stamps is due to a printer, James Chalmers, of Dundee, Scotland, who died in 1853. England, fifty-two years ago, introduced the new system of preparing letter postage and according to a decree of December 31st, 1839, issued the first stamps which were to be put before the public on May 6th of the following year, as noted above. A year later they were introduced in the United States and Switzerland, and within three years had become common in Bavaria, Belgium and France. One of the most important and valuable collections of postage stamps and other postal devices in the world is in the German Imperial Post office Museum at Berlin. It takes eighty men and women to make a postage stamp. First the white paper is cut into sheets, each large enough for a hundred stamps. The stamps on each sheet are counted twenty-six times to make sure the number is correct. The printer counts and passes the sheet to the gummer, the gummer gums the back, and having counted, gives it to the perforator, who divides the stamps by rows of little holes, not forgetting to count. It is surprising how quickly and accurately the hands can work. Seven hundred millions of postage stamps are made every year in the United States. New York City uses eight millions a month."

Will Reach You.

At the time of the blizzard in 1888 THE NEWS alone held out and kept open communication with its readers, when every other publication here succumbed. It was thought by the way the snow came down early this morning that there was to be another blizzard. Had there been one, THE NEWS was even better prepared than before. We could have held out for a week at least, and by the original methods we devised to get out of the difficulty the last time could probably have kept communication open even though the snow was up to the second story windows, as it was in many instances in 1888.

The loved ones at home and the breadwinners abroad may therefore give themselves no unnecessary concern, for THE NEWS spares neither pains nor expense to surmount difficulties in such emergencies so as to relieve any anxiety. We glory in such achievements—in winning where others give up the task as hopeless, and we remind our readers in advance so that if a blizzard should come they may know—if they do not already know—what to expect from THE NEWS.

May Return to this City.

The Union County Board of Freeholders met at Elizabeth yesterday afternoon and elected John C. Blore (Dem.) of Rahway, Warden of the county jail for five years in place of Warden Charles W. Mr. Dodd was formerly Chief of Police of this city. He owns property here and may make his home in the "Queen City" again.

CHOLERA BACILLI.

EXPERIMENTS MADE BY TWO EMINENT PROFESSORS.

The Introduction of a Large Quantity of Cholera Bacilli Into a Healthy Body Does Not Necessarily Produce Cholera.

Mr. Rudolph Hering, who was employed a few years ago by our city Council as an expert engineer, has the following timely communication in the Engineering Record:

EXPERIMENTS WITH CHOLERA BACILLI AND POLLUTED WATERS.

New York, Dec. 16, 1892.

To the Editor of the Engineering Record.

Sir:—I have noticed in the New York papers of Dec. 11th, 1892, an account of experiments made in Munich by Prof. Pettenkofer and Prof. Emmerich regarding cholera bacilli. Said professors (later) obtained a supply of the finest bacilli from their discovery, had them cultivated up to what is believed to be the most virulent condition, and drank off a cubic centimeter of them, having previously neutralized that the dose would contain at least a milliard of bacilli. To make sure of testing them all he rinsed out the flask with distilled water, afterwards and drank that also. This wholesale dreadful mixture tasted, he says, like the purest water; was taken on an empty stomach; and in order to give it fair play, or more than fair play, he took it at the same time a dose of bicarbonate of soda, so as to neutralize the acid in the stomach which is destructive to the life of the bacilli. After this heroic proceeding, which took place on October 7, in the presence of fifteen students, the said professor, went about his business as usual. Nothing occurred for four days, but after that a little indigestion and diarrhoea set in and lasted the middle of a week. That was all. The professor ate and drank and worked precisely as usual and took no medicine whatever. His experiment was followed by a similar one on the part of Professor Emmerich. This gentleman, after taking his quantum of bacilli on the 17th of October, purposely indulged in some "errors of diet," such as supper of roses soup with baked apples and veal cutlets, down to pretty nearly a gallon of Munich beer, in order to disturb the children, which was presumably rather abashed by its failure on Professor Pettenkofer. The result was, or it may have been, the beer seemed to have the desired effect, which is not altogether surprising. The disturbance set up in Professor Emmerich's interior began earlier, and was considerably more marked than in the case of his distinguished colleague. In fact, within a couple of days it was severe enough to make a little medicine seem advisable. A few powders of opium and tannin were administered, and once more the cholera was pacified. In the course of a week from the beginning Prof. Emmerich was quite well again. He had not felt ill at all in the previous stage, and he had no pain or depression, and his appetite was excellent. And yet infection spread from both the said Prof. Pettenkofer's case the comma bacillus did not perish ignominiously on the floor, but produced, in fact, myriads multiplied on a very creditable scale.

When reading the above I was reminded of a statement made to me by Mr. Allen Hazen, of the Lawrence Experiment Station, that he had repeatedly drunk some of the effluent filtered from one of their sewage purification tanks. It was the tank, if I remember rightly, that furnished the purest effluent, and from which all of the bacteria had been removed. After the first draught, he had a slight attack of diarrhoea during the following night, but attributed the result to some unusual condition in the effluent or more likely in my (his) food. On subsequent occasions there was no effect. Several members having been told, though rather reluctantly, on account of the severe attack of drinking the effluent water in one case had been followed by diarrhoea.

These facts are interesting, and allow of some conclusions to be drawn from them—namely:

1. That we have still very little positive information regarding the "true invirulence" of the sanitary condition of water polluted or previously polluted by sundry bacteria.

2. That the introduction of a large quantity of cholera bacilli into a healthy human body does not necessarily produce cholera, even under apparently favorable circumstances.

3. That the introduction of cholera bacilli may in middle aged and old persons (also venerable doctor will pardon this adjective), be followed by diarrhoea.

4. That the introduction of water which was previously sewage, but from which practically all bacteria, as far as present knowledge enables us to judge, and also the excess of albuminoid ammonia found in sewage, had been removed, likewise may be followed by diarrhoea.

I am still further reminded, from facts quoted by Dr. Thresher and others, that a normal condition may affect symptoms of digestion and assimilation and produce loss of appetite or indigestion, accompanied by diarrhoea or constipation, as the case may be, or nausea or pain. It is known that fear or fright is often followed by a movement or loosening of the bowels, in animals as well as in human beings. Whether this was the case in any of the instances above mentioned, I have not ascertained. Such facts point to sanitary progress when doctors and other sanitarians can devote more time, and more of their scientific energy to unravel the mysteries of the sanitary aspects of water pollution.

RUDOLPH HERING.

Was Going to Keep His Boots.

A woman calling for a marshal, this morning, caused quite a crowd to gather in front of a little store on Somerset street. The trouble, it seems, was over a pair of boots. A colored man had purchased them from the woman's husband, on the installment plan. He did not pay the full amount of the purchase price, and owed a balance of ninety cents. This morning he returned with the boots to have them installed. The proprietor threatened to keep them until the balance was paid, whereupon the "sweetheart of Sigma" called for the marshal to arrest the proprietor. The calling of the marshal by the woman seems to have a soothing effect on the infuriated man, and the matter in dispute was settled amicably before the arrival of the representatives of the law.

Dyer of South Orange were present.

The officers of the Daughters of the Revolution, General Society, all arrived at Mrs. Ward's residence shortly before noon. Luncheon was delivered in honor commemoration of the Battle of Trenton, on Dec. 26, 1776, and the battle of Princeton, fought Jan. 3, 1777.

PULLED A BRIDGE APART.

Railroad Companies' Contest Over the Morris Canal.

The Lehigh Valley and Jersey Central Railroad Companies came to open conflict Wednesday night over the Morris Canal water right at the foot of Jersey avenue, Jersey City. The Lehigh owns the canal, but the local Street and Water Board recently gave the Central permission to span it at Jersey avenue with a bridge.

The temporary structure had been completed Wednesday, and, like better to block the water way, the Central had a scow to the bridge in the middle of the stream.

The Lehigh Valley people permitted the work to go on without interruption till it had been completed. Late Wednesday night, however, it whizzed a heavy locomotive up to the disputed territory and demolished the work. Great bawsers were fastened to the bridge trusses and the locomotive tugged away at them till the structure had been pulled apart.

DID IT THEMSELVES.

The Way They Open Streets in Keyport.

Property owners at Keyport tired of the delay of the Board of Commissioners sent out a gang of men early Tuesday morning to open Second street. The men had picks, shovels, axes, saws and hammers. They went to work razing dwellings, barns, outbuildings, fences and trees. Before the town authorities knew what was going on and had taken steps to stop it, the street was open.

The jolly outlaws then, formed in parade, marched triumphantly through the new thoroughfare and dedicated it to the town.

Yesterday the property-owners who objected to opening the street organized a meeting. Judge Alfred Walling was authorized to begin legal proceedings against the alleged trespassers for damages.

Independent Gun Club.

The members of the Independent Gun Club of this city, turned out in large numbers on Wednesday to witness a pigeon-shooting contest between Charles Smith and William Pierson. The former is one of the crack shots of the State. The match was at fifteen live birds each, revised American Association rules governing. The birds were a selected lot of country birds, and were a very fast lot. Smith proved an easy winner, scoring 30 to the loser's 25.

After the match the members shot a ten-bird event, with the following result: M. F. Lindsley, 8, Charles Smith, 8; D. Terry, 8; William Pierson, 8; T. H. Keiser, 7, William Lelz, 6; J. McCullough, 6; William Terry, 4. In a five-bird sweep, $5 entrance: C. Smith and William Pierson tied for first money, with five killed. Smith won on the shoot off. Second money was won by D. Terry with four killed. M. F. Lindsley scoring three and W. Lair two.

Aluminum is Plentiful.

According to a recent article in the Electrical World, there is now times more aluminium in the world than there is of iron, lead, copper, zinc, nickel, gold, and silver combined. It is reported that Dr. Meyer of Berlin has discovered a process by which the metal can be produced at about four cents per pound. In 1886 the price was $8,000 per pound, and the price to-day is about $1 per pound.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Heat Ammunium.

This beautiful and valuable metal was at first nearly killed by the extravagant claims made for it. At present it is slowly recovering from the depression that was caused when it was found that aluminium could not be depended on to absolutely take the place of every other known metal, and mankind is learning what it really can do.

Its most useful field has been found in making alloys with copper, iron and steel especially. It adds strength and lightness. The fact that you can keep a piece of aluminium in the midst of sour gas, sulphur and phosphorus for years and it will not tarnish is one of its most valuable qualities. It is better than silver, therefore, for leaf gilding. An inventor has lately succeeded in making of it a coating for plating iron. The possibilities opened by the prospect of making iron implements with a finish that will keep them from rusting are sufficient to insure a great use for the new metal in this direction. Our coins of smallest value ought to be undoubtedly made of aluminium.

It is true that we are not building houses and ships of this shining metal that is, not yet. But an aluminium yacht has been completed for a gentleman in Paris in which every part is of this metal. The yacht is a steam vessel forty-three feet long, with only 2 feet 2 inches fresh water draft. It is perhaps not too much to predict that a few generations more aluminium airships will be plowing the ether as regularly as the ocean greyhounds now plow the salt seas. In Chicago a 16-story building has already been planned that will be upon the outside one bright sheet of shining aluminium. To give stability the inside walls will be of heavier material, but the outside will be made of this metal, there will need no paint or coating and will be as bright, except for the Chicago coal smoke, fifty years after it is built as it is the first day.

In house decoration the new metal is finding a distinct place. Surgeons use it for artificial limbs in various appliances. Shining household and cooking utensils nearly as light as paper, have already appeared. But if anybody tells you that a ring made of an aluminium alloy worn upon the finger will cure rheumatism inform him that this story is a great big whopper.

Suppress These Unpleasant Cranks.

The crank who showered vitriol upon ladies dresses in the street is known to fame. The next fellow got a step beyond that when he stood upon the street corner and squirted ink all over them. If a dowdy dressed woman in a rusty gown passed, that had no attraction for him. If a dress had to be new, elegant and fashionable, and, above all, costly.

Earlier in fame's record than either of these is the rowdy who stands on the street and addresses insulting remarks to women. The ink and vitriol hurlers get caught and sentenced to the penitentiary occasionally; the crank who only talks seldom does. Ladies are only concerned to pass by quickly and get away from the annoyance. But they are wrong. They ought to walk quietly on till they meet the next policeman and turn back with him and have the wretch arrested. One fellow held up to scorn and punishment would frighten from the street hundreds of the cowards who insult women.

Most extraordinary of all, though, is the bean shooting crank who has popped up in Chicago. It is suggested that he is an insane man from Boston. But he does not seem to be crazy. However that may be, he takes his stand on a fashionable promenade, just where ladies must cross a street. As they lift their gowns out of the dust he shoots a big lima bean at their ankles from a rubber sling, hitting them with a stinging pain. It would be a curious study in psychology to investigate what sort of a mind, if any, a creature has who could do a thing like that.

That was a beautiful thought of a California woman—to plant a heliotrope hedge all around her yard. This hedge is at Ventura, Cal., is 200 feet long and a thing of beauty and fragrance in that soft southern climate the year round. The plants are attached to a wire support six feet high and present to the sidewalk a wall of purple flowers. The sweet odor is diffused through all that part of the town. The originator of this pleasing idea is Mrs. Shepard, who says that hedge belongs to the town. All are at liberty to pluck flowers at will, and the more they are gathered the more this wonderful hedge produces. It is a real attraction to the city. Heliotrope hedges will not grow in every part of the Union, but some kind of a flowering hedge will.

The prompt and wise action of Archbishop Ireland in exposing the fraud of the alleged miracle window at Canton, Minn., will be appreciated by every one except those who intended to make gain out of the deception. It is exactly what might be expected from a man who goes to fix for the American public schools.

One of the largest dams in the world is now in process of construction across a small river in India for irrigation purposes. It will be, including the parapet, 179 feet high and will be built of concrete. At the bottom the wall is to be 800 feet thick; at the top 12 feet thick.

CONEY ISLAND OUTDONE

Her Big Elephant Will Not Compare with Chicago's.

THE NEW YORK LITERARY EXHIBIT

Interesting Plan of World's Fair Work Outlined by Woman Manager Mrs. Frederick P. Bellamy—Every Woman Writer in the State to Be Represented.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—Chicago is to have a gigantic elephant, larger than the one at Coney Island, which is only 100 feet high. A specimen, called by Frank Hall, who with J. Mason Kelley, the Brooklyn architect, constructed the Coney Island affair, will begin work on the new animal building, to be located near the fair grounds, in a short time. The steel mammoth will be 125 feet high to the ridge of the back and 200 feet to the top of the howdah. The trunk will be swung by machinery, the ears will flap, the eyes will roll and the tail will wag.

Within the trunk will be a calliope to simulate the beast's roar. There will be two floors in this $250,000 elephant—the main floor and grand promenade and dancing hall, with a gallery, and the "stomach floor," where will be located a great restaurant. The animal will be lighted by numerous windows and an abundance of electric lights. The projectors are certain that the elephant can be constructed in three months.

New York's Big Literary Exhibit.

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—When the state board of woman managers for the World's fair was appointed to take part in the task of showing the many directions in which the Empire State is powerful and leading, Mrs. Frederick P. Bellamy, of Brooklyn, one of its members, was given charge of the exhibit of women's literary work.

The exhibit will be in three classes. In the first will be all books written by women born in or residents of the state, of which the Wednesday Afternoon club has been appointed to take charge; in the second, specimens of all work in clubs and classes, of which the famous Sorosis club is to have charge; in the third, specimens of all work in the press and periodicals, to be collected by the Buffalo Graduates' association.

The work of the clubs is to be presented in one set of folios; that of press and periodicals in another, with a roll of the names of books and their authors, each department to be edited by some woman eminent in her particular line.

These folios are to be placed in illuminated covers designed by Mrs. Candace Wheeler, of the state board of directors of the Woman's building. The plan for collecting the material is to appoint a woman in each county to whom it may be sent, who will forward it to the various committees, who in turn will report to Mrs. Bellamy. It is hoped that every woman in the state who has ever written a book, contributed to press or periodicals or in club or class work will send something of her work to the committee.

Where Books Will Be Received.

The Wednesday Afternoon club, which is to collect the books, has subscribed $500 toward the work and established a bureau at the Bible House at Third avenue and Ninth street, New York, for the receipt of books, and has installed a secretary to take charge of and acknowledge them and supervise the necessary classification. The Wednesday Afternoon club, of which Mrs. Bellamy is a member, was organized in 1888, and its membership is made up of leading women in the social set in the city of New York. Mrs. L. G. Runkle, the talented writer and critic connected with the house of Harper Bros., is the president.

The Sorosis club is too well known to need description here.

The Graduates' association, of Buffalo, was founded in 1878, from the alumnæ roll of the celebrated Buffalo seminary reached its twenty-fifth anniversary. The graduates considered this a suitable way to commemorate that event. It was the first woman's club in Buffalo, and has held its own as the leading literary society among those which have since come into existence.

After occupying rooms in the school building for eight years it was decided to build a chapter house, and in 1884, five months after the ceremony was laid, the building was ready, the first chapter house for women ever built in the country. It has a hall suitable for lectures and concerts, and when cleared is an ideal ballroom.

Mrs. Bellamy is the sister-in-law of the famous author of "Looking Backward."

Famous Writers to Serve.

The following women are to serve on the various committees of the proposed exhibit as described, representing the aristocracy of letters in New York city and state: Mrs. L. G. Runkle, Miss Catherine Gilder, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, Mrs. Margaret Sangster, Mrs. E. P. Terhune, Mrs. Burton Harrison, Mrs. Kate Upson Clarke, Mrs. Jennie Croly, Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, Mrs. Lyman Abbott, Miss Edith M. Thomas, Mrs. Richard Henry Stoddard, Mrs. R. W. Gilder, Mrs. Rossiter Johnson, Mrs. Whitfield S. Moody, Miss Charlotte Mulligan, Mrs. Christine Terhune Herrick, Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller, Miss Helen Gray Cone, Mrs. John Sherwood, Mrs. Candace Wheeler, Miss Augusta Larned, Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickinson, Mrs. Alice Wellington Rollins, Miss Kate Hillard, Mrs. Kate Douglass Wiggin, Miss Isabel Hapgood, Mrs. Alison Goodwin, Miss Helen S. Conant.

The exhibit will be placed in the room equipped by the state board of woman managers as a contribution from the women of New York. They chose the library and appropriated $5,000 of the $25,000 set apart for their use toward this object.

MORE POWER FOR SATOLLI.

He Has Just Received New Duties from the Pope.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The interesting fact is ascertained from unquestionable sources of information that the European mail delivered at the Catholic university brought to Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate, instructions widening his powers and imposing upon him new duties and responsibilities, which will permanently occupy his attention to the exclusion of all but the most urgent business for some time to come.

The statement of a Neapolitan newspaper as to Mgr. Satolli's alleged recall is authoritatively denied here. The circulation among priests in New York, Brooklyn and New Jersey of a protest against the efforts being made by a Catholic newspaper to antagonize the legate's mission was brought to Mgr. Satolli's attention, and he said that while he recognized the sincerity and devotion that inspired this movement, he thought it better it should go no further. No one, he said, could doubt the loyal obedience of the American clergy to the decisions of the holy see through its authorized representative.

AGAINST THE ANTIOPTION BILL.

Senator Vilas Denounces It as Futurism—The Immigration Question.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—The feature of the day's session of the senate was the three hours' speech of Senator Vilas, of Wisconsin, against the antioption bill, to which he outlined the constitutional objections which in his opinion precluded the possibility of its passage by the senate. He denounced it as a flagrant advance to centralization and as involving the characteristics of the most odious paternalism.

During a colloquy between him and Mr. Washburn, who has charge of the bill, the latter was asked whether he would accept an amendment which would confine the measure to operations that were absolutely gambling and in which there was to be no delivery, but the Minnesota senator declined to consider whether the proposition affirmatively, remarking that he did not believe that any such restriction would be effective. The bill has gone over till Monday next, and the bills in relation to quarantine and immigration have the floor.

ON THE SENATE FLOOR.

Republicans to Fight for Control to the End.

THE STOCKBRIDGE MEN SUCCEED.

Their Man Nominated for Senator in Michigan—Henry Watterson Says That Senator Carlisle Will Accept the Treasury Portfolio.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Which political party will control the United States senate after March 4? This is the question which more than any other is now troubling the minds of statesmen and politicians, of men who have places and want to retain them, and of men who have policies which they wish to see carried into practical legislation.

For these reasons there was exceptional interest shown in the caucus of Republican senators here. The caucus was secret, but enough of its discussions has become known to make it evident that the Republicans are determined to fight to the last ditch for the control of the committees. This does not mean that the Republican senators dissent from the opinion so frankly expressed by Chairman Cheney, of the Republican national committee, that the Democrats are almost sure to gain control of the senate.

To Fight on the Floor.

It does mean, however, that wherever there is equal ground for a contest that contest will be carried through the election committee and will be fought out on the floor of the senate.

The alleged purchase of votes in the Stockbridge senate will be fully investigated, and if there shall be any corruption actually perpetrated in those legislatures this month the facts will be made plain to the people of the country.

In spite of the authorized statement by Colonel Lamont it is alleged that Mr. Cleveland has caused his personal preferences as to choice of senators in at least a dozen Democratic states to be communicated by confidential messengers to political leaders.

Kansas Republicans Jubilant.

TOPEKA, Jan. 6.—The supreme court has decided the Peabo-Rosenthal legislative contest against Rosenthal, Democrat. It is likely that the decision in the Colfey county case will leave the matter as it is, as the principles of law are involved as in the Rosenthal case. The decision is a great victory for the Republicans and virtually assures to them the organization of the house. Senator John Martin, a lawyer of Topeka, is the Populist choice and will receive the caucus nomination for senator.

Ex-Gov. Thomas, general counsel of the Missouri Pacific railroad, is also a candidate for the senate. He is a Democrat, but Republicans will vote for him to a man to defeat Judge Martin or any Populist if it seems impossible for them to elect a senator.

Smith Seated in New Hampshire.

CONCORD, Jan. 6.—Governor John P. Smith was inaugurated. His address dealt principally with the good effects of the law restricting savings banks' investments and of the withdrawal of foreign insurance companies. The subject of prohibition and lack of a strong friendly public sentiment for it and a recommendation of a salaried commissioner of labor were features of the address.

Stockbridge Wins in Michigan.

LANSING, Jan. 6.—The first ballot taken at the Republican joint caucus of legislature resulted: Stockbridge, 46; Loon, 21; Hubbell, 10; Harsenf, 2; Grunsell, 2; O. L. Spalding, 2; J. G. Fitzgerald, 1; B. W. Cutcheon, 1; James O'Donnell, 1. Then followed a general stampede to Stockbridge, followed by a motion to make the nomination unanimous, which was carried.

The Colorado Deadlock.

DENVER, Jan. 6.—The senate has received but into a hat vote. The entire Democrats known as the Whitewings faction have the balance of power and declare they will have a large proportion of the offices or none pressed. As a majority of each party in the senate is as follows: Republicans, 18; Populists, 13; Democrats, 7.

Russell in the Cabinet.

BOSTON, Jan. 6.—Governor Russell was inaugurated here. In his address he urged the necessity of the state assisting in the concentration of more power in the hands of the governor. He also urged that the ballot law be amended so as to give recognition to new parties and forbid a recount of the ballots.

The Indiana Legislature.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 6.—The fifty-eighth general assembly began with the senate standing fifteen Republicans and thirty-five Democrats. The house has thirty-seven Republicans and sixty-three Democrats. Captain J. B. Curtis, of Marion county, was elected speaker of the house.

The California Situation.

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 6.—Two Democrats opposed to Stephen White for senator refuse to sign the caucus rule, and even if two Populists and one independent vote with the Democrats they will not have a majority. They will attempt to unseat H. B. Miller and James McGowan.

Prohibition in Maine.

BANGOR, Jan. 6.—Governor Cleaves, in his inaugural, speaking on the prohibitory laws, said, "The restraining influence of our laws upon the sale of intoxicating liquors has had a marked and beneficial effect."

The Deadlock in Nebraska.

LINCOLN, Jan. 6.—The Nebraska house is ready to canvass the vote on state officers and can do nothing until the order of business is finished. The senate remains in a deadlock.

Gray Will Remain a Senator.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.—The friends of Senator George Gray, of Delaware, say that he has decided not to leave his senate for a seat in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet if invited.

Says Carlisle Will Accept.

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 6.—Editor Henry Watterson says he believes Senator Carlisle will accept the treasury portfolio under Cleveland.

The Connecticut Legislature.

HARTFORD, Jan. 6.—The senate adjourned from Saturday, Jan. 14, to Jan. 24, and the house to 11:30 a. m. the same day.

Whitney Not a Cabinet Possibility.

Long and Terrible Illness from Blood Poisoning

Completely Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mrs. Mary F. O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible sores broke out on her head, arms, temple and throat. Her hair all came out, she weighed but 79 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says: "I became perfectly cured by and am now a well woman. I weigh 136 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My cure seems a wonderful recovery, and friends look at me as astonished as if I had risen from the dead."

TO BE TRIED AT PHILADELPHIA.

Iron Hall Officials May Not Go to Indiana.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.—Freeman D. Sweeley, late supreme president of the Order of the Iron Hall; Dr. Charles Baker, late supreme medical examiner; Joseph Gladding, late supreme organizer, and James H. Eckersley, late chairman of the supreme finance committee, were arraigned before Magistrate Pole on the charge of using $200,000 of the order's funds to sustain the Mutual Banking and Trust company of this city. Counsel for the defendants waived a hearing, and the magistrate bound them over in $5,000 bail for court.

District Attorney Graham, who is receiver of the order here, said he would resist the attempt of the Indianapolis authorities to take the defendants there for trial, as they are now bailed over for court here on the same charge on which they were indicted in Indiana. Mr. Graham said he would present the facts to Governor Pattison, and he believed the governor would refuse the requisition from the Indiana courts.

PANAMA PRISONERS CONFESS.

De Lesseps and Fontane Said to Have Implicated More Legislators.

PARIS, Jan. 6.—M. Charles de Lesseps and M. Marius Fontane, general secretary of the Panama Canal company, have made confessions. The first result of the confessions is the arrest of M. Blondin, and other arrests are probable.

The rumor runs that more members of parliament have been implicated; that they will be prosecuted and rejoin their colleagues of the senate and chamber who have been already arrested.

The prevailing opinion is that M. Floquet's re-election as president of the chamber is certain.

The Duc d'Orleans is at Madrid. It is the evident intention of the royalists to have the duc within reach should affairs in France, in their opinion, warrant an Orleans coup d'etat.

Grace Wilson's Alleged History.

ZANESVILLE, O., Jan. 5.—Grace Wilson, who wants to settle with the heirs of the late D. Edgar Crouse, millionaire, for $1,000,000, was born near St. Clairsville thirty-five years ago. She went upon the stage and became a favorite with Crouse. They were married, but separated in two years. A child was born. The mother got a divorce from Crouse and married Siegbert Nosterlitz, a wealthy Austrian. He is now dead, but Grace is still very much alive, as the Crouse heirs know.

The Big Battle a Fake.

CHATTANOOGA, Jan. 6.—A special from Bakersville says that the published story of the lynching of Isaac Osborne and a battle between the sheriff's posse and lynchers, in which sixty men were killed, is absolutely untrue. No such trouble has taken place, and the people of that locality are at a loss to understand how the story originated.

BIG BUILDINGS BURNED.

Three Five-Story Structures Destroyed at Pittsburg.

THE DAMAGE IS NEARLY $500,000

Duff & Sons, Cavitt & Pollock, Booth & Flynn and the Collins Cigar Company Among the Losers—The Westinghouse Machine Shops Ablaze Several Times.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 6.—Fire was discovered in a large brick building on Fayette street between Ninth and Tenth streets, occupied by the Collins Cigar company, and before the flames could be subdued the structure was entirely destroyed, together with three five-story buildings and a residence on Pennsylvania avenue.

The buildings destroyed were occupied by P. Duff & Sons, commission merchants; Cavitt & Pollock, lamps and fancy imported goods; Booth & Flynn, contractors, and numerous others. The loss is estimated anywhere from $250,000 to $500,000. The firemen asserted no small difficulty with frozen water pipes. The flames spread rapidly, and in less than thirty minutes the structures mentioned were doomed to destruction and the firemen turned their attention to the adjoining buildings.

Close Call for Westinghouse.

Keech's big installment house and the Westinghouse machine shops were on fire several times, but the good work of the fire department saved them. At 11:20 o'clock the walls of the Duff building fell with a crash, burying the old Verner mansion adjoining. Fortunately the family had deserted the house some time before the walls came down and no one was injured.

The estimates of losses are very conflicting. It was stated that $300,000 worth of liquors and cigars was stored in the Collins building, but this could not be verified. Cavitt & Pollock's loss is $75,000 and Duff's loss will be as much more. The other losses will range from $5,000 up to $50,000. The Verner mansion was one of the oldest in the city and it contained many valuable paintings.

Philadelphia's City Hall Elephant.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 6.—Mayor Stuart has vetoed a bill appropriating $1,200,000 to the public buildings commission to enable the commission to continue work on the city hall because of strong public opposition to the public building commission. It is contended that the commission is an autocratic body accountable to no authority. The city hall has already been twenty years in construction, $16,000,000 having been expended upon it, and the building is still uncompleted. The common council sustained the mayor's veto.

For a Bruised Heart, $20,000.

Stylish Capes.

Our cut shows one of the capes now so popular reaching to the hips. It is in fawn cloth trimmed with mink, and the arrangement of the narrow bands of fur on the collar and pelerine is extremely stylish.

CAPE IN FAWN CLOTH.

This shape is also much used in velvet capes, which, trimmed with wide fringe, Jet and ostrich feathers, are suitable for elderly wearers. Sable and mink are the fashionable trimmings on cloth and seal-skin capes of this fashion.

Every dark myrtle tone finds always a certain amount of favor, and its attractiveness is exemplified in a charming little Parisian cloak, with two capes, bound with astrakhan, the binding headed by a trimming of chenille and gold. A brown viceuna, trimmed with gold, has been used for another French cape.

A curious incident happened in Briens, Switzerland, recently. In drawing names from the jury box in a murder trial the third name drawn was that of the murdered man.

Hicks—Starter is a man of consummate tact. Horse came into my office to-day, and I tried every way to get rid of him, but without success. When he got tired, and not till then, he left me and called on Potter. Well, sir, Stanley, I would be a man of tact to number-two-sandpaper-makers. He got rid of Borus in no time.

Wicks—What course did he pursue?

Hicks—He just kicked him out. It worked like a charm. Yes, sir, Starter is a man of tact, of consummate tact.—Boston Transcript.

PREHISTORIC DWELLINGS.

Cause and Caves of Arizona—The Only Relics of a Vanished People.

Throughout our great southwest are hundreds of ruined cause and vacant caves, whose silent walls and rough hewn stones are the only history we have of an early people. Even the oldest of the Indians, with traditions extending back many generations, know nothing of the builders of these old stone and adobe walls. Concern ing some of these ancient dwellings a correspondent of Science, writing from Arizona, gives the following interesting facts:

In the valley of the Verde river, not far from the now abandoned fort, and on the surrounding cliffs and hills are many old ruins. The banks of the river and many of its tributaries are lined with ruins. A ride of several miles along Beaver creek (a tributary) brings one to high cliffs extending a hundred or more feet above the waters of the creek. In the perpendicular walls of one of these cliffs is a well preserved ruin known as Montezuma's castle. It is mid way between the rim of the cliff and the bed of the stream, and is neither house nor cave, but a combination of the two. Not accessible from the summit of the cliff, it can only be reached from below, and even here not without the use of a ladder, which, if short, must be pulled up from one ledge to another in ascending the steep. The entire front is of artificial walls built of large, flat pieces of limestone, with openings here and there for doors and windows. The rooms are small, only about five feet to ceiling. Generally a small opening two or three feet in diameter joins one room with another, and a similar orifice in the ceiling gives access to the room above. The floors are mostly of flat stones supported on timber cut from the surrounding mountains.

More numerous than the cave and cliff ruins are the many caves excavated from the sandstone and limestone cliffs along the west bank of the Verde river. At a distance the openings into the caves look like black spots on the white cliffs. They are arranged in long rows, tier above tier, and are nearly alike in structure. All are more or less inaccessible from the valley below. The entrance is an irregular arched opening about four feet high and from half to two thirds as wide. The cave proper is about twelve feet in diameter and from four to six feet to the ceiling. The room is more or less circular in outline. A rock bench from twelve to eighteen inches high occupies the cave on all sides except at the entrance. The bench is about three feet wide and gently slopes toward the center of the room. Opening into the main cave at either side, and also frequently at the rear, are smaller ones from three to five feet in diameter and about the same to the ceiling.

The first diagram shows the floor plan of one of these caves, the line A B representing the face of the cliff; C C, lateral caves; E, main cave; F, rock bench; D, small cavity hollowed in the rock near the entrance; H, rock of cliff. The second represents a type of prehistoric dwelling along the great canyon of the Colorado river. The diagram shows a vertical section through a large horizontal fissure, A B line representing the face of the cliff; C, inclosed room; D, wall of masonry.

Blacking Fluid for Iron and Steel.

For coloring iron and steel goods a good dead black: The Iron and Coal Trades Review recommends the following: Bismuth chloride, 1 part; mercury bichloride, 2 parts; copper chloride, 1 part; hydrochloric acid, 6 parts; alcohol, 8 parts; water, 80 parts. Before applying the fluid the article to be blacked or bronzed should be clean and free from grease. It may be applied with a brush into it. Let the liquid dry on the metal and then place the latter in boiling water and maintain the temperature for half an hour. If the color is then not as dark as desired repeat the operation. After getting the desired color, the latter is fixed and much improved by placing for a few minutes in a bath of boiling oil or by coating the surface with oil and heating the object until the oil is driven off.

Fireproof Roofing.

A fireproof roofing, and one unaffected by the heat of the sun's rays and that will not melt or run, is made by adding burned lime (not slaked) to coal tar, says The Industrial World. Boil together in the proportion of fifteen pounds of lime to 100 pounds tar. The lime must be pulverized, and to every ten gallons of tar stir the lime slowly in boiling tar. The mixture must be put on while hot.

Paste for Paper Labels.

The following formula is said to make an excellent paste or gum for the back of large sheets of paper labels to be stuck on glass: When slightly moistened they will adhere readily: Starch, two drams; white sugar, one ounce; gum arabic, two drams; to be boiled with a sufficient quantity of water.

Crystallized Nitrogen.

A scientific journal states that one of the greatest of chemical curiosities is crystallized nitrogen. By cooling nitrogen gas far below the freezing point and then allowing it to expand, solid, snowlike crystals are formed.

AN EAST INDIAN TIGER TALE.

A Tigress That Could Climb Up a Tree Very Much as a Small Boy Might Do.

By many writers on tiger shooting it is laid down as a fact that a tiger can only climb up a tree when the tree slopes considerably or there are large branches low down from which it can spring from one to another. This (one may be a safe refuge for an endangered hunter. But a gentleman writing from India puts on record the following exciting story to prove that a ti ger can actually climb up a tree to a considerable height, even when wounded. He says:

One day I came suddenly on the tracks of a tigress and cub leading into a ravine. Having a few men with me I sent them round to beat her out. She broke at once with angry growls exactly in the opposite direction to where I was posted, and seeing one of the beaters deliberately charged up a steep hill at him. He took refuge in a tree, but springing up she caught him and bit him severely through the leg, and then she left him. The man was on a bough about ten feet from the ground.

Some days afterward this tigress was tracked again in the same ravine. After considerable trouble I, one of the sportsmen, managed to shoot her through the lungs. She fell with a roar, then rose and galloped on about sixty yards to where one of the men was sitting in a big tree fourteen feet from the ground.

He shouted and tried to turn her back toward the ground, but she, instead, climbed up the tree to get at him. The man after throwing his turban at her scrambled up to a higher branch; but she was very close to him when I caught a clear sight of her head and shoulders over the intervening beaches and firing brought her dead to the ground. The tree grew straight up from the ground for fourteen feet without a branch, was about one foot in diameter and stood on almost level ground. The highest marks of the beast's claws were a little more than thirteen feet from the ground. She was a very monster full tigress, measuring 9 feet 8 inches.

The Key to Learning.

A duke walking in his garden one day saw a Latin copy of a great work on mathematics lying on the grass, and thinking that it had been brought from his library called some one to take it back.

"It belongs to me, your grace," said the gardener's son, stepping up.

"You!" cried the duke. "Do you understand geometry and Latin?"

"I know a little of them," answered the boy modestly.

The duke, having a taste for the sciences, began to talk to the young student and was astonished at the clearness and intelligence of his answers.

"But how came you to know so much?" asked the duke.

"One of the servants taught me to read," answered the lad. "One does not need to know anything more than the twenty-six letters in order to learn everything else one wishes."

But the nobleman wished to know more about it.

"After I learned to read," said the boy, "the master came to work on your house. I noticed the architect used a rule and compass in his work, and many calculations. What was the meaning and use of that?" I asked, and they told of a science called arithmetic. So I bought an arithmetic and studied it through. They then told me there was another science called geometry. Then I found that there were better books known as books of science in Latin, so I bought a dictionary and learned Latin. I heard there were better ones in French, so I got a dictionary and learned French. It seems to me I may learn everything when we know the twenty-six letters of the alphabet."

They are in fact the ladder to every science. Yet how many boys are contented to waste their time on the first two or three rounds, without pluck or perseverance enough to climb higher, unlike the gardener's son, who, with a will to succeed, became in after years one of the most distinguished of English mathematicians!

Voices of Animals.

We are told by some one who has collected a number of interesting facts in regard to the voices of birds and beasts that the bellow of the bull is the most powerful of animals.

The ass brays in a perfect octave, and one of his ejaculations has been copied by Haydn in its seventy-sixth quartet with great success.

The bark of a dog is an instance of a voice acquired by domestication, made as the trotting of a horse is an acquired movement.

An ape produces an exact octave of musical sounds, ascending and descending the scales by half tones, so that perhaps it alone of brute animals can be said to sing.

The howling or preaching monkey of South America has a voice that can be heard for two miles.

JANUARY.

Sayings of Poets and Invitors About the White Months of the Year.

According to our English a century, this month of January was one much to be feared. To them it seems to have brought starvation and danger of destruction to human life. On that account they character ized it as the wolf month. Even Gilbert White, true lover of nature in all her aspects, went so far as to say hard things of it. "If this month," he said, "is not rhyme ous, it is obscured with deep fogs or deepened with rains, so that it may fairly be said to be the most uncomfortable in the whole year."

This is the month not inaptly styled the white month of lengthening days and strengthening frosts. Indeed the old adage is true to nature in saying: "As the days begin to lengthen the frosts begin to strengthen," but there is an exhilarating and bracing influence in the air, even when fallow and flood alike are bound in frosty chains. There is a charm in January. All acknowledge the beauty of the frost in whatever form it may be seen.

On many days
Stern winter's icy breath, intensely keen,
Now chills the blood and withers every green.

But there are worse enemies than "winter and rough weather." How much they are to be pitied "who," to use the words of Bishop Hall, "have yielded themselves over to a disconsolate heartlessness and a sad dejection of spirit" merely because January is not May!

Frost and silvers their bracing power there is an aspect of cheerfulness on many January days. "When the frost," as Keats puts it, "has wrought a silence," and when "all the batteries of noise are spiked," to use one of Lowell's phrases, there is present nothing less than a twofold charm, for the snow is not only beautiful, but delightful. How beautiful it is, falling so silently, and as it falls, one of the quiet things in nature, but none the less cheerful on that account. So, to Cowper attests. "The very shadows charms," and, as no less an observer than Goethe declares in one of his letters, "The snow over everything gives back a feeling of purity."

But January weather is useful as well as bracing and cheery. Its very keenness is distinctly favorable to tillage. The frosts disintegrate the rocks themselves in order to form or ameliorate the soil for after growth. The frost, too, prepares the soil already made. As Thomas Fuller quaintly said, "The frost is the divine plow, which is driven through every inch of ground in the world, opening each clod and pulverizing the whole."

The Much Abused "Dentiscalpium."

Toothpicks are said to have been invented in Italy, hopefully they were in common use among the Romans. In "Martial's Epigrams" there are frequent references to the "dentiscalpium," sometimes swelling to an elaborate, costly article. In one the particular form of toothpick which Martial preferred was a pointed strip of mastic wood, but in default of that he recommends a quill. Singularly enough the useful instrument was regarded as an innovation in Queen Elizabeth's time. The Bestiard in "King John" mentioned at

Your traveler—

He and his toothpick at my worship's mess;
Travelers in France and Italy, it seems, brought toothpicks back and used them as instinctively, and all those who affected the high fashion assiduously imitated them. Commonly a case of toothpicks made of wood was carried about by fine gentlemen. A more stylish commodity of fashion is pointed at by Sir Thomas Overbury, who describes a courtier as walking in St. Paul's "with a pickstock in his hat, a cane cloak tied at the neck, and stocking." Apparently the "Johnny" of the present day, who is so accustomed in this use of the homely quill, has inherited the pencil quick and his fourth-leg display of it from the extremists that thronged the court of the virgin queen, says Chambers' Journal.

A Story of a Remarkable Self Taught Man.

In some remarks on Buckle, the author of "The History of Civilization," Mrs. Andrew Crosse says: "I was told by Dr. Nood, a relative of Mr. Buckle, that this remarkable writer was entirely self taught. His health as a boy was so delicate that he was never sent to school, and was left to learn what he liked and how he liked. His accumulated knowledge was prodigious, and his memory even about trifling things most remarkable. A friend of mine when in his company had occasion to refer to the cultivation of rhubarb, whereupon Buckle immediately said, 'The plant was introduced into Europe in 1608.' I mean the common garden rhubarb which grows wild in the mountains of Syria and Persia.' He then went on to say that this must not be confounded with the officinal rhubarb of commerce, adding statistics about the value of the latter as an article of import into Great Britain."

Pneumatic Tubes for Mail Matter.

The pneumatic tube used for conveying mail, known as the tube post, was established between Paris and Berlin in 1877, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. The first idea of pneumatic transmission appears to be due to Isaac Pepys in 1667. The first instance of its being put into practical use was not until the year 1835, when Mr. Latimer Clark introduced his system of pneumatics, improved, and succeeded in laying a tube in London between Margate and the general postoffice. Several stations were connected by lines of tubes, in which cylindrical carriers holding dispatches were placed. The cylinders were surrounded by india rubber bands to make them fit accurately. A partial vacuum was created in front, and compressed air was employed to act behind.

A Clever Solution of a Social Problem.

The thorough business in New York have hit upon a scheme which promises to leave them with fewer gray hairs than usual at the end of the season, and that is the "Emergency" quadrilles, which is danced by four gentlemen and eight ladies. "Emergency" quadrilles might be a better name for the innovation, which every wise hostess will distribute two hours just before supper, so that each gentleman will take the two ladies to the supper room, and one of the problems in social economics—the surplus woman—will find a happy solution.

The Old Fashioned Pony Ring.

Pony originally meant verse presented with a money gift. It came to be applied to the flowers themselves, and finally became the brief poetical sentiment, motto or legend inscribed upon a ring for the finger. The words marked upon these rings were generally of a stereotyped kind, such as "You never knew a heart more true." One which was presented by the bridegroom bore the suggestive couplet:

Love him who gives this ring of gold.
'Tis he must kiss the bride when they're old.

MADE HIM DESPERATE.

The Sad, Practical Title Sing Was Too Much for Him.

She had a shrill young voice that pervaded the whole car, and when she spoke to the inflexible darling at her side she stopped over into baby talk that made all the other passengers grit their teeth and clutch the plush backs of the seats in front. The car was full, and the fond young guardian of infancy and innocence occupied the first seat. Back to back with that was the seat that faced the stove, and on this undesirable spot sat a thin old man, with three setches and chin whiskers.

There was a lull for a few miles, and the passengers began to relax their muscles and breathe freer when the fusillade suddenly began again.

"Oo pwoud, 'ittle dirl? Oh, so s'oopy?"

No response.

"Was oo mamma's wittle pam? Mamma's wittle yammy yam? Look up here! Look at me! Oh, you bad. Was oo mamma's naughty boy?"

Three slaps.

"Oh, you bad, precious 'ittle sing. Mamma's Darling Dash loves her cweet totty tots. Kissum a-s! Do you hear? Kissum me!"

There were beads of perspiration on the face of the man with the chin whiskers, and when the conductor opened the car door he gave a convulsive shiver that shocked all the passengers.

"Conductor," he whispered, "you haven't come too soon."

"Why?"

"I'm a desperate man."

"Too hot?" asked the conductor soothingly, opening the stove door.

"Hot? Man, it's that woman and baby back of me. It's the baby terrible. I tell you I can't stand it. I've raised nine young ones myself out in Iowa, and I didn't raise 'em on that. Git the woman anything else she wants—a gilt edge book, I'll chip in, but keep her quiet. If you don't, conductor, I'll brain that baby with this roller sample case. Heat? I'm desperate!"

The conductor didn't reply. He leaned over to the young woman and said:

"Madam, you must remove that dog to the baggage car."—Detroit Free Press.

Mayor Saunders in a communication to the Council, called attention of Council to the dangerous condition of Green brook, and made recommendations about borough accounts as follows:

COMMUNICATION FROM THE MAYOR.

Gentlemen of the Council:

We have reason to congratulate ourselves that we begin the new year with the Borough entirely free from debt. The last of the bonds which had been issued for the equipment of the Fire Department were paid off about the first of the year, and there does not now remain one dollar of indebtedness of any kind.

It has been said that the individuals assuming the poor trying to keep out of debt. Freedom from debt is very much to be desired, but while we rejoice at the present condition of things let us not neglect to make proper provision for public health and safety. To be out of debt is pleasant, but it is more pleasant to be out of danger, though in debt. State our Fire Department was organized and equipped with apparatus, street hydrants have been put in, and a modification of fire apparatus becomes advisable. I briefly called your attention to this subject at the last meeting of the Council, since which time we have met in committee with representatives of the Fire Department and have gone carefully over the whole situation. The Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps will report on this subject this evening, and I urge you to act without delay upon the recommendations which they will make. A reliable and efficient Fire Department is one of the most important requirements of any municipality, and it is one of the first duties of public officers to provide and care for such a service.

I would also recommend for your consideration the question of public health. The spectre of cholera epidemic during the coming summer urges us with uncommon force to look carefully into sanitary conditions.

Our beautiful borough is traversed by two brooks which have all the natural advantages of clear, pure water and picturesque surroundings. These brooks should increase the value of property through which they pass, and might be made sources of water supply for cattle, or pleasure grounds for children. Instead of this they have become polluted streams, which in the case of Green brook is little better than an open sewer. Were the volume of water large enough and the channel of the brook a deep and permanent one, much of the present danger as to the danger apprehended from the pollution of the water, but at some seasons of the year the flow of water runs down until the brook is nearly dry, and it is a common thing for a flood to change the course of the stream. The bed in many places is rocky and grass-grown, so that at low water disagreeable odors come from the rank and vegetable matter which noxious matter has been deposited at high water.

Now, there can be no doubt about the fact that the pollution of these streams depreciates property in the vicinity. Another point pretty certain is that this pollution is something which grows year by year and threatens to become a serious menace to public health. Our Board of Health with creditable zeal has succeeded in stamping out sewage discharge from the borough into Green brook. But it is shown by recent investigation that the City of Plainfield contributes a sewage which discharges into Green brook. A communication recently published in a Plainfield paper contains the following.

"Mr. Smith took Mr. Peck and a gentleman with him to Stager's lane and showed him where a sewer emptied into the brook, and Mr. Griffin assured Mr. Peck that within a short distance more sewage would empty into the brook from Plainfield. Furthermore, he took him to a lot in the rear of the property on Grove street and pointed to an open sewer which emptied into the brook from Plainfield.

"Mr. Peck consulted a prominent lawyer of Plainfield in regard to the matter. The reply was that Mr. Peck personally could fight a corporation, nor can you fight the city of Plainfield. To my certain knowledge the city of Plainfield has been connecting sewers in accordance with the sewer which empties into the brook through Stager's lane."

The most striking part of the foregoing statement is that it is true.

Mayor Gilbert very wisely and frankly refers to this subject in his message to the Plainfield Common Council as follows:

"North avenue sewer should be closely watched while the cutting is open for the construction of any unidentified deposit. The question as to sewerage of Green brook is also a special study. Another question of importance for early consideration is that of the borough accounts. We seem to have a system of accounts here which has been inherited from other years, and which has many short comings. It is difficult to attach the true name to the system of bookkeeping which we follow. It is certainly deficient and unlike anything now in force in any well organized business institution. In the words of the clerk, "the debits are on the credit side, and the credits are on the debit side." It seems to take so long to balance up our accounts as it should to balance the entire books. The condition of things is not only unbusinesslike, but it is unfair to those who have charge of the accounts. Errors creep in from year to year and the responsibility for the system is none of the most reasons rare on the part of the accountant. The time should be drawn somewhere, and the sooner the better, so that we may begin anew with a system of bookkeeping which will be clear, accurate and reliable. It seems to me best to handle this question by employing an expert accountant to go over the books with the clerk and adjust them in a business way. I would therefore suggest that you direct the Auditing Committee to do this and report at the next meeting of Council."

WILLIAM L. SAUNDERS, Mayor.

The mayor appointed as the Board of Health Rev. W. E. Honeyman, whose term expires Jan. 15, 1893, for a term of four years, Mr. S. T. Currie to fill the unexpired term of Mr. R. F. Bradley, resigned, whose term expires Jan. 15, 1894.

Mr. Hegeman moved that the mayor's communication be received and filed and the nominations confirmed. Carried.

Collector H. N. Spencer's report was read showing that taxes had been collected to the amount of $38,000. Justice Crossley's report stated that he had received $17 for fines during the past three months. Both reports were received and filed.

The Fire, Water and Lamps Committee reported that lamps had been placed at the corner of Duer and Dupont streets, and at Dupont street and Steiner place. The report was received and filed.

Mr. Neal, of the Street Committee, said that many of the sidewalks in the borough had not been cleaned of snow and that they were left in a dangerous condition. He said the ordinance relating to the matter should be enforced, and the sidewalks cleaned. Those who did not comply with the ordinance should be dealt with accordingly.

Mr. Hegeman moved that the ordinance relating to the matter be published in the three daily papers of Plainfield. Carried.

The same gentleman, in speaking of the Fire Department, said he was in favor of the purchase of five more signals similar to the one in Plainfield. He had received a communication from the Gamewell Co., and they offered to place a system in the borough consisting of ten signal boxes, one whistle, one alarm gong at the engine house, and the wires for the whole system at a cost of $2,500. The matter was laid over.

Resolutions were adopted to the effect: That the Council give up the present Council room to the use of the Oregon as a parlor, and that the mayor appoint a committee of two to look for a suitable council room. That the notes falling due Jan. 18, 1893, of $600, $1,000, $1,000, be authorized to be paid from the borough account, road account and light account pro rata to amount due; that Tuesday, February 21, and March 7 be designated as the dates for the meeting of the registration boards. That the mayor appoint a committee of two, to act in conjunction with the mayor and a board of health, to negotiate with the authorities in the city of Plainfield in regard to the matter of sewerage. That the janitor's salary be made $10 per month. That council employ an expert accountant to establish a system of book-keeping and look over the accounts of the borough, and the sum of $200, falling due Jan. 18, 1893, be paid at the proper time.

A resolution was adopted authorizing the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps to ascertain the cost of a frame building suitable for a hose carriage house in the Western part of the borough, in anticipation of the forming of another fire company in that section.

Mr. Geo. R. Fairchild was appointed Chief of the Fire Department.

An ordinance was passed on its first and second readings changing the place of election in the borough. The First District to take in all the territory lying on the southwesterly side of the centre line of Somerset street, and the territory lying on the northeasterly side to be the Second District.

The following were named as members of the Election Boards at the election to be held March 14. First District—Republicans, L. A. Klute and C. W. Tallman; Democrats, B. Gavin and J. L. Stanford. Second District—Republicans, J. D. Anderson and J. A. Goodwin; Democrats, J. Rodine and A. King.

It was resolved that the mayor appoint a committee of two to raise funds for the celebration. The resolution was adopted and the mayor appointed as such committee Messrs. Hegeman and Needham.

Messrs. Neal and Needham were appointed a committee to look for a new house and lot for the meeting of the Council and the rooms used by the borough. The mayor appointed as committee to look after the matter of sewerage, Messrs. Neal and Hegeman.

Council then adjourned.

Excellent Sleighing.

Several sleighing parties passed through this city last evening. Some of them were four horse loads, and the occupants blowing horns and the jingling of the bells on the four horses made a merry clatter. The night was cold and clear and the air keen and frosty. And the night for sleighing, though a trifle too cold to be thoroughly enjoyable.

Another question of importance for early consideration is that of the borough accounts. We seem to have a system of accounts here which has been inherited from other years, and which has many short comings. It is difficult to attach the true name to the system of bookkeeping which we follow. It is certainly deficient and unlike anything now in force in any well organized business institution. SHOT THROUGH THE MOUTH.

A Hungarian Laborer Accidently Wounds a Dunellen Switchman.

George Craig, a son of William Craig, and a night switchman at Dunellen, was accidently shot by a Hungarian laborer, at about 12 o'clock last night. The young man had a self-cocking revolver, 32 calibre, and, it is said, was showing it to the Hungarian, who had stopped in the switchman's country to ask what the Hungarian, who says he never had a revolver in his hands before, while examining the weapon, pulled the trigger exploding the cartridge. The ball passed through the roof of Craig's mouth and out at the side of his head. The wound is serious but not necessarily fatal. The young man, who, if he lives, will be disfigured for life, was carried to his home near by. The Hungarian was not arrested.

An Italian Stealing Coal Almost Causes a Railroad Accident.

An Italian, stealing coal from a train side-tracked near Fanwood, last evening, about six o'clock, almost caused a wreck.

He had secured a bag full of coal when an express train went by, and he threw down an axe and ran precipitately to hide it. The first section of a freight train passed at the same time, and the engineer, thinking the man had thrown a stone at him, also stopped. He sent the engine to see if help could be rendered. The express train was the property of which was supposed to be, for behind, suddenly came along.

For a few moments a collision between the two sections seemed inevitable, but fortunately the second section was stopped within twelve rods of the caboose of the first section. The Italian was not detained.

The Delightful Spanish Dancer, Carmencita.

Carmencita, the famous Spanish dancer, who is to appear Wednesday evening, at Music Hall, and the comedy, "Prodigal Father," in which she appears, under the management of Messrs Jefferson, Klaw & Erlanger, have been attracting large audiences at the Broadway Theatre, New York. A repetition of their New York performances is announced will be given here. For three years, Carmencita has held sway over New York society, including the Astors and other distinguished American families. Her dancing is described by the New York Herald, the Sun, the World and other New York journals as surpassing anything that has ever been seen in this country. She is symetrically sinuous in her every movement. The varied motions of the feet and sinuosity of the body in her dance, the Cashmere are alone extraordinary for their poetical beauty. Carmencita is Spanish—her and dances are Spanish in every degree.

The El Vieto gives her scope to the accompaniment of her own castanets. Her black hair during this dance falls from its ribbons and drops luxuriantly around her to the strains of Alphonse Pirotto's enchanting Spanish music. The Aide-de-Camp is another of her delightful dances, and the costume worn by her, alone for this performance, is a marvel of the costumer's art. It is between the second and third act of the comedy, "The Prodigal Father," when Carmencita makes her appearance. The comedy is one of the successes of years. In New York run in connection with Carmencita drew to the Broadway Theatre crowds nightly. The play is described as jolly from first to last.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Captain.

One is always glad to read something from the pen of that sweet tempered, deep delving thinker, Dr Edward Everett Hale. In The Cosmopolitan magazine he touches the one burning point of success or failure in cooperative industry. He believes with all his might that co-operation is the solution for labor troubles; that through its magic spell the lion and tiger of labor and capital shall lie peacefully down together. But how?

Dr. Hale explains. He says that New England has been giving the world a practical lesson in successful co-operation for the past 200 years. It is in her whale, cod and mackerel fisheries. A whaling vessel, goes out to sea. The voyage lasts from two to four years. When she returns the oil and bone are sold and the proceeds divided among the seamen. But the point to which Dr. Hale invites especial attention is this: In the division boat steerers get more than common sailors and the captain and mate more than any of the rest. No sailor disputes the justice of the apportionment.

Dr. Hale says that in the beautiful paper schemes for co-operation the fact that no every successful enterprise there must be a captain is lost sight of. The average man or woman cannot plan a great commercial or manufacturing scheme and carry it to success. For this there must be a born leader. Dr. Hale says, "The divine instinct for trade is as much an inherited one as the instinct for music or for manufacture." Without the born captain or organizer, who can put their products on the market and watch and foretell its every turn, can working people themselves engineer a giant undertaking successfully? "You might as well claim that a directory chosen from the privates of the Austrian armies could have beaten the great Napoleon."

So in putting together their little messes and starting an enterprise on the co-operative plan Dr. Hale thinks the first thing—the chief thing—for working people to do is to choose their captain and pay him a price that will permit him to give his time and best thought to the success of their plan. He is worth it. Even when bloated plutocrats carry on a manufacturing establishment they have always such a captain of industry, and co-operative workers can never get on without him.

The World's Catholic Congress.

Among the many congresses to meet during the World's fair a call has been issued for the assembling of an international congress of the Catholic church. The congress will begin its sessions Sept 4, 1893.

Since the New World was discovered by devout followers of the church the first part of the sessions will naturally be occupied with doing honor in a suitable manner to the memory of Columbus and of Ferdinand and Isabella. But the meeting will be much more than a celebration or commemoration. The call that has been issued says distinctly that the congress must be prepared to propose practical reforms in industrial and social matters. Full freedom of discussion is to be permitted and invited in these subjects.

The congress in its suggested programme treats such topics as any assembly interested in the social and industrial advancement of mankind would deal with. Among them are questions which lie close to the heart of Pope Leo—such as pauperism and its remedy, labor and capital, workingmen's organizations, immigration and colonization, intemperance. Even the woman question is to be wrestled with.

Old Father Henrici, of the Economite brethren, was eighty-eight years old when he died. The problem of what will become of the Economites' money and property intensifies itself as one after another of the leaders drops off. But there is one problem these Economites have solved. That is how to live to be nearly a hundred and have good health and grow richer year by year all the time. Anybody who is willing to live the life led by the Economite brethren and sisters can solve the problem in the same way.

American armor plate for war vessels is the best in the world. Even the London Times admits that. A trial of armor plates at Portsmouth, England, shows that our plates made by the Harvey process cannot even be cracked by any ordinary shells. The American armor plate of 10½ inches in thickness makes nearly all the present ironclads of the nations of Europe obsolete.

A professional baseball player who keeps himself in good trim lasts much longer than the prize fighter. Bennett, the leading catcher of the country, has been catching balls for sixteen years, and none of the younger men can claim a record of so few passed balls in the past year as he.

When the thermometer was 30 below zero in some of the northern states a party of sources visiting the United States government experiment station at Kissimmee, Fla. received presents of baskets of green peas, new potatoes and various other fresh vegetables. This is a great country.

MANY INDICTMENTS MADE.

Big Stockings in Brooklyn Over the Columbian Celebration.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 7.—The hand of the law has been raised against the men concerned in the Brooklyn Columbian celebration, which caused so much scandal. The affair cost Brooklyn $50,000 and Kings county $15,000, or $65,000 in all. After a careful investigation the grand jury has decided to indict nearly every man concerned in the disposition of the money. From thirty to forty true bills have been found, and the culprits are cited to appear before Judge Moore.

Among those supposed to have been indicted are City Auditor Anton Weber, County Auditor Frederick Keller and the members of the board of supervisors, who, after resolutions for the excessive Columbian expenditures had been vetoed by Supervisor at Large Kinkel, passed them. Among them are John Y. McKane, John McKeown and Oliver B. Lockwood.

EIGHT THOUSAND ADDED

The Civil Service Law Extended to Many Men.

SENATE SPEECHES ON QUARANTINE.

Bills Providing for the Suspension of Immigration and for Better Protection Against Cholera Debated by the Legislators—Deadly Bacilli in Our Money.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The president has extended the civil service law to include all free delivery offices, of which there are now expected to be 691. The president has also approved an amendment to the classification of the agriculture department, bringing within the classification of that department the employees of the weather bureau employed elsewhere than at Washington. The president has also ordered executive departments show that the extensions of the classified service subsequent to March 4, 1889, have been as follows: On April 13, 1891, the president classified certain classes of school employees and the physicians in the Indian service—about 1,000 employees in all. On May 5, 1892, the fish commission was classified as a part of the departmental service, bringing in 140 employees. Since the administration of President Harrison began ten postoffices, each having attained the requisite number of employees—fifty—have been classified.

Over 8,000 Men Affected.

By the president's order just made public about 180 places in the weather bureau were added to the classified service and about 7,000 places at postoffices, making altogether more than 8,000 places added under the present administration.

Under President Cleveland's administration the number of places added to the classified departmental service by this revision. The railway mail service, with its 5,800 employees, was also covered by the civil service law on March 4, 1889. Rules for that service were promulgated to take effect March 10, 1892. These extensions increased the classified list 2,000 places.

This new extension will make the total number of places within the classified service 43,000.

Quarantine Talk in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The session of the senate was given up entirely to the discussion of the bill on the subject of quarantine regulations and its correlative measure, the Chandler Naturalization for one year. Mr. Chandler, of New Hampshire, spoke for about three hours, devoting most of his argument to the last mentioned bill, although the other was really the one that was up for discussion. To this latter, however, an amendment was pending to authorize the president to issue a proclamation suspending immigration from countries where cholera may be prevailing.

Mr. Chandler treated this proposition as an act of cowardice on the part of congress in imposing responsibility upon the president instead of taking that responsibility itself.

"The president who is to come in on March 4," said Mr. Frye, of Maine, "has courage enough to issue a proclamation to suspend immigration if in his judgment it is necessary, because long before March 4 he issued a proclamation to prevent what he believed would be an infection of the senate." [Laughter.]

"I dislike the senator's flippant way of introducing his humor into the discussion of serious subjects," retorted Mr. Chandler.

Sarcasm from Chandler.

He went on to speak of the recent entertainment given by the North German Lloyd steamship company to the Gridiron club, and made some sarcastic allusions to the liberality of that company to government officials traveling in Europe.

Arguments against the quarantine bills were made by Senators McPherson, of New Jersey; Platt, of Connecticut; Mitchell, of Texas, and Dolph, of Oregon. Many amendments were offered, some of which were agreed to, the others going over.

Mr. McPherson opposed the quarantine bill on the ground that all quarantine authority should be lodged in the federal authorities, and that the power cited by Mr. Platt opposed it on the exactly opposite ground—quarantine powers should be exercised by the states and not by the federal authorities. Mr. Platt opposed the bill for somewhat the same reasons as those put forward by the senator from New Jersey.

Deadly Microbes in Money.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The question of the possibility of transmitting infectious diseases by means of paper money, brought before congress by Mr. Outhwaite's bill, is being followed up by the treasury department. Comptroller A. B. Hepburn and United States Treasurer Nebeker both recognize the peril from this source, and concur in the opinion that congress should make an appropriation to defray the expense of redeeming paper money unfit for circulation. Bacteriological analyses of the bank notes of a Spanish bank in Havana made recently showed the presence on some of the notes. Eight pathogenic species were encountered, including those of diphtheria and tuberculosis.

Immigrants Only Visitors.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—Since the partial suspension of immigration some of the steamship companies have endeavored to evade the responsibility for bringing immigrants to this country by registering them as visitors, forward agents, passengers, etc. Ellen Moody and five children, destitute alien immigrants, arrived by the steamship Ohio on Dec. 4 at Philadelphia from England. The agents of the steamship companies claim that Mrs. Moody and children are not immigrants, and Mrs. Moody says that she is a visitor within the meaning of the clause. The treasury department has ordered the family's return.

Beer Poisons an Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The house committee on banking and currency resumed its inquiry into the failure of the Keystone and Spring Garden National banks, of Philadelphia, and that of the Maverick National bank, of Boston. Ex-Bank Examiner Dew, of Philadelphia, appeared at his own request. The treasury department officials had promised to investigate his connection with the Keystone and Spring Garden banks, but had failed to do so.

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not walk.

Could Scarcely Walk

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat was entirely closed, I could hear everything, but could not speak. I was treated by local physicians and given medicine, but I felt no better. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken one bottle I felt very much better. I have taken three bottles, and am now feeling excellent. I thank God, and

SANDMASTER CAPPA DONE.

A Celebrated Leader in Military and Musical Circles Passes Away.

NEW YORK, Jan. 7.—Carlo Alberto Cappa, bandmaster of Cappa's Seventh Regiment band, is dead. Although he had been ill for nine weeks with heart trouble, his death was rather unexpected.

Cappa was born in 1834 at Alessandria, in the kingdom of Sardinia. He came to America in 1856. Since 1861 Cappa has filled engagements outside of New York city at Quebec, San Francisco, Louisville, Salt Lake City, Cincinnati, Denver, Augusta, Ga.; Minneapolis, Sacramento, St. Louis, Chicago, Richmond, Buffalo, Boston, Dallas, Pittsburg and many other places. He won many medals and secured honors at the Pittsburg exposition in a competition with Damrosch's orchestra and Gilmore's band. He was knighted by the king of Italy and the Venezuelan government.

HORSEWHIPPED THE PRINCIPAL.

An Offended Johnstown Mother Beats Instructor Klitick.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 7.—S. D. Klitick, principal of the Seventh ward school, whipped one of his pupils quite severely. It is alleged that the punishment was excessive and unwarranted, which the principal denies. The mother of the boy immediately went to the sergeant-at-arms. Procuring a heavy horsewhip, she camped on the trail of the professor, caught him and attacked him savagely. In spite of his brief efforts to defend himself, she gave him a beating beside which the castigation of her son was a mere love tap. The teacher was so badly used up that medical attendance was required, and he is still in the hands of a surgeon. The affair has created an immense sensation here, and litigation will doubtless follow.

REBUKED BY ROYALISTS

The Count of Paris Criticised by His Followers.

THEY BELIEVE HE SHOULD BE BOLD.

Inactive at Madrid When He Should Be Entering France as Emperor—Ex-Minister Balbiat Will Probably Be Tried by the French Senate for Panama Frauds.

PARIS, Jan. 7.—It is probable that M. Charles Balbiat, formerly minister of public works, will be arraigned before the senate, sitting as a high court, for acts committed while exercising his functions of minister in 1888. Under these circumstances the directors of the Panama Canal company will also be arraigned before the same tribunal as their accomplice, M. Balbiat. This last alone the senate can as a high court of justice was for the trial of General Boulanger upon the charge of treason.

The charges against M. Balbiat have already been framed. As minister of public works M. Balbiat had an important influence upon the course of the government in regard to the Panama Canal company, and the charge is substantially that he sold that influence.

The Count of Paris Denounced.

The government exhibits very little anxiety in regard to the royalist gathering in Spain. The royalists are despairing of the Count of Paris on account of his apathy in plotting in a hotel in Madrid, instead of boldly entering France as an emperor. The advanced members of the party talk of asking him to abdicate in favor of the Duke of Orleans.

Several newspapers this morning predict the arrest of many deputies and senators on next Monday.

The police have destroyed incendiary placards posted by anarchists. These placards called upon the people to seize arms, destroy their corrupt oppressors and seize the government.

A disorderly anti-Semitic meeting was broken up by the police here. The principal speaker was the Marquis de Mores. The Jews, he said, had brought about the state of affairs which was culminating in the Panama scandal.

FASHIONS

MODES OF THE DAY.

Attractive Fancies in House Gowns—Popular Colors—Wash Costumes.

A pretty tapering arm has its beauty enhanced by the deep frills of soft lace or filmy silken gauze, opening concertina wise, which fall from the edge of the sleeves, look at the ten gowns illustrated here, of which the lace frills are one of the striking points. The material is cream cashmere arranged in deep pleats in front and adorned with green velvet ribbon, and a lace yoke strewn with little gold sequins.

The main idea just at present is to add as many frills as possible to the width of the shoulders. No shoulder frills or capes are worn on nearly every day dress. On one of these, which was of brown cloth spotted with light blue, the frills were of blue silk to match the spots.

A TEA GOWN.

Some of the English dressmakers are reported as saying that many of the gowns which they have made with the new style of full skirt have been returned to them for alteration, showing that unwelcome innovation is not adopted at once and unhesitatingly.

A fashionable color for outdoor wear, generally and particularly, is purple. Many of the models in gowns, bonnets and cloaks have come out in it, and an elaborate visiting dress of French design is a deep shade of purple velvet cloth, the three bands of dark brown fur around the skirt, placed several inches apart, and a yoke and sleeves of black velvet. A pretty French combination in an afternoon toilet for a blond is eminence purple with pale blue. Dark green and claret are also popular colors of the season.

The Russian blouse walking costume looks handsome in beaver colored cloth, edged with beaver, or in one of the shades of intermediate blue, trimmed with soft, darkish brown fur.

Tailor made gowns are less severe in style than they have been, and many bodices are either cut off smartly at the waist or belted. Neat figures look well in belts.

A practical and becoming kind of outdoor gown would be of brown cloth and consist of plain skirt short enough to clear the ground and a three-quarter jacket faced with beaver or mink, and adorned with a collar of the same, made to turn up or down. The costume would be completed by a waistcoat or silk blouse bodice.

A New Position.

Once while canvassing his state during a political season John Quincy Adams was approached by a well to do farmer, who introduced himself and said: "Mr. Adams, I'm glad to meet you; my wife remembers you well, she was in your family when you were a boy, and often combed your hair."

"Well," said Mr. Adams, sharply, "I suppose she combs yours now."—Argonaut.

Her Strong Point.

"How do you like your new cook?"

"Oh, so so. She is very dirty, she has no idea of cooking and she smashes everything around her, but still she has one good and rare quality."

"What is that?"

"She stays with us."—Fliegende Blatter.

STATE BUILDINGS.

How Exhibits of Great Commonwealths Will Be Housed at the Fair.

New York and Pennsylvania as the greatest states of the Union were given the front center of the tract reserved for state buildings at the Columbian exposition, and their structures face the great Art building on the south. New York having the eastern end of the plot and Pennsylvania the western. The latter's building, designed by Thomas P. Lonsdale, of Philadelphia, is a combination of various styles, the square and massive predominating. All the materials are of Pennsylvania production, and the cost is $60,000.

The New Jersey building is, like most of the state structures, designed chiefly for social purposes and a place of writing and registration, and is made so far as possible representative of the state. It is modeled on the old house at Morristown, N. J., which was Washington's headquarters, but there are additions for convenience sake. There are large and inviting piazzas front and rear, and the main entrance leads into a large hall two stories high, with a circular balcony around the second story.

The Texas building is meant to be emblematic of the state so far as possible. It is therefore large, massive and plain in the main portion, but topped with considerable ornament, and in its materials the visitor will find an epitome of the state. With some slight exceptions every particle of wood, stone and other material in it will be of Texas production. The cost is to be $100,000, and the location is a fortunate one to show the structure with the finest effect.

The Minnesota state building will be in the Renaissance style of architecture. The framework of wood will be coated with staff to give the effect of stone construction. The main entrance will be in plain style, but the opposite side will more faithfully represent the state. The entrance there is through a portico having rusticated dome columns, and on the embladature over each column the name "Minnesota" will appear in a raised panel.

Nebraska was fortunate in securing about the best site on the exposition grounds for her state building, as it fronts south on Fifty-seventh street, while a magnificent boulevard borders it on the east and a large lake on the west. It is 60 by 100 feet, and two stories high, covers 6,000 square feet and has 12,000 feet of floor space. The east and west fronts have wide porticoes, on each side of which are wide steps covering one-third of the length of the building. Over each portico is a large gable on a line with the main cornice, and in each gable, in bas-relief, is the Nebraska state seal, five feet in diameter.

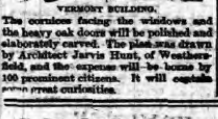
Vermont is to have a building which will indeed represent the state, as its walls are to be of blue, white and variegated marble from her various quarries, chiefly from those of West Rutland. The structure will have but one story, and be in the familiar Queen Anne style,



VERMONT BUILDING.

The cornices facing the windows and the heavy oak doors will be polished and elaborately carved. The plans are drawn by Architect Jarvis Hunt, of Weathersfield, and the expense will be borne by 100 prominent citizens. It will contain some great curiosities.

ETIQUETTE

AFTERNOON TEA.

A Cleaning House for Cards and an Equivalent for a Year's Visiting.

Given a lot, and Mrs. Wellmore has shown in all her accustomedness that she desires to see them. She may even thus in turn her friends that a son or a daughter is introduced into society. Going to the ten Mrs. Arbuckle leaves on the hall table her card and those of her family. The giver of an afternoon tea need not call on her friends after it. The person who goes to the tea or sends a card has also discharged her social obligations. This is official and certain, from highest authorities, affirms Mrs. John Sherwood in Harper's Bazar, and among other things on the same subject she has the following to say:

A card is one's self. It is the little ambassador which says: "I thank you for your hospitality. I would come if I could, but I cannot. So here is my compliment and my excuse." An afternoon tea is thus a very sensible institution, although much wrested from its original significance. It is a party in the daytime. It is cheap. Every one enjoys it, who can go, excepting gentlemen, who hate it, as it takes them away from that home between business and dinner, which most men devote to clubs or to rest, and no man wishes to spoil his appetite for his dinner, which he takes late.

If your friends ask you to her daughter's wedding you must call on the bride; if your friend asks you to dinner you must call within a week. So of a lady's break; you must call soon. An evening party, of course, requires a call, but a tea does not. Some very conspicuous houses in New York never make calls; they give a tea and send cards. A tea is a clearing house for cards. What an immense saving of time and health and strength. Of course all we have to do so as a matter of entertainment. Having given a tea and asked all the world, a hostess can then give dinner and dance and luncheon, inviting only a society of her acquaintance and no one need feel offended.

A lady always leaves her husband's card and those of her sons and daughters who are in society. It is very well to accumulate cardboard and the love of small cards by having a family card:

Mr. and Mrs. Wellmore.
The Misses Wellmore.

The cards of the young men of the family must be individual.

A visit, or a call who gives the tea is a call in itself, and a card left or sent is as good—in the eyes of etiquette—as the call; but the visitor should, if she can, return the hospitality by giving a tea herself sometime during the season. Of course there are many instances where this cannot be done, and one should clearly understand the way to show her appreciation of the civility; but if she cannot do anything in return she has done enough by visiting or leaving or sending her card to show that she appreciates the civility.

If a lady gives a tea and leaves out an acquaintance, that is a cut; if a lady receives an invitation to a tea and neither calls nor sends a card, that is a greater incivility; but if she sends a card she has done all that society requires for that year. In New as well as in party in the daytime, when the hostess is in full dress, the young ladies

WET CELLARS.

Dump Cellars Mean Foul and Noxious Air and Are a Prolific Cause of Disease.

Scarcely anything is more prejudicial to good health than wet cellars. Rheumatism, bronchitis, pneumonia and malarial affections, including neuralgia and sciatica, are some of the dangers to be apprehended. Dwellings held suitable and a foot below the base of the foundation and running diagonally across the cellar and connecting with the outside drains, and thence leading to the street drain or some low ground, is recommended by the town state board of health as the best and perhaps the only safe way to drain not only the cellar for a foot below its surface, but the outlying ground for several feet in all directions from the house.

The drain, while having a free outlet, should furnish no opportunity to put into it anything but what is extracted from the soil. It should never in any conditions have any connection with sewage, nor receive any kitchen slops or surface water, and should be well below the frost line. If possible the cellar floor and all the sides of the walls as high as the ground outside should be well cemented. It is well, owing to the great porosity of brick if used for foundation walls, to have intervening layers of cement, so as to prevent as far as possible the upward passage of the water by absorption.

This drain should be laid as far as possible from the well, lest in some way its contents should be emptied into the well and contaminate the drinking water. The expense of such drainage and wise precaution would be but a trifle, especially if, by its neglect, a protracted sickness, with its doctor and drug and nurse bills and eventually a funeral, should be prevented.

The Virtues of Yawning.

The Medical Record claims that yawning is by no means a useless act, for it often cures catarrh and other affections of the throat, in many cases giving instantaneous relief. It produces considerable distention of the muscles of the pharynx, constituting a kind of massage, and under this influence the cartilaginous portion of the eustachian tube contracts, expelling into the pharynx the mucosities there collected. According to Mr. Sajous, yawning is much more efficacious for affections of the tube than the methods of Valsalva or Politzer, and is especially indicated when the insufficiation of air, which is often difficult to perform properly.

Damp Beds.

The peril of sleeping in a damp bed is of the greatest, and it is almost ever present. The experienced traveler rarely hazards the risk of sleeping between sheets which are nearly sure to be damp until they have been thoroughly aired under his personal supervision at a fire in his bedroom. If this be impracticable he wraps his rug around him or pulls out the sheets and sleeps between the blankets.

HELPING HER ALONG.

An Accommodating Youngster Who Was Equal to the Occasion.

"It don't do to get disheartened 'bout a boy. He may disappoint you pleasurably." The old Saginaw surveyed the stretch of track in both directions as he spoke, then pulling up his bright but well worn banner sat down upon an old hand car beside the road. His vocabulary was more extensive than accurate, and it was often necessary to exert one's imagination in order to arrive at his full meaning.

"It's pretty hard," he said, "to look at a rampant boy an see the Dan'l Webster, or, moreover, the Lord Chesterfield in him. But it may lurk there in subtle guise, howsomdever.

"I have tended this 'ere crostin thirty years, an everythin from that school there on the hill bas ter come over this track, an I have got pretty well versed in the habits of young ones.

"When people 'loved Briggs' boy was destinated ter hang pendent from the galleries, I used ter cry 'flats!' He ain't nothin but a yearlin,' says I. 'Wait ter 'em' or so 'fore yer vote him such an aggre-jus failure.' An he did turn out ter be famously hard on."

"Why did he do?" asked the listener.

"Well, I bed trouble 'nough with him. He was internally persistin in gittin behind me an shootin out 'War-hoot' warnin' fer me ter jump a rod or two. Up at all sech capers! But the time he took Miss Toppum down hill was a clincher. He got a extra 'lift,' as we say, figurative.

"I see 'twas good alldin on the hill that winter, an the sleds was flyin over this crossin two a minute, continguous. Briggs' boy was leadin the band, as usual. He was on a single sled that day.

"I see him start from the top of the hill, an he was jest under full way when I noticed Miss Toppum walkin along moderate, right in the rut where the sleds was goin. She's sixty year old, an consequentially very hard of hearin; so she didn't pay no 'tention ter the shoutin.

"The lad tried ter turn his sled out, but 'twas so deep in the rut that he couldn't; so he jest give a little spring, for he was steerin by the leg, an flung himself over with his feet forward, an holdin out his arms, let slide right at her.

"She sot down sudden, but firm, an he held on to her; an 'long they come. I could see 'em some, distance, an the boy was so kid it looked fur all the world as if Miss Toppum was out eldin.

"I could see when they went by me that the old lady hedn't made up her mind whether she was dreamin or whether she was took up by a cyclone.

"She lives right there in that house, an they slowed down and stopped right in front of the win. She was all of a wobble, but that boy just got up an tuk off his cap an says, perlite as can be:

"'Oh, no trouble at all, madam; I was comin your way an was glad ter save yer the walk.'"—Youth's Companion.

Of Color.

Even the doctor, accustomed as he was to all sorts of sights, could not help but notice that the girl with brown hair and blue eyes looked absolutely bewitching in her white robes, lying there amid a wealth of lace drapery.

When the physician had felt her pulse he smiled.

"Only a fever," he remarked, with a reassuring nod.

Raising herself upon her elbows she gazed at him.

"What kind of a fever?" she demanded.

"I should say"—

The doctor was still smiling.

"It was scarlet fever."

With a groan she fell among the pillows.

"Oh, dear!"—

She was on the verge of sobbing.

"Why couldn't I have yellow fever? Scarlet"—

She turned her face to the wall.

"—is so awfully unbecoming to my complexion."

Then she declined to take any medicines by way of wreaking vengeance on a cruel fate.—Detroit Tribune.

There Are Rocks and Rocks.

"Dear father," wrote the son who had gone to the city, "since leaving the old New Hampshire farm I have been doing splendidly and am just piling up the rocks."

"Such songs have power to quiet

Before we moved from Wilier Crick our lily used to play

Her organ in the street room thro' all the livelong day.

The pieces that she liked the most was "Trip-ping thro' the Daisies."

An "Sloper's March," an "Shepherd Boy," an "Missionary Bells."

She learned the "Cowboy's Waltz" off without lookin at a note.

An sung "When You and I Were Young" out of "Merry Melodies."

Her pieces bore age had tears, an tunes a mess could learn.

But her piano music new goes frizzle whistle bum!

'Twas writ by furrin labor, either "stakl" or "ott" or "ouf."

An a mess—I think she calls him Glanowhikl.

She used to play the second—made it up y'se-lf.

While I moved on the fiddle "Gic Zig Com" or "Bulyland."

We used to have a medley piece that gives her pain,

Of "Devil's Hornpipe," "Smerth's Hymn," and "Where Up Lizy Jones."

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

TRACKWALKER JAMES SULLIVAN INSTANTLY KILLED.

He Stepped in Front of the Blue Line Express, while Attempting to Get Out of the Way of a Local Train—Hurled a Hundred Feet.

Track walker James Sullivan was struck by a Blue Line express and instantly killed Saturday night.

He was walking along the track at the North avenue depot. The 5.43 passenger train to New York was approaching the depot from the west, and the Blue Line express was rushing along toward this city at a mile-in-45 seconds rate from the east. Sullivan did not see the express approaching, but he did see the east bound train, and stepped out of its way over on the west bound track, directly in front of the express which struck him, and knocked him into the air. His body landed fully one hundred feet from the spot where the accident occurred. His legs were crushed into a pulp and were a mass of bleeding flesh and bones. There wasn't a scratch on his body from the thighs to the neck, but there was a hole in his forehead and his lower jaw was broken.

The dead man was picked up and carried, by Central employees, to the freight house, where it remained until Morgue-keeper Casey could be notified. He arrived shortly afterward and took the remains to the morgue and later to the home of the Sullivan's wife on South Second street.

Sullivan had only been in the employ of the Central Railroad about two weeks. He was a machinist by trade and formerly worked at Potter's Press Works. Having been laid off at the Press Works, he applied for and received the appointment of trackwalker on the railroad in this city.

He was about fifty years old, and leaves a wife and one son.

The case is still on as THE NEWS go to press.

Refused to "Move On."

Last night a young man named Agear was told to "move on" by Policeman Corsa, at the North avenue depot. Agear not only refused to do so, but wanted to fight the officer.

Corsa was willing and the two had a set-to in which the representative of the law came out best man, and lodged his opponent in the lockup.

He plead not guilty to the charge, this morning, before City Judge Coddington, and trial was set down for five o'clock this afternoon.

Superintendent Moon's Farewell.

Superintendent Frederick Moon of the Warren Mission Sunday-school delivered a farewell address to the school yesterday afternoon in the chapel. In response Mr. David Moore, for the teachers and scholars, made appropriate remarks. Mr. Moon was presented with several books in token of the high esteem held for him by the scholars and teachers.

ORGANIZATION COMPLETED.

Union County Women Meet and Appoint Committees.

The Committee of Union County Women to gather the exhibits, statistics, etc., which will be exhibited at the Columbian Exhibition, met Saturday morning at Elizabeth.

Many of the ladies who were present at Wednesday's meeting were in attendance, and with Miss Keen talked over the work they are to do.

The selection of chairmen of the committees and the division of the work were the main objects of the gathering. The general sentiment of the meeting was that Union county should have the best, most complete exhibit at Chicago made by any county of New Jersey. The ladies have taken a very deep interest in this work and have pledged themselves to do all in their power to place Union county's exhibit at the head of New Jersey's list.

As suggested by the State Board, the Union county commissioners divided their work into classes, and for each class a chairman was appointed by Miss Keen.

The department of Art will be superintended by Miss Kiernan; that of Philanthropy and Social Reform, by Mrs. Benjamin Williamson; that of Colonial Relics, by Mrs. Howard Richards; that of Music, by Mrs. E. H. Campbell; that of Education, by Mrs. Wardell, that of Literature, by Mrs. Dr. A. B. Blackwell, of El Mora; that of Temperance, by Mrs. J. H. Lansley; that of Missions, by Mrs. S. H. Clark. Mrs. O. D. Kremer will superintend the collection of statistics concerning woman's work in factories, stores and in other branches of employment, excepting that of education.

Each of the chairmen will have associated with her a number of ladies who will assist in the work of collecting data and gathering exhibits.

The meeting was adjourned to meet again on Saturday, Jan. 21.

BADLY BEATEN BENEDICTS.

Bachelors Won the Cake But Did Not Get It.

The deciding game of the series, between the Bachelors and Benedicts of the Park Club, was bowled Saturday evening. Each team had won one game, making that of Saturday night the most exciting game played on that Club's alleys this Winter.

There was a very large attendance. Two alleys were filled with friends of the bowlers, who were very enthusiastic and spurred their favorites on by applauding and cheering.

The members of the teams had each contributed enough money to buy a large fruit cake, before Saturday's game, to be enjoyed by the winners.

The cake was on exhibition during the game, and at the conclusion the Bachelors, believing that to the "victors belong the spoils," started to get the prize, when, to their amusement and chagrin, they found that it had been spirited away. They think it will be returned, however, and they still anticipate an enjoyable feast. The score of the game is as follows:

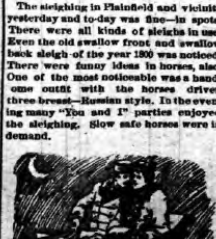
Wheeled Vehicles Superseded by Runners.

The sleighing in Plainfield and vicinity yesterday and to-day was fine—in spots. There were all kinds of sleighs in use. Even the old swallow front and swallow back sleigh of the year 1800 was noticed. There were many ideas in horses, also. One of the most noticeable was a handsome outfit with the horses driven three breast—Russian style. In the evening many "You and I" parties enjoyed the sleighing. Slow safe horses were in demand.



A Runaway Averted.

On Liberty street, Saturday afternoon, White & VanArsdale's horse came within an ace of running away. The horse had been tied to a post by Mr. King, who was in the house delivering goods. An engine blowing off steam frightened the animal and it tried to break loose. Mr. King came out of the house just as the horse succeeded in breaking the bridle. He caught it by the mane and forelop and held the frightened animal until the engine had passed. If he had been a second later the horse would have been gone.

The Board of Education met in regular session Saturday evening. Present—Messrs. Babcock, Finch, Hurlbut and Professor. Absent—Mr. Lounsbury.

The old Board adjourned, and the Board of 1893 organized by electing Mr. Babcock president and Mr. Finch secretary.

The new Board resumed business, by raising the salary of Prof. Maxson, principal of the schools, from $2,300 to $2,500 a year.

Dr. Probasco said that for some time he had heard complaints that there was no place for a teacher or scholar to lie down if one were taken sick, while in the schools. Mr. Finch moved that a settees be purchased for each school, and that one be placed in a room in each school building. Carried.

Prof. Maxson reported that Miss Mitchell, teacher of the third class, in the Franklin school, had sent in her resignation. It was accepted and Miss M. A. Hudson was appointed to fill the vacancy.

It was announced that the High School Lyceum are to hold another public debate. As these debates are given gratuitously by the members of the Lyceum, Mr. Finch moved that the Board assume the expense of the year. Carried.

Prof. Maxson reported that there were sixty children in one class room in the Bryant school, and that the teacher would have to have assistance. Mr. Maxson was authorized to procure an assistant teacher for the first class.

The matter of purchasing paper was left to the principal.

Prof. Maxson said there was a scholar ill with the mumps, and he wanted to know if all the children in that family should be prohibited from attending school. Dr. Probasco said that the children could attend school, as the mumps were epidemic but not contagious.

New desks are to be procured for the Junior Class, as those used at present by that class are too narrow.

The Board then adjourned.

A Church Burned at Summit.

The Calvary Episcopal church, a handsome structure of stone in the centre of Summit, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. The Rev. Rev. J. F. Butterworth, the rector, and Sexton Peck were the only persons in the building previous to the morning service when the gas ignited some overgrown to the ceiling. The firemen were present, but their efforts to save the church were futile. An unsuccessful effort was made to save some of the church furniture. The cost of the building is estimated at $60,000. The insurance is said to be $37,000. The building was erected in 1871. Bishop Starkey was to administer confirmation at the service yesterday. He was a witness of the conflagration.

MRS. VANDEGRIFT'S DEATH.

She Was Once Convicted of Having Attempted to Poison Her Son.

Mrs. Carrie E. Vandegrift of Burlington, is dead. She fell dead on the train while en-route from Philadelphia to Burlington.

When near Palmyra she complained of not feeling well, and a doctor who was also a passenger attended to her as best he could. She died, however, almost instantly.

Mrs. Vandegrift first appeared in Burlington as the wife of Joseph Vandegrift, several years ago. Where she came from no one knew.

She soon created trouble in the Vandegrift family and sensational incidents followed quickly one after another. The house was robbed one night and Mrs. Vandegrift accused a young man named Mart Matlack of having committed the outrage. She even perjured herself to convict him and barbed her tongue with vitriol to sustain her assertions. The young man was acquitted and received an ovation on his discharge.

Soon after this Joseph Vandegrift died, and it was openly charged by his relatives that Mrs. Vandegrift had poisoned him by administering doses of Croton oil. The charges could not be sustained and the matter dropped.

Mrs. Vandegrift's most dastardly act was committed years ago when her son's life insured for $12,000 and then tried to kill him. The son, Frank Norman, was an issue of a former marriage.

The inhuman mother dosed the boy with Croton oil. The work was slow, but in a short time the victim was nearly dead. Had not opiates been discovered by the attending physician it would have been successful. Mrs. Vandegrift was arrested and convicted of the attempt on her son's life, but through the efforts of her counsel the case was carried to the Supreme Court where it hung fire for nearly two years. The motion for a new trial was granted, but Prosecutor Budd refused to push the case any further because of the enormous expense to the State.

IN CONVENTION AT LONG BRANCH.

The Diocesan Union of New Jersey Meets.

The Diocesan Union of the State of New Jersey was in convention at Long Branch yesterday. Thirty-five societies were represented, each sending two delegates.

The Diocesan Union of Trenton, as it is properly called, consists of Catholics organized in almost every parish for the purpose of advancing the social and moral standing of its members.

At yesterday's convention Bishop O'Farrell, of Trenton, replied to the speech of welcome delivered by Lawyer Thomas F. Fay on behalf of the local organization, the Star of the Sea Union. Bishop O'Farrell advised the young men to peruse and cherish their churchly functions, and in glowing terms complimented the union upon its prosperous and healthy condition.

The State officers, President Peter J. Daly, Assistant Surrogate of Middlesex county; Secretary, Wm. Blundell, clerk in Gen. Stockton's office at Trenton; and Treasurer Thomas P. Fay, of Ocean Township, made their annual reports.

The convention discussed the union's advancement. Nearly all of the seventy delegates gave their views on the various topics under consideration. President John Guire, of the local union, acted as chairman. Father W. J. Cantwell, of the Church of Our Lady, "Star of the Sea," addressed the convention, and so did priests from distant parishes.

The guests left for their homes late in the afternoon.

The Star of the Sea Union was organized by Vicar-General James A. McFaul nearly three years ago. The union has recently bought a site and will soon erect a building.

North Plainfield is in the Trenton diocese.

AVOID THE TELEPHONE WIRE.

But if You are Shocked by One in the Street the Company is Liable.

[From the Electrical World]

A telephone company which for several weeks permits its wires to remain suspended across a public highway a few feet from the ground is liable to a traveller who comes in contact therewith during an electrical storm and is injured by a discharge of electricity. The duty on the part of the telephone company to guard and prevent its wire from becoming an obstruction on the highway. The person might have been hurt by coming in contact with the wire of the telephone company, and injuries to him might have resulted, independent of the fact that the electricity at the time was charged from the storm then prevailing. Moreover, persons have a right to be held to know the ordinary operation of the forces of nature and to use proper means to avoid them. The fact that the wires of the telephone wire in the production of the injury was inferior to that of the electric current, which was the main cause, is not satisfactory. It is, in fact, to admit that the company's dispositions were faulty, and that it was held to the dangerous force was communicated to and injured the defendant in error. This was the ruling of the court of the South western Telegraph and Telephone Company, plaintiff in error, vs. United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Fifth circuit.

New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association.

The fourth annual meeting of the New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association was held in Trenton, Saturday and Sunday. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, Englewood; vice presidents, Mrs. Theodosia Pelton, Plainfield; corresponding secretary, Dr. Mary D. Hussey, East Orange; treasurer, Mrs. Christie Beadle, Orange; auditor, Mrs. Dr. Beadle, Orange. Delegates to the National Convention in Washington, January 30th to 31st, were also elected, and plans for more active work in the State discussed.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Genius and Suicide."

This is the title of a rather unusual sort of paper in The Popular Science Monthly, by Charles W. Pilgrim. He says "Evidence is not lacking to warrant the assumption that genius is a special morbid condition." This is doubtful. There is a truth older than Dr. Pilgrim's deductions—a truth as old as the hills. It is that whoever achieves a gain must pay the cost. If geniuses have done extraordinary things it has been with an expenditure of nerve and brain force and with an amount of suffering in proportion to the greatness of the work. It is inevitable. The faithful worker who can bear this in mind will learn in time that obstacle and suffering are not always evils.

Another point Dr. Pilgrim overlooks. Many gifted persons have committed suicide as is proved by the long list of unhappy ones he lays before us. But, after all, and this point is not to be lost sight of, the minority of people who commit suicide are not geniuses. The suicidal tendency is found in persons of unequally developed brains. It happens that occasionally unusual gifts in some one direction go with this ill balanced temperament. Then, too, when all is said and done, the geniuses who commit suicide are the exception among geniuses, not the rule. If they were the rule, then stupidity would be a more desirable inheritance than brains: the greater stupidity the better.

We are reminded by Dr. Pilgrim's paper that Lincoln at times was tempted to take his life, and that he once wrote: "I am the most miserable man living. I must die or be better, as it appears to me." To the end of his life the martyr president was subject to fits of the saddest melancholy as few men have borne and lived. We learn that Goethe, whose life was seemingly so happy and prosperous, at one time slept for several nights with a dagger under his pillow trying to muster courage to stab himself. George Sand too, great brained and great hearted, confessed that she frequently desired "the eternal repose." The illustrious Cavour, the regenerator of Italy, twice tried to kill himself. The divine painter, Michael Angelo, became so melancholy at one time that he shut himself up, determined to "let himself die," and would have done so only that his physician prevented it. All people of genius apparently have been subject to frightful fits of the blues. But when ordinary people have blue fits it means nothing more than biliousness.

Can Religion Be Taught in School?

Yes, says Charles Lewis Slattery, it can. The method he suggests is very easy—simply reading aloud habitually to school children standard English literature that will arouse their noble emotions.

He tells us in the New England Magazine that when he was a boy in a little country school in New England the teacher devoted the last hour of each afternoon to reading English literature aloud to the pupils. He says he was thrilled through and through, as all his school fellows were, by Hawthorne's story of "The Great Stone Face." "We could not add it up as we did our sums, but its exquisite charm fascinated us we could not tell why. Only we were sure that it was beautiful and true."

Both religion and English literature may be taught at the same time if only this literature is presented to the children in pastime, Mr. Slattery says. All things about the school child instruct him in the visible and the describable, such as money, physical laws and work and trade. Books like "Tom Brown" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy" lead him to perceive that there is something in life besides the outward and material, something that we cannot lay hold of with his hands or yet commit to memory out of his books, yet which, nevertheless, fills him with a profound pleasure. His mind becomes permeated with the ideals of noble lives. "Once having known the beauty of these lives he cannot help being brave, honest and unselfish."

If $250,000 can be raised to meet the added expense, President Norton, of Harvard college, has promised that he will use his influence to have the women's annex made an integral part of the university. This is glad news to the girls who take the whole of some of the Harvard courses, but are obliged to be content with an examination to that end instead of a diploma of graduation. The quarter million dollars has been nearly all raised already, and soon the oldest educational institution in the country may be open on equal terms to both sexes. Credit must always be given to the newer western colleges, however, for paving the way in coeducation.

If you can in the next few months write either a first, second or third best essay on the question, "What, if any, changes in the present immigration laws are expedient?" then Public Opinion, the Washington newspaper, will give you a prize of either $150, $100 or $50, as the case may be.

California has cast an immense vote in favor of the plan of electing United States senators directly by the people. The Twentieth century may see not only United States senators but also United States presidents elected directly by the people.

MR. BLAINE NEAR DEATH

A Relapse from Which He Only Partially Recovers.

ONLY A QUESTION OF A FEW HOURS.

The Doctors Still Continue at the Bedside of the Dying Statesman, and They Only Sustain Life by the Most Heroic Measures.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—At 3 a. m. Mr. Blaine's physicians issued the following bulletin:

"Mr. Blaine's condition was more favorable. He is now sleeping quietly and shows a fair degree of strength. The probabilities are that no change for the worse will take place tonight, although no positive assurance can be given on this point. As compared with last night and this morning he is better."

James G. Blaine is nearer the gates of death than he has been since his alarming relapse three weeks ago.

Both Physicians Remain.

Both physicians remained through the night, and the family were accessible at a moment's call. The only near relatives who are not now present are Professor Damrosch and Mrs. Emmons Blaine, his son-in-law and daughter-in-law, both of whom are understood to be on their way; Miss Gail Hamilton, who is believed to be on the way from Boston, and Colonel Coppinger, who married Mr. Blaine's eldest daughter.

The Family Present.

Immediate members of the household are Mrs. Blaine, Mrs. Harriet Blaine, James G. Blaine, Jr., and Mrs. Damrosch and her child and the children of Colonel Coppinger.

It is a significant indication of the interest which the whole country has taken in the prolonged fight against death of its distinguished citizen that since that day the 28 wires running from Washington to the great news centers of the country have never for one single moment remained unmanned.

The Public Interest.

Night and day operators and reporters have remained on duty, relieving each other without cessation and at stated intervals, though every night bulletins have been wired to indicate at least that no change for the worse had set in.

More or less well founded assertions of failing vitality and dangerous relapses have since then found publicity, but none has been officially admitted until last night. On the contrary, the daily statements of the sick statesman's condition have been progressively on a scale of "a little better" every morning.

Misleading Bulletins.

But Saturday night the physicians admitted that Mr. Blaine was worse and much weaker. Even then this admission was qualified by the announcement that immediate danger was anticipated and that the doctors would not return during the night unless sent for. The exigencies of the case, however, brushed aside this intention, if it was ever seriously retained, and from the hour of 1 a. m. one or the other physician remained in constant attendance at the bedside, each relieving the other.

Shirt Workers Organize.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—The Associated Interstate Shirtworkers' convention organized in this city. The National Association of Working Girls sent delegates to the meeting. The purposes of the newly formed federation are the abolition of prison labor, investigation and abolition of the sweating system, the advance of wages and lessening of hours and the elevation of those employed in all branches of the trade. The following officers were elected: President, Jacob P. Leonard, of New York; vice president, Miss Margaret Lare, of Philadelphia; treasurer, Miss Cline, of Troy; secretary, Robert McNeil, of Philadelphia.

Trouble on the Altoona Railroad.

ALTOONA, Pa., Jan. 9.—It has just been ascertained that eastern capital through James Kerr, clerk of the national house of representatives, had purchased the Altoona, Clearfield and Northern railway last October. During the absence of President P. G. Patterson the directors, who are also the main stockholders, held a secret meeting last Thursday and sold the road to Samuel Langdon, of Philadelphia. Mr. Kerr arrived here, and unless the directors turn their interests over to his parties at their meeting he intends applying for an injunction at once and will sue the company for heavy damages.

Presidential Electors Meet.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—Today the electors selected in every state in the Union will meet. After giving their vote they will sign three certificates as to the result. One of these is delivered to the elector appointed to take charge of it and every it is person to the seat of government and deliver it to the president of the senate. The second certificate is sent by mail, and the third is delivered to the United States district judge for the district in which the electors meet.

Disastrous Fire at Lynn.

LYNN, Mass., Jan. 8.—At 9:45 Sunday evening fire was discovered in the three story block on Essex street, Cliftondale, owned by Captain William Chatfield, of Boston. Before the hours of the flames could be impeded one of the largest fires in the history of the town had taken place, resulting in a loss of some $10,000, which is nearly covered by insurance. It is believed that the fire originated from a superheated furnace in the basement of the building.

An Erie Ship Canal Delegate.

BELLOWS FALLS, Vt., Jan. 9.—C. W. Osgood has been named by Governor Fuller to represent the state in the convention to be held at the Arlington hotel, Washington, Jan. 12, for the purpose of agitating the subject of a deep water canal from the Atlantic to the great lakes.

Thieving Clerks of the New York Life.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 9.—The manager of the Brussels branch of the New York Life Insurance company has made legal complaints against a cashier and a clerk, charging them with having absconded with $225,000.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 8.—At midnight engine 313 hauled the first through train from the east into Seattle over the Great Northern railroad.

CORBETT TALKS TO REPORTERS.

At a Conversazione He Calls Champion Ex a Bluffer.

CHICAGO, Jan. 9.—Champion Corbett and his manager, William A. Brady, will meet the promoters of the Corbett Theatrical and Pavilion company. Corbett is certain that Charley Mitchell means business, and that after his term of imprisonment expires the Englishman will listen to America and challenge him for the championship.

"You see," said he to a reporter this morning, "Mitchell will have to do something. He is not popular in England, and he is naturally anxious to fight me as the best man living. If he is defeated in a long and hard fight his standing will not be hurt, and he can get on other matches. Then he stands a show of winning. The man who whips Mitchell will, in my estimation, be the most popular fighter in this country. If I had my way I would prefer Jackson, but looking at the matter from a business standpoint Mitchell is the man for me to meet. I, as the champion, will demand a purse of $25,000. If no club in the country is willing to put that amount up I will under certain conditions offer it myself.

"I will give $5,000 to the Coney Island Athletic club or the Olympic club, of New Orleans, $25,000 as a side bet, they to guarantee that the fight will not be interfered with, and I will then hang up a purse of $25,000 for a finish fight between Mitchell and myself. For the $25,000 the club accepting the proposition is to turn over to me the entire receipts of the house. I know that the Coney Island club can be induced to hold $15,000 persons. That would mean $200,000 as a starter. Out of this I could pay the club $25,000 and hand over the purse to Mitchell, should he win, and still clear a handsome sum. In addition to the purse I would want to wager from $10,000 to $15,000 on the side."

Politics at Albany.

ALBANY, Jan. 9.—The secretary of state has a number of certificates of the canvass of the electors, even to their checks for compensation, as it is expected the college will finish its labors today. Previous colleges, however, never required much time, always taken two days to complete their work. Richard Crocker, who is an elector at large, arrived here from New York, accompanied by Hon. William H. Clark, corporation counsel of New York city. Edward Murphy, Jr., met the pair at the Union station, and they went up to Troy as his guests. Tonight Governor Flower will give a reception at the executive mansion to the electors and members of the legislature. Speaker Palmer is assisted by Lieutenant Governor Sheehan in selecting the standing committees of the assembly, which he will announce tonight.

Again the Crouse Claimant.

ZANESVILLE, O., Jan. 9.—The Norris family, for some inexplicable reason, now want to discredit the first marriage of Grace Wilson, whose real name is Harriet. Neither Mrs. Norris nor her son in this city knew of Grace's marriage to D. Edgar Crouse or of the birth of the child, who is the claimant of the estate, at the time it occurred. When the Kosterlitz party were here in October they exhibited the birthday of Dorothy Crouse, in whose behalf her mother is contesting for the estate, but always spoke of the girl as Dorothy Kosterlitz, never referring to her as the daughter of the multimillionaire, D. Edgar Crouse.

Incendiarism in Bridgeport.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 8.—The portion of the city known as the East Side is greatly excited owing to the fact that two incendiary fires were started and burglars were very active in their work. A fire in the Adrent church had gained but little headway and was quickly extinguished by the firedepartment. It had been started in one corner with papers and in another with kerosene rubbers. A partially finished dwelling house owned by G. E. Scofield, next door to the house of Chief Beardsley, of the fire department, was found on fire about 5 o'clock. This was also the work of the incendiaries.

Supposed to Be in a Trance.

TOLEDO, Jan. 8.—There is no apparent change in the case of Clay G. Hopper, the young man who was supposed to have died three days ago. The body has the appearance of one lying asleep. The temperature of the body remains at 72 degs. The eyes remain as bright as in life, and while the face is somewhat pale the blood vessels are plainly visible. Six days ago the funeral sermon was preached, but Mr. Hopper says that he will not permit the body to be buried until satisfied that life will return no more.

Ex-Gambler Quinn's Crusade Indorsed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A Sunday meeting held at Chickering hall to protest against the growing custom of gambling on the race course was addressed by Hon. Noah Davis, Rev. Dr. David James Burrell, Rev. John L. Scudder, Rev. Madison C. Peters, John P. Quinn, the anti-gambling crusader, and others. Mr. Quinn's crusade against gambling was strongly indorsed, and a recommendation was made that a National Antigambling league be formed.

A Church in Flames.

SUMMIT, N. J., Jan. 9.—The Calvary Episcopal church, a handsome structure of stone in the center of the town, was totally destroyed by fire Sunday. The Rev. J. F. Butterworth, the rector, and Sexton Peck were the only persons in the building when the gas jets ignited some overgrowns in the building previous to morning service. The cost of the building is estimated at $45,000. The insurance is said to be $27,000.

The Erie Pays Ravenna Claims.

CORNING, N. Y., Jan. 9.—Mrs. Elizabeth Huff has received a check for $6,000 in settlement of the claim against the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad company for the death of her son, Fred Huff, who was killed in the Ravenna disaster in July, 1891. The heirs of David Rellihan have made a similar settlement.

Speeding for Fun.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Joe Donoghue's offer to meet for fun any rival claimant who could step a mile in less than 5 minutes was accepted by John Eddie and A. S. Franklin. An agreement to skate a 100-mile race for pure sport on any date between Jan. 20 and Feb. 20 was signed. The location is to be drawn by lot.

Canada Pacific Blocked by Snow.

OTTAWA, Jan. 9.—No through train from British Columbia by the Canadian Pacific railway can possibly arrive before a week owing to the heavy snowslides in the Rocky mountains. This is the worst blockade the road has had for the past five years.

DR. M'GLYNN EXPLAINS.

Cooper Union Crowded with Friends of the Priest.

NO RETRACTION WAS MADE BY HIM.

Some Things Which Are Attributed to Him, However, He Never Said—He Is Glad to Be Back and Has a Childlike Confidence in the Future.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Cooper Union was crowded last night with people anxious to hear Dr. McGlynn's Sunday address. Before beginning his religious discourse he defined his own position with regard to the United Labor party and the Antipoverty society.

"On last Sunday evening," he said, "to meet a reasonable expectation I read a statement of the doctrines of the United Labor party platform and of the Antipoverty society, my teaching of which doctrines had led to the series of events so happily terminated by the removal from me of ecclesiastical censures. It is well that I should now add that the doctrinal statement was full and unreserved and that it nowise minimizes, explains away or departs from the doctrine as I have been teaching it for years.

"The making of that doctrinal statement under the circumstances of last night was a sufficient proof of the fact, which I now positively affirm, that no retraction or condemnation of those doctrines was a condition precedent to the removal of the ecclesiastical censures.

"In addition to the doctrinal statement I feel that a personal statement concerning my personal status is due to my friends and to the public. I willingly make this statement, which shall be the better for being brief and as nearly as possible in official or semi-official language.

A Personal Statement.

"On Dec. 23 it was officially declared by authority of the delegate of the pope, in the United States, that the decision which I obtained for this express purpose, that 'Dr. McGlynn was declared free from ecclesiastical censures and restored to the exercise of all my clerical functions after having satisfied the pope's legate on all the points in his case.'

"The representative of the apostolic delegate further added to the agent of the press that the decision 'enables Father McGlynn to serve as priest in any parish to which he may be assigned.' I have received letters of the apostolic delegate, signed by his hand and attested by his seal, declaring the removal of the ecclesiastical censures, and, moreover, communicated to the bishops everywhere, that I may be permitted in their respective dioceses to celebrate mass. My representative, moreover, was informed by the apostolic delegate that he knew of several archbishops and bishops who would be pleased to have me in their dioceses. I have received an invitation from a venerable archbishop of the east to deliver a course of lectures in his cathedral. Further light is thrown on the matter by an official or semi-official statement of Bishop Keane, rector of the Catholic university, in which the apostolic delegate is staying.

"On Dec. 24 Bishop Keane said to an agent of the press: 'Dr. McGlynn will be allowed to judge for himself whether he will begin negotiations with Archbishop Corrigan for a parish or apply to the holy see at Rome. He is in the full number of the clergy, and will probably be given a position where his services will be most useful.'

Content with Things as They Are.

"I am content and prefer for the present to remain as I am, saying mass every morning and fulfilling my literary and lecture engagements.

"As to my future I repose with childlike confidence upon the providence of God, which, as a few think and I with them, has as if in answer to earnest prayers marvelously brought about recent events.

"It was a kindly and gracious act on the part of Bishop Satolli to refute the raking up of the old controversy on the day of peace and good will. I am very much touched by his charity and am thankful for it, but I more rejoice than I should state that some of the things attributed to me in the publication referred to by Archbishop Satolli were never said by me. For instance I never said the pope 'pulled Corrigan' or 'an old lady,' nor did I ever call him 'poor old bag of bones.' I swear it.'

Repeated Quarrel Between Archbishops.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—Archbishop Corrigan refused to discuss the Chicago Sunday Post's article declaring that Archbishop Ireland has been summoned to Rome accusing the New York prelate of conspiring with Father Michael Joseph Lavelle, rector of St. Patrick's cathedral, and others to defeat Mgr. Satolli's mission to this country and to injure Archbishop Ireland. The archbishop said that he declined to discuss any such questions in the newspapers, and that if any charges had been preferred against him at Rome it would be time enough to consider them when he had received official notice of their existence. Father Lavelle dictated the following statement:

"With regard to the article originating in the Chicago Post and published in The Sun I have only this to say on my part at present: Archbishop Corrigan and the bishops, priests and people who believe with him in this controversy yield to no men in the world in point of respect and loyalty to the holy see and to its accepted representative, Mgr. Satolli."

The Pope Firm in His Policy.

ROME, Jan. 9.—The pope holds absolutely to his policy that ecclesiastical affairs in the United States shall develop themselves along moderate lines and in a spirit of harmony with the institutions of the United States. From official sources it is learned that all the archbishops who took part in the New York conference affirmed the fourteen scholastic proposals which Mgr. Satolli placed before them in the name of the pope.

For the Skating Championship.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Jan. 9.—John Watson and Peter Mahoney, backers of Fred Breen, left today for Minneapolis with $10,000 to wager on Breen in his skating match against Hagen, the Norwegian. If Breen wins he will challenge Donoghue.

My appetite was all gone, I had no strength, and could not sleep. I was completely discouraged, before I got through the first bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla I felt much benefited, and after taking three bottles was entirely cured. I have no more headache, my appetite is very good, I can sleep well, and my health is excellent. I am free from pains and aches, and believe

AN OPTIMISTIC IRISH ENVOY.

Ireland Not an Abused Nation, but Prosperous and Free.

BOSTON, Jan. 9.—At an anti-Catholic meeting at Music hall Sunday, Hon. T. W. Russell, member of parliament for Tyrone, Ireland, delivered an address in opposition to home rule for Ireland. Mr. Russell stated that he was not soliciting the active interference of the people of America in the present home rule contest in Ireland. He believed that a separate Ireland was never in the grand plan of creation. The common idea of Ireland everywhere is that she is a much abused nation, misgoverned and trampled upon. This indictment the speaker complained was totally denied.

He believed that the time had come when England should not only be just, but generous. Today there is no country in the world where the land laws are so just and liberal to the tenants as those of Ireland, although he admitted that those of years ago were a disgrace to any nation. Forty million pounds had been placed by the English parliament at the disposal of the farmers and tenants of Ireland, which is more than an Irish parliament would ever be able to raise. An imperial parliament has given Ireland the ballot, which has released its people from the ironclad bonds of Roman Catholicism. The depletion of Ireland during the past few years, the speaker claimed, had still left the country as fully populated as its resources would permit, and in some sections it is even overpopulated.

He said that the present home rule movement, originated in 1870, and for several years after that not a politician, not even Mr. Gladstone, believed in or would have a suggestion for home rule. He believed Mr. Parnell was the only statesman Ireland had ever produced, her other agitators being merely politicians. He said that in standing against the home rule bill in parliament the Liberal-Unionists had redeemed England and stood by the pledges made to their constituents. He claimed that there were two Irelands—the Ireland of law and the Ireland of lawlessness. The latter, he intimated, is the party which is loudest in its clamorings for home rule.

He claimed that this measure is now admitted to be an impossible one to pass, even by those who were its strongest advocates; that to decree Irish representation out of the English parliament, as that bill would do, would encourage separation. He thought that before self government should be given to any nation loyalty and moderation should be shown by its people, and these, he claimed, are not shown by the home rule advocates. He said the industries of Ireland have prospered under English rule.

National Trade Assembly Meets.

MERIDEN, Conn., Jan. 9.—The annual conference of the National Trade assembly No. 252, Knights of Labor, was held here Sunday. Delegates were present from assemblies in New Jersey and a number of cities in New York state. The principal business of the meeting was to decide upon the establishment of a journal devoted to the brass working trade in this district. Since August, when the annual conference was held, there have been seventeen new local assemblies admitted to the national body, making a total of 2,873 members. The next conference will be held in Trenton in August next. The resolution adopted by the American federation in the Philadelphia meeting which represented that all goods made by certain Knights of Labor organizations were not bona fide goods was denounced.

Sweeny, the champion short distance runner, is in Germany studying music; Allen, another sprinter, has gone into business in New York; Wade, the bicycle rider, has graduated and has been ordered to stop riding, and Stillman, the shot putter, has, it is said, decided not to return to college.

Elkland Furniture Factory Burns.

The fire spread rapidly, burning the foundry of Bailey Brothers and damaging the Elkland carriage works. Assistance was received from Addison, Corning, Westfield and Lawrenceville. Loss was $100,000; partly insured. One hundred men are thrown out of employment.

Guests Barely Escape.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 9.—The Van Buren House, a brick hotel, located in Governeur, was destroyed by fire. The fifty guests had barely time to escape. In the Van Buren block were located the stores of J. W. Ormiston, L. I. Block and Max Rumpowsky, and they, too, were burned. Dewey & Perrin's drug store and the First National bank adjoining were badly scorched. The loss is over $20,000.

WAR ON LABOR UNIONS.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Declares Itself.

FAITHFUL EMPLOYEES ARE WANTED

The Vandalia Company Follows the Pennsylvania's Example—No Employment for Men Whose Loyalty to Their Union is Known.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 9.—The Pennsylvania Railroad company has openly declared war on all organized labor. No longer is there doubt of the feeling entertained by the different brotherhoods to which the employees in different departments have attached themselves. Openly and without any equivocation the order goes out that the men must sever all connections with organized labor bodies or their names will be erased from the pay rolls of the company. For months the officials have been clandestinely at work, using sinister means to diminish the membership of brotherhoods among the force of men in their employ. Lukewarm members renounced their orders. Others refused and openly denounced the road, but got a welt with the official ax.

At Indianapolis Oran Perry, city freight agent, summoned the freight handlers before him, sainting them with the remark, "All of you who desire to remain with the company instead of the union will walk to this side of the room." Fifteen did so and five refused.

"I do not want to be misunderstood," continued Colonel Perry. "This company will not furnish bread and butter to men who are likely to prove unfaithful to it. You cannot be loyal to the company and to your union, and if you prefer the union to the company that pays you your wages, well and good.

Cannot Serve Both.

"It is not necessary to mince matters. You five men are discharged, and you will get your pay at once. The others can return to work, but they cannot continue to work and belong to the union. This road is not be a union freight house while I am in charge. The company reserves the right to conduct its own business, and while I am acting chief of my own accord, I am satisfied my superior officers will find no fault with it."

Altogether there were twenty-three union men. Ten were discharged and the remainder withdrew from the union. It leaks out in connection with the Pennsylvania central affairs here that where there were nine members of the Order of Railway Telegraphers on the Indianapolis division three weeks ago but three are left, and these expect dismissal within twenty-four hours.

Thus it is plainly evident that the edict is far reaching and will include engineers, firemen, brakemen, conductors, switchmen and even freight handlers. In other words, every department of labor on the road banding themselves in a body for a mutual benefit will be asked to quit their jobs or their secret orders. The company's actions are possibly due to strikes which are apprehended in the World's fair. The more formidable the labor organization the better it is enabled to demand an increase in pay or successfully conduct a strike. By nonunionizing their force of men a general strike is utterly impossible.

Meeting of the Knights.

READING, Pa., Jan. 9.—A special meeting of the district assembly of Knights of Labor was held here Sunday afternoon. One matter considered was the reported action of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company in employing more engineers in anticipation of trouble among those now in its employ, but no action was taken looking to anything definite in this direction, though the subject was discussed in all its phases. The legislature was requested to pass an anti-Pinkerton bill.

Follows Pennsylvania's Lead.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 9.—The management of the Vandalia Railroad company has decided to follow the example of the Pennsylvania and discharge the freight handlers who refuse to leave their unions. F. Kennedy, chairman of the grievance committee, says that City Freight Agent Perry, who discharged the men, reports that all the roads have determined to pursue a similar policy, and that a determined stand is to be made against every class of organized labor.

Evening Dress for a Young Girl.

A charming yet simple model for a young girl's evening dress is of moss rose pink crepon, trimmed lightly with velvet the color of the leaf. The bodice is most fascinating, and has wide lapels faced with green and full draped elbow sleeves finished with frills of cream lace. It is not very low at the neck, and opens in a V back and front. The lower part of the bodice is quite plain and close fitting, and shows off to perfection the wearer's nicely rounded waist. Then round the bottom of the skirt—which, by the way, is most delicately finished inside with a heliotrope of pinked out silk—is a narrow quilling of the leaf green velvet, and a narrow twisted band of the same finishes it at the top where it joins the bodice. The dress has a fairly long train.

Fashion's Edicts.

The old fashioned gold fob is modestly coming to the front in smaller sizes.

Some very serviceable hats good looking shirts, made of a kind of ribbed alpaca with embroidered flounce, have almost the appearance of silk.

Pronounced shades in gloves for evening wear are not so fashionable as pale gray, cream and faint tones of fawn and tan.

Ermine is fashionable lining for cloaks and evening wraps.

Fur is employed for trimming all kinds of gowns, but it has a very incongruous effect used with flimsy stuffs.

Large lapels are a feature of some tea gowns.

Zouaves and sashes are still the mode.

A Parisian novelty in bodices is their one sleeve is puffed and large, the substituted for the other. Rich brocades in contrast to the skirt are swathed about the figure, forming a corselet.

THE COTTAGE HOUSEHOLD

HOUSE DECORATION.

How to Make the Home Pleasant and Artistic in Color and Arrangement.

The proper way to furnish a room is a topic of never failing interest, upon which as eminent authority as the editor of The Decorator and Furnisher makes the following suggestions.

First decide upon the design and general scheme of color, and it is then easy to select the wall decoration, furniture and curtains, which should be done with reference to the original plan and color scheme. The amount of light and the size of the room are perhaps the chief factors in determining its color. In rooms facing north the north light—which is whitish to bluish in color, requires it to be decorated in harmonious tints, ranging from orange yellow to warm red. Rooms with a southern exposure should be decorated in tints ranging from greenish yellow to blue, because the south light has yellow and purple. Rooms facing east and west should be decorated in yellow tones, as east and west lights have yellow and purple in their composition.

The character of the rooms themselves often determines their coloring. For example, we may consider the various rooms of the house, beginning with the hall, as the radiating branches of a tree, the ball being the trunk thereof. The hall, therefore, should be ornamented with strong dark colors, while the other rooms may range from low, strong tones of the library to the grayed tints of bedrooms and boudoir. A good color for the hall would be either a Pompeiian or Damascus red. These reds, having yellow in their composition, will naturally harmonize with the yellows and browns of the woodwork. Other colors, such as the varying tints of dull yellows, russets, bronze and tans, are suitable for hall decoration.

In libraries rich hues also are necessary. These are, for example, reds, browns, gold or green and orange, golden blue, deep green and terra cotta. Salmon pink and all light, delicate colors are good for parlors. For dining rooms the warm colors, such as soft reds and browns, are frequently used. We may also use combinations of blue, green and silver, which are cool and refreshing in the daytime and light up brilliantly at night.

The ballroom or drawing room is best decorated in light monochromatic tints, relieved with gold. The purpose of such an apartment is to show off the inmates at their best under artificial light, and the polychromatic dresses of the ladies will appear even more brilliant against a uniform background of cream and gold.

For boudoirs and bedrooms self tones of the softer shades, such as pale reds, pale green and so on, are appropriate, enlivened with gold or silver or their complimentary tones in small masses.

Fashionable Table Linen.

The general disuse into which the colored strip has fallen gives increased opportunity for the display of the finer table linen, than which nothing is more charming. The latest departure for those possessing fine oak tables or really beautiful mahogany consists in using strips of tablecloth for the sides and ends, leaving the center part of the wood uncovered, thus displaying its beauty in a well marked oblong. The contrast produced by silver bowls, etc., on the dark wood, combined with all the other attributes of a well set table, is very fine indeed, only all the ornaments, candlesticks and other items standing on the wood should be well lined with thick baize on the bottom to prevent scratches.

Where such an arrangement is impossible or otherwise undesirable, white napery, either quite plain or with woven insertion, prevails, over the a similar strip down the center. Lace may be used to great advantage for this purpose, and, needless to say, looks very handsome, especially with a display of silver, which cannot be too profuse. The insertions must show plain white through or some delicate shade to match the rest of the decoration. Doilies still remain a matter of taste, though always of a very light texture. Of course, unless white obtains, the choice must depend on the style and coloring of the plates on which they are to lie.

A Cabinet Pudding.

One-fourth pound of butter and 1¼ pounds of granulated sugar beaten into a cream, add the well beaten yolks of five eggs, one-half cupful of milk, then half a pound of flour, with the whites of five eggs lastly, half a pound of seeded and chopped raisins with a quarter of a pound of well washed and dried currants, the fruit must be floured before mixing. Use a buttered mold or a floured bag; boil three hours, then plunge suddenly into cold water; turn it out at once to prevent sticking. Serve hot with sweet sauce.

A Novelty in Silver.

The silversmith's ingenuity is severely taxed by the constant and increasing demand for novelties in the precious metals. So generously does this demand seem supplied that it is now quite practicable to find articles decorative and artistic representing exceedingly prosaic pursuits—luxurious conveniences have been bonnily dimpled pleasing diversions. Such is the novelty depicted in the accompanying cut and is produced for the recent holiday trade under the suggestive name, "Embroiderer's Companion."

EMBROIDERER'S COMPANION.

It is of sterling silver and consists of a stand on which are grouped five bulbous spindles, four of which are mounted with fluted tops, the fifth and central one terminating with a cap on which to fit a thimble. These spindles have a twofold use, being at one and the same time needle cases and spool holders. When fitted out with spools of colored silks, which are in pleasing contrast with the silver mounting, the embroiderer's companion appeals irresistibly to the feminine taste. With such a convenience the making of fortuitous bonnes a new creation and embroidery a positive delight.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

The Original Must to Be Exhibited at the World's Fair.

Uncle Tom's cabin, the real cypress wood cabin, and the cypress alleges, is to be exhibited at the Chicago World's fair. Its history is thus traced: The people about Nachitoches, La., have long insisted that Robert McAlpin was the original Simon Legree. His house and plantation were the only ones on or near the Red river exactly fitting the description in the book, and he the only man in the state who "filled the bill." He was intemperate and merciless and died before the war, leaving a memory for brutality to his slaves that is even now mentioned with horror.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

On his place lived a faithful negro, sold from Kentucky, who suffered everything but actual torture to death, and Mr. S. Chopin, the present wealthy owner of the estate, has preserved the cabin with great care in the confident belief that in time it would be an object of national curiosity.

The cabin is of cypress logs and covered with cypress boards and sound as when built some forty years ago. It is to be presumed that Mrs. Stowe used the novelist's privilege of combining the experience of several negroes in one, but simply as a relic of the old slave times the cabin will possess great interest.

World's Fair Sculptors.

The list of sculptors employed on the different World's fair buildings includes Daniel C. French, Lorado Taft, Richard W. Bock, Edward Kemeys, A. Phimister Proctor, M. A. Waagen, Carl Rohl-Smith, Karl Bitter, Philip Martiny, John J. Boyle, F. D. Millet, Robert Kraus, Mrs. R. R. Copp, Mrs. Edward Kemeys and the Misses Alice L. Ridgeway, Carrie Brooks, Bessie C. Potter, Halsine Taft and Julia M. Bracken.

Classic Architecture at the Fair Grounds.

The work of the artists on the buildings for the Chicago exposition was necessarily delayed, as most of it had to be done after the structures were completed, but it has made rapid progress under the direction of Mr. Frank D. Millet. This gentleman, by the way, is of original New England Puritan stock, and does not thank anybody for calling him Mil-ley or mixing him up in any way with the noted French artist. Though but forty-five years old he is a veteran of the civil war, and began his art work with charcoal sketches while in the army. He selected the sculptors and artists for the separate details of work, and so far as completed the results surpass the most sanguine expectations.

CYBELE.

As an illustration, the Agricultural building is here taken. The painted decorations thereon are by Mr. George W. Maynard, of New York, and the Pompeiian style has been adopted as most in accord with the architecture, which is classic. The main entrance is like that of all ancient heathen temple. On the right Cybele, mother of Zeus and Demeter (or Ceres, goddess of grain), is presented in her chariot drawn by young Zeus, and on the left is the latter's protege, King Triptolemus, to whom she gave a chariot drawn by winged dragons when she sent him forth to teach mankind the art of agriculture. The accompanying illustration is a detail showing Cybele in her chariot.

An Enterprising California Woman.

Mrs. Harriet W. R. Strong, of Whittier, Los Angeles county, Cal., is a woman of great enterprise. At the World's fair she will have two important exhibitions. One will be a "palace" twenty feet square, made entirely of pampas plumes. The other exhibit will consist of a working plant for a new system of irrigation, in which one dam is placed above the other. This will irrigate all of the orange and fruit orchards of the California state exhibit.

Swedish World's Fair Building.

Among the minor structures of the Columbian exposition of 1893 the Swedish building, though small, will be conspicuous. As the plot granted for the purpose was triangular and contains but 17,000 square feet, the building will also be of that shape and cover but 12,000 square feet. The style will be that of the old Swedish cathedral, and the building will consist of a main floor and gallery having a south front of 164 feet, while above the center will rise a tower 200 feet in height. It will be of wood and shipped in parts from Sweden.

MRS. POTTER PALMER'S HOME.

It Will Be the Social Center of Chicago During the Fair.

Every reader knows by this time that Mrs. Potter Palmer is the presiding genius of the women's part of the Chicago World's fair, a position to which she is entitled by social standing, ability to contribute, executive ability, and—what is perhaps of equal importance—a capacity to get along pleasantly with any other woman. By common consent her magnificent city residence will be the social center during the fair. All the aristocratic entertainments in furtherance of the fair will be held there, and it will be headquarters for the ladies in control.

This palatial home, often called the Potter Palmer palace in happy alliteration, stands upon the lake front, just south of Lincoln park, and its cost was $700,000. It is built of graystone in the style of a mediæval castle. It has often been described, and its idea of its magnificence may be gathered from the fact that it contains sixty-five sleeping rooms, besides a splendid array of halls and parlors.

Dens of Snakes.

Donald Burns, a veteran animal trainer of New York, will collect and have charge of one of the most unique and uncanny exhibits at the World's fair. It will terrify any man soaked individual on the verge of delirium tremens to approach Mr. Burns' charges, for he will look after the snakes, and snakes only. He proposes to make this great den of snakes, which will be placed in the National History building, one of the most startlingly realistic exhibitions ever known. Already he has more than fifty different species in readiness for the fair, and his agents are at work all over the world in collecting serpents.

World's Fair Guards.

Colonel Edmund Rice, of the United States regular army, has been detached for the duty of commanding the guards for the Columbian exposition, and the force he is organizing excites the admiration of all visitors. At the opening of the fair he has less than 600 men, but the entire force is to be 2,500, and they are selected with unusual care and discrimination. Every man must be 5 feet 8 inches high and pass a severe examination for courage, strength and intelligence. In fact a majority of those so far selected are graduates of high schools and colleges.

COLONEL EDMUND RICE.

Colonel Rice has a brilliant military record. Born in 1842, he enlisted under the first call in 1861 and was a captain in the Fourteenth Massachusetts before reaching his twentieth year. As major of the Nineteenth Massachusetts he won special mention for conspicuous gallantry at Gettysburg and came out of the war a colonel. His subsequent service in the regular army gave him special qualifications for his present task. By shifting his guards from part of the grounds to another he expects to have each man familiar with the whole ground and able to answer any question as to localities that visitors may ask.

Figures of American Animals.

Occupying prominent positions upon pedestals on the various bridges within the World's fair grounds will be large figures of native American animals, such as the bison, or buffalo, now nearly exterminated. It is believed that this will prove one of the most attractive features of the exposition. The modeling of these animals has been intrusted to Edward Kemeys and A. Phimister Proctor, both of whom have made careful studies of the subjects.

Endeavorers at the Fair.

The Hotel Endeavor is to be a feature of the Columbian exposition, and a very praiseworthy one indeed. It is to be built by the societies of Christian Endeavor, on a large square eight blocks south of the fair ground and on the shore of Lake Michigan. The style may be likened to that of a large Mexican hacienda—that is, the hotel is built in the form of a hollow square, with a court in the center, and every one of its 700 rooms will be both an inside and an outside room. The outer dimensions are 800 feet square, and the inclosed park is 317 by 385 feet, inclosing forest trees as high as the building itself.

Must Be an Intruder.

It must have been hard on midnight when he awoke with a start and perceived in the light of the nascent moon a dim form hovering about the chair where he had left his trousers.

He reflected for some minutes in silence. Then he leaped from his couch.

"My dear!" he whispered.

He was whispering hoarsely.

"Are you there?"

He leaned anxiously over the bed. There lay his beloved wife sweetly sleeping.

"Strange."

Musing thus a sudden thought came to him.

He strode to the stairway.

"Mary," he called, "are you in your room?"

The voice of the h'ad girl was wafted to him in assent.

"Then"—

There was the firmness of conviction in his tone.

"It must be somebody who has no business going through my pockets."

Whereat he fired four shots at the dim form and frightened it away.—Detroit Tribune.

Too Agreeable.

At a time when the Irish situation seemed critical to the officials at Dublin in 1881 or 1882 a certain Liberal peer was delegated to go to Hawarden and consult with Gladstone. Upon his return his friends received him with eagerness. "Well, what did he say. What policy did he recommend?" The peer looked bewildered for a moment, and then mildly remarked, "Well, to tell the truth, the fellow was so wonderfully agreeable that we never got on to the subject of Ireland at all."—Argonaut.

Seeker—You know Buggins of course? Yes? Well, did you know he had lately taken to horseback riding as a pastime?

Sageman—Oh, yes; I saw him in the city this morning.

Seeker—How does he appear in the saddle?

Sageman—Couldn't say. When he passed the house he wasn't in the saddle enough to give me a chance to judge.—Boston Courier.

The fifth and last of the series of bowling games between the Park and Fanwood Clubs was rolled last night. The match took place on the latter club's alleys.

At the outset the Park Club left their opponents in the lurch and held a commanding lead to the end, finally winning by 238 pins. The Fanwood Club only won one game of the series and that was the first one rolled. The score:

The Jury in the Muldowney Case Disagree.

As told in yesterday's paper, the Muldowney case was being tried as THE NEWS went to press. James Muldowney, it will be remembered, was arrested, on complaint of Chief Grant, for alleged illegal selling of liquor, on November 20th last.

Muldowney was the first to testify. He said in his own defense that he did not sell any liquor that day. His statement was corroborated by his brother-in-law, William Goff, who boarded at his house.

John Dorgan, the city's witness, testified that he bought whisky at defendant's house on November 20th, and he positively refused to answer. The lawyers on both sides spent some time in summing up. The Judge charged the jurors and they retired at half-past four o'clock. At seven o'clock the Judge discharged them, as they could not agree on a verdict. They stood nine for acquittal and three for conviction.

AN INTERESTING SESSION.

Meeting of the Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union.

The monthly session of the Catholic Young Men's Diocesan Union was held Sunday in the club house of the St. James Y. M. C. A. at Newark, with President T. G. Fitzpatrick, in the chair. The Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of this city was represented by J. J. Lynch, the Union's treasurer. Many important subjects were acted on. Before the season is over some of the talent of the many societies in the Union will be brought together to practice a drama to be played in Newark, Jersey City, and probably Plainfield.

The total membership of the fourteen societies in the Union is over seventeen hundred.

The pool tournament is well under way and considerable interest is being taken in it. On Thursday evening the C. Y. M. L. team will go to Newark, and play the T. A. B. team of that city.

Undoubtedly next season the Union will have a bowling league, as many of the societies are having bowling alleys erected. The Institutes of the Y. M. A. of Newark will probably bowl their first match game this month, and will most likely play the C. Y. M. L. of this city for their opponents.

A Dangerous Practice.

The habit of leaving horses on the streets without being tied, is a dangerous one. Runaways are frequent on this account, especially in cold weather. This morning another one would have been added to the list but for the prompt action of William Golde. William Baldwin's horse was left standing on West Front street. It was not only untied but was also left unblanketed. The animal stood still until it became chilled and shivered with cold. No longer able to stand the cold blasts, it started toward Park avenue on a run. When in front of Vogeler's meat market William Golde stopped the runaway and returned it to its owner.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Take notice that the name of the new Spanish minister who has been sent to Washington is Marquis Bandana.

The tenth annual convention of the American Language association has been in Washington and gone. But it has never yet taken any significant measures to stop people who use the American language from saying, "There ain't no body."

Lieutenant Carden, of the United States revenue marine service, reports that Canada has already warships which can destroy any of our naval vessels on the lakes, and that we must replace these vessels with gunboats that have their "vitals protected." Such precautions are well enough, but we are never going to have any war with Canada. Canada is to be always in a friendly way a part of this Union.

Dr. Paul Gibier, of the Pasteur institute in New York, believes he has found a cure for epilepsy. He has adopted something of the Koch idea and injected into the epileptic subject's circulation a preparation he himself made from the gray nerve matter of a sheep. He calls the fluid nervine. He reports several cases that have been remarkably benefited and are apparently on the sure road to recovery. Two of his patients were subject to such severe attacks that idiocy appeared as a complication. Under the benign influence of nervine, administered under the skin several times weekly, the epileptic seizures diminished greatly in both frequency and severity. Dr. Gibier thinks he has got far enough along in his cure to say at least that the transfusion of his nerve fluid will certainly add to the benefits derived from other therapeutic agents. He believes, too, that physicians are here approaching a new field in curative agencies. But just wait till the medical journals and the doctors who write get hold of Professor Gibier and his new remedy. They will give him worse fits than any of the epileptic ones he thinks he can cure. What is there now left of Dr. Koch and the consumption cure?

Peary's Expedition Next Summer.

In a characteristically American way Lieutenant Peary has undertaken to raise funds for the expedition he will make next summer to find the north pole. He will deliver a series of lectures throughout the country this winter, and after the season is over here he will visit Europe and give the lectures there. He has already been invited to do so by a number of the geographical and scientific societies abroad. His lectures will be an account of his experiences and acquisitions on his former journey.

With the experiences Lieutenant Peary has already had in two former arctic journeys, if anybody is ever able to reach the pole, it should be he. It will be glory enough for this country if in the closing years of the Nineteenth century an American will be the man who will first find the north pole. His expedition must not fail for want of funds in abundance to accomplish it. It will be a race between the American Peary and the Norwegian Nansen who will reach the pole first. May it be the American!

Peary has no doubt of his ability to raise funds. So sure is he that he has already written to engage a ship at St. John's. Hundreds of applicants desire the honor and the peril of going to the pole with him.

The American in the Panama Case.

The most stupendous rascal thrown up these days by the Panama scandal wave is an American citizen, Dr. Cornelius Herz, decorated by the French government with the cross of the Legion of Honor for distinguished services in the field of electrical science. At least if it was not that it was because he received the cross by vote of bribe taking deputies and of fiends who dared not refuse it to him.

Dr Cornelius Herz was well known in Chicago, New York and San Francisco. He is French by birth, but came to America with his parents when a child. He fought for France during the Franco-Prussian war, leaving his student life for that purpose. He is a highly educated, socially accomplished blackmailer, and that is about the summing up of his illustrious abilities. His success in swindling is attributed in Europe to the masterly manner his methods be learned in America. His particular magnetic power of drawing money out of people did not develop itself apparently till he went to San Francisco in 1874. He went into partnership with an old practitioner there—Dr. Stout—and bankrupted him. He treated a wealthy California brewer for brain trouble, and it is known that he got $100,000 out of him. Then America became too insignificant for such splendid financial talent, and Herz went to Europe and went in for electrical science incidentally.

The exorbitant demands made on the Panama canal directors by Baron Reinach was a matter of lond complaint on their part. But it now transpires that behind Reinach was Herz, pitiless and more exorbitant. At length Reinach committed suicide or was poisoned, and Herz is worth a million dollars, safely invested. The transactions, the knowledge of which enabled him to get Reinach and officers high in French government circles so entirely in his power, must have been dirty indeed.

FOLLOWING DR. BRIGGS.

Rev. Dr. Edward L. Clark Withdraws from the Presbytery.

HE SEEKS A LARGER LIBERTY.

The Doctor Cannot Believe That the Bible Is Without Error and That the Written Scriptures Affords the Only Knowledge of God Necessary to Salvation.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—At the meeting of the New York presbytery yesterday Rev. Dr. Edward L. Clark, pastor of the Church of the Puritans, 15 West One Hundred and Thirtieth street, handed in a communication stating that he wished to resign as a member of the Presbyterian assembly. Dr. Clark said that he could not believe that the inspired word as it came from God is without error; that the Scriptures are false and Christ is untruthful unless Moses was the author of the Pentateuch and holds the entire book which bears his name; that the omniscience and changeableness of God depend upon the fulfillment of every detail and figure of predicted prophesy and that a knowledge of the likeness of Christ and of Written Scripture is necessary in the church; that all other light which God is pleased to give is insufficient for salvation.

He says: "After thirty years of consecutive service I thought consistent keeping of the delivering of the general assembly, the religious press and the prosecuting committee of the late heresy trial have convinced me that I am mistaken. I recall with gratitude the kindness of the men who made it possible for the Church of the Puritans to build, more than $60,000 of debt. My membership and develop in its short history a benevolence of $600,000. My congregation is in perfect harmony, prosperous and growing. I have no plans for the future, but as God gives me responsibility with the ability to see the truth, it is my first duty, though in pure sympathy with the principles of our standard, to seek a larger liberty than the Presbyterian church can present."

THE FINDINGS IN BRIGGS' CASE.

Colonel McCook, of the Prosecution, Gives Notice of Appeal.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10.—The final meeting of the presbytery of New York, sitting as a court on the trial of the charges against the Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, met to receive the report of the special committee having in charge the consideration of the vote taken at the last meeting and the judiciary. Dr. Briggs and Colonel McCook and others who had been excluded from the executive session were admitted to the room. The report of the committee is as follows:

"Giving due consideration to the defendant's explanations of the language used in his inaugural address, accepts his full and full disclaimer of the interpretation which has been put upon some of the phrases and illustrations, and his affirmation of loyalty to the standards of the church and to the Holy Scriptures as the only infallible rule of faith and practice, the presbytery does not find that he has transcended the limits of liberty allowed under the constitution to scholarship and opinion.

"Therefore, without expressing approval of the critical or theological views embodied in the inaugural address or the manner in which they have been expressed and illustrated, the presbytery acquitted the Rev. Charles A. Briggs, D. D., fully acquitted of the offenses alleged against him, the several charges and specifications accepted for prohibition not having been sustained."

Discussion followed as to whether or not the vote on the report should have been by yeas and nays. Colonel McCook said he should appeal the case to the general assembly.

We are pleased to present this good Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Silkstreet Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows whereof he speaks, should hesitate to give us

Article of Merit

and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and these reasons he has fully given in actual cases of benefits to others by recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla. My wife had for many years been a sufferer from severe Festivities Among the American Clergy Displeasing to Leo.

ROME, Jan. 10.—A sensation was caused here by the letter of Pope Leo to the people of Bologna, in which the pontiff states that in nominating Cardinal Serafino Vannutelli to be archbishop of Bologna he had obeyed the divine inspiration. This unusual declaration on the part of the pope is regarded as tantamount to designating Cardinal Vannutelli as his successor in the pontificate. The pope is also reported to have remarked, "Vannutelli goes to Bologna a cardinal and will return a pope."

The announcement is made, without official authority, that the jealousies and infidelities that are disturbing the Catholic church in America have decided the holy father to postpone the making of another American cardinal. The names of the archbishops of New York and St. Paul had been most prominently mentioned among the American aspirants for the red hat.

The Philadelphia and Reading Report.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 10.—The report of President McLeod, of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, for the fiscal year shows net traffic earnings for the year of $11,190,-343 67. From this is deducted $8,041,895.28 for rentals, interest, equipment, etc., leaving a profit for the year of $3,137,147.15. The net profit in operating the coal and iron company for the year was $94,399.60, leaving a surplus of $3,181,480.83 over first charges of both companies. The report states that the coal and iron company having earned its interest on the divisional mortgage bonds, the railroad company is thus relieved from such payment and can therefore pay the full rate of 5 per cent. interest on the first, second and third preference income mortgage bonds.

A fracture of the arches of the tenth and eleventh vertebræ were found, and fragments of bone that were pressing on the spinal cord were set. Two months later Mulligan could move his right leg. In ten months the patient walked out of the hospital. He is now at work.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Doctors' Bulletins in the Case of Mr. Blaine.

THE WORK OF CONGRESS FOR A DAY.

The Wonderful Vitality Shown by Mr. Blaine Surprised Even the Attending Physicians—The Patient Losing Strength at Last Reports.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Mr. Blaine's physicians authorize the following:

"Mr. Blaine passed a comfortable day until 6 o'clock in the evening, when he became not so well and at this hour (1a. m.) he is still losing strength."

At 2 o'clock everything was quiet about the mansion and no one apparently was stirring. The lights in the sickroom were if anything dimmer than they were the hour before.

Progress of the Disease.

A joint consultation, arranged for perhaps an hour and a half, was held between Drs. Johnston and Hyatt yesterday afternoon. When the physicians left the patient at 3 o'clock both concurred in the statement that Mr. Blaine's condition was decidedly improved. He has maintained the slight strength consequent upon the unexpected rally. While in his present condition no apprehension of immediate dissolution is felt by the members of the family. His condition, however, is susceptible of a relapse at any time.

Dr. Johnston paid a visit to Mr. Blaine between 5 and 6 o'clock. He said Mr. Blaine had rested comfortably all day and was much better.

He had rallied considerably, and there was no reason, so far as Dr. Johnston could see, to expect a fatal termination during the night.

Sen. Joseph Stanley Calls.

Mr. Joseph Stanley paid a visit to the Blaine house last evening and remained more than an hour. When he left the house at 9 o'clock Mr. Stanley said he did not see Mr. Blaine, but had a talk with Mrs. Blaine, who told him that Mr. Blaine had rallied considerably and the family were much encouraged. He was conscious while Mr. Stanley was in the house and had been conscious during the day.

Several times the sick man had shown an inclination to converse, but he was persuaded not to talk. Mr. Stanley's visit to Washington was for the express purpose of seeing his old political and personal friend.

Just before 9 o'clock Dr. Hyatt drove up and entered the house. He stayed about one hour, and during his visit he made an examination of the patient, who had awakened from his slumber. When he left Dr. Hyatt reiterated what Dr. Johnston had said about the condition of Mr. Blaine during the day, and added that there were no signs of a fatal turn in the case during the night.

With the habitual caution of the expert practitioner, however, he was careful to make the reservation that no absolute prediction could be safely made in cases where the heart was involved. Still he had shown his confidence in his own judgment at this juncture by leaving the patient without the immediate presence of a physician, for Dr. Johnston, who was to remain in the house all night, was not expected before 11 or 11:30 o'clock.

Mr. Blaine Showed Wonderful Vitality.

It was clearly apparent that Mr. Blaine had surprised his physicians by his recuperative powers, and while they attached no more meaning to the improvement than a wonderful exhibition of physical ability to rally from an attack of extreme rigor, it sufficed to convince them that there was still some store of vitality upon which the patient might draw for a time. One of the bright spots of the day, too, was the ability of the patient to take nourishment and to get along without extraordinary stimulants.

In the Legislature.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—The District of Columbia appropriation bill was passed. An hour was consumed in the consideration of a bill to promote the efficiency of the militia, but there were no determinations. The remainder of the day was devoted to the consideration of a bill permitting the Norfolk and Western Railroad company to enter the District of Columbia. This was bitterly opposed and after a three hours' struggle, by permission of both sides, a truce was declared and the struggle was postponed until 11:45 today.

To Repeal the Sherman Act.

The senate was in session for over five hours. Half of the time was spent on Mr. Hiscock's (of New Jersey) joint resolution authorizing and directing the secretary of the treasury to suspend all purchases of silver under the Sherman act, and the other half on the bill granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties on the Marine hospital service. Mr. McPherson addressed the senate at length in favor of the joint resolution, and when he resumed his seat Mr. Aldrich, of Rhode Island, gave notice of a substitute which he proposed to offer to it, and he asked unanimous consent, in order to test the sincerity of the Democratic side of the chamber, which he accused of "masquerading," to have a vote taken on the substitute and the original measure to-morrow.

Objection came from Mr. Daniel, of Virginia, and the matter went over indefinitely and without any agreement. Mr. Aldrich's substitute proposed to authorize the issue of bonds to procure gold, if necessary to maintain the parity between gold and silver coins and United States treasury notes, and also provided for the suspension of the purchase of silver bullion on and after a date not later than that to be not an international agreement reached by which gold and silver shall be given equal coining rights at an agreed ratio. The proposal of the passage of any bill to repeal the Sherman act may be judged of from an emphatic declaration by Mr. Teller, of Colorado.

WOMAN AND HOME.

FOOLISH AND DANGEROUS METHODS OF PUNISHING CHILDREN.

A Model Cycling Costume—Doctor of Needlework—Women in the Home Circle—Lessons That Are Needed—Information for Maid and Matron.

Held a motherly old soul who has been a professional nurse a good many years: "I believe one of the domestic training schools we need most is a school for mothers and nursegirls, or at least a course of seven lessons on the punishment of children. Of course children must be punished. I know, too, that we have progressed very materially in this way. The father nowadays who would wallop his boys with a trunk strap Kept hanging handy by the buckle behind the kitchen door, so was common enough when I was a child, would be in danger of an overhauling by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. But we have other ways, some quite as serious in their effects, not only on the character of the child, but physically as well.

"Boxing the ears is an altogether too common mode of punishment among all sorts of mothers. Why, so is a fracture of the ear drum caused by a blow on the side of the head. Quite naturally a child's eardrums are weaker and thinner than those of an adult, and even if the membrane is not broken inflammation is likely to be caused by a blow and so result in partial hearing.

A blow on the ear sometimes has to result suddenly and with great force against the eardrum much in the same way that a wave in the surf would do, except that the concussion of the air makes the force of the latter more powerful and consequently harmful.

"Keeping the children after school is another barbarous mode of punishment. If the first place it gives the child the impression that school is a sort of punishment and that getting it out later is simply prolonging the torture. Besides, children, as a rule are kept in the schoolroom long enough and should not be set to stewing with the brains as possible. Besides, it punishes the teacher, who is often overworked and tired as well as the child.

"I've known mothers to wonder why their children were so timid and easily frightened, when they themselves had often shut those same children in a dark closet for what seemed trivial offenses. Such a punishment frequently affects a child's brain, brings on spasms and sometimes results in the death of a sensitive child from the terror inspired.

"Do I really believe children ought to be punished at all? Why, of course. Both unwarranted pampering and harshness spoil children. If a child is very unruly or bad tempered it is because of his mother's lack of training or because of inherited tendencies, and in either case justice ought to be tempered with mercy. If a child is positively cruel there is no way but to make him feel the pain he inflicts. There are very things only for which a child should be punished—disobedience and untruthfulness—and if a child is taught to do right for right's sake and not for fear of punishment very little punishment will go a long way."—Chicago Post.

A Model Cycling Costume.

Mrs. Elizabeth Robins Pennell, the author and artist, has returned to Philadelphia, but now of London, who has been riding first a tandem with her husband and later on the ladies' bicycle for nearly ten years, and who has tested many theories of raiment both here and abroad, wears a costume which she considers highly and which appears to possess considerable merit for a model. In describing it she says:

I used to think that the ordinary tailor made dress would serve all cycling purpose. And so it did as long as I rode a tandem cycle, where there is next to no danger of skirts catching in the wheels. But on a bicycle I found it was another matter. The rags in which I arrived at Berlin forced me to have a new gown made, and my husband, who was tired of seeing me unable, as his wife to work and invented what I think a perfect cycling dress. There have been other inventions declared perfect by their inventors, but mine has one marvelous skirt, closed around the bottom with a wide piece of cloth in which there are incipient knickerbockers. But I wonder, however, if that piece of cloth when you sit on the machine? Then there are skirts closed around the feet like a bag and a number of other ingenious devices.

But mine is the simplest of all. My skirt was of blue serge (this was a mistake; gray tweed would have been better), and it was made without foundation and with a deep hem turned up on the outside and well secured by rows of stitching, so that there was absolutely nothing on the inside to catch. It was the ordinary walking length, for I dislike when I am in a large town to have on an eccentric costume. But by a clever arrangement of hooks and eyes the hooks around the waist—I could loop it up so that it just reached my ankles when I was on the machine, and I was thus saved the unnecessary fullness in the back there was small—if any—danger of its getting wound up in the wheel.

After I left Berlin I had as little trouble with my dress as if I had, like the French woman, worn knickerbockers. For the rest, a linen blouse, jacket to put on when off the machine and a felt hat completed my costume. Next to the skin wool should be worn, for riding combinations are most comfortable, and I recommend wool overalls. They absorb the perspiration. Mine has so few bones that it is never stiff and does not interfere with my movements.

Why Needlework Is Not Practiced.

The reasons of the growing infidelity to needlework as an amusement are not far to seek. The nervous restlessness of the modern temperament is one of them. Our grandmothers knew nothing of nerves and were content in the accomplishment of one series of wool work in the span of a labor day. How the hour sped by, seated at all, living as her spinning wheel or at her tapestry frame, slumbrous of brain, tranquil of heart and intent of eye, while the world without revolved in bliss or danger, reeking naught of her whose soul lay in the evolution of an embroidered blossom or the turn of a crewelled bird. Today the other hand claims the energies and the wits of womankind. Her ears are no longer closed to the press of life nor to its pain, for which kneeling is no sedative nor crochet an anodyne.

Another reason for the discording of what is commonly called "fancy work" is the educated woman is the spread of the nihilistic spirit so characteristic of these latter days. Life is one continuous test to her, but it is certainly never static as a whole. Butterflies may be numerous enough, but they are not believed to be. Who, in the name of bewitching sentimentality is a spinning wheel which certainly never connected to our day and later on the ladies' bicycle for nearly ten years, and who has tested many theories of raiment both here and abroad, wears a costume which she considers highly and which appears to possess considerable merit for a model. THE CRESCENT LEAGUE.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING OF THE CLUB HELD LAST EVENING.

The Financial Trouble Was Unnecessary—Brought on by Misrepresentation—The Outlook Brighter.

An important meeting of the Crescent League was held in the club house on East Second street last evening. Despite the cold weather there was a full attendance. The result of the meeting was very encouraging and showed a tendency to have a satisfactory and early settlement made with the club's creditors. The trustees will appoint a committee to confer with the receiver for that purpose. T. K. Keller, representing his company, which is one of the club's creditors, said they would gladly consider a proposition from the club and that he thought the other creditors would do likewise. Prominent members of the club say there has been a "mountain made of a molehill." The creditors had not asked for a settlement and none of the present trouble would have occurred had it not been for the injudicious points of irresponsible persons.

The club in the first year and a half of its existence paid debts amounting to $4000, while all this loss is caused by $2000 which is the only over, of which $1500 is a mortgage held by the trustees and $450 represents the club's loss on its ball team during the past season. There is every possibility that there will be no base ball team next season.

There is some talk of issuing small bonds to the members of the club to settle the present difficulty, and reorganize with some of the old time spirit. The members, who are mostly business men, want the club, as it has proved a good place for them to meet and entertain themselves. They say the debt can easily be paid off in a year.

A tremendous "straw-ride" is talked of for an early date in which it is expected every member will participate. The prime movers in the club's welfare, believing that much of the club's trouble has occurred from misrepresentation, will endeavor to prove that the saying of "night and the world inspire with you" is false as true as "creep and you creep alone." We wish them success.

THE STATE CAPITOL AT TRENTON.

3 DEGREES BELOW ZERO.

THE STREETS DESERTED LAST NIGHT EVEN BY MERRYMAKERS.

The Cold Wave Extends From North Dakota to the Atlantic.—Warm Weather on Its Way.

The weather prophets have at last predicted correctly. It was said the thermometer would drop and it has done so with a vengeance. It has been gradually growing colder for several days, but about eight o'clock last evening the mercury began to accelerate its downward course, and at midnight it registered three degrees below zero. The frost on the windows of the stores gave place to heavy coatings of beautifully figured ice. Nobody was out of doors except those who were compelled by necessity, and those forlorn looking unfortunates allowed ice cubes to grow on their whiskers.

The extent of misery was reached, by men seemingly, compelled to drive through the biting, stinging cold from the mountains to the southern end of town, scarred upon beds of ice they were carting to the ice-houses.

Even the small boy, who has been to his glory since the snow has come, was compelled to stay indoors and play with his household toys.

The coldest part of the wave has past however, and a warm wave is now on its way from the southwest. It is promised by the same truthful weather prophet who sent on the cold wave and may reach us by Friday.

Although reports come from all points of the compass that the cold wave is past, it is particularly noticeable that health reports are more favorable.

At the conclusion of the services Mr. Cubberly was presented with a handsome gold watch, by the members of the church, in token of their esteem. Mrs. Cubberly was not forgotten and her friends presented her with a munificent sum of money.

AN UNRULY SCHOLAR.

A Dunellen Boy Hits His Teacher with a Chair.

Mr. T. H. Roberts, principal of the Dunellen school, gave up that position and left that village Monday.

Yesterday one of the larger boys of the school celebrated the event by becoming unruly and refused to obey. He got a chair and struck Mr. Roberts, intending to strike Miss Carrie Fisher, and finally struck her in the face with a chair, inflicting a severe wound. She will be able to resume her duties to day. Miss Phillips, of Hoboken, is acting as principal at present.

The regular monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Sunday next, at 3 o'clock, instead, on Thursday afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock.

A YOUTHFUL FORGER.

FREDERICK J. BUSHMORE ARRESTED IN NEW YORK.

He Had Plenty of Money but Chose the Profession of a Criminal Because It Pleased Him—Dr. Bushmore's Name Purged by His Nephew.

Frederick J. Bushmore, a nephew of Dr. Edward Bushmore of this city, has been arrested in New York for forgery.

Last Saturday young Bushmore entered the jewelry store of Isaac Lewkowitz at 290 Bowery, and gave the jeweler this letter:

GREAT NECK, L. I., Jan. 6, 1893.

To Mr. J. Lewkowitz:

This will introduce the bearer, Mr. Isaac Bushmore, who lives here and whom he makes a few purchases of you, and if it may be too late for him to get to the bank, I ordered a check for him so that he will not have any trouble on account of being a stranger to you. The check is for $75 on a New Jersey bank. By doing well by him you will confer a great favor on me.

EDWARD BUSHMORE.

The check had the signature of Edward Bushmore. Lewkowitz accepted it and Bushmore selected a diamond ring for $65, and a gold locket for $8.50. He received the change in cash. Lewkowitz then telegraphed to Hamling, and found that he had not written the letter or endorsed the check. On Monday Bushmore went to the shop again with another check and another note signed with Mr. Bushmore's name. He was sent to the Eldridge police station, and meantime engaged Bushmore in conversation until Detectives Price and Smith arrived and arrested him. Bushmore smiled when he was arrested, and remarked that it had come quicker than he expected.

On his person were found other checks on the Plainfield bank signed with Edward Bushmore's name for $115, $60, $130, $56.88, and $85. There was also this letter, written to a friend in Plainfield:

I am staying at the Clarendon Hotel, 126 Washington street, for a few days, in hiding, as it were. So far I have enjoyed life to its fullest capacity. Do not write me here, as I do not care to receive mail at this address. If you care to write, address me (here the letter mentioned the name of a gentleman) at Great Neck, L. I. I will not get them O. K. unless I land in Sing Sing in the mean time.

I am playing a very precarious game, but it is for the stakes and I must not let my nerve fail me, though it has almost failed me. I have $1,000 in cash on hand in quite nicely now, and the only fault I have to find with the game is business is too dull. I will write further than a kite if I am corralled, but while there's life there is hope and I do not intend to be caught napping. Have all the hash I would be all right.

The only note I have made so far are for $75, $75, and one for $15, and in counting two which were settled. To-day I am going to hire one for $100, but I will get it back in a few days. If you will hear of it. I shall do my d—— best to keep clear, however, but I can no longer stand the confinement well, and it is often the necessary drive and stay clear of the devil. For God's sake don't drop in his clutches as easily as I have.

Bushmore made no attempt at concealment when questioned by Capt. Cross. He said that he had deliberately decided to try a criminal life, and if he failed to escape all his fond mother would be asked to do was to send him no other boarders. Why should she? she even rose. Must be near Methodist church, Sing Sing, Stevens, Hepburn, 7 Broadway office.

EDITORIAL NOTES

At last the mission of the Prince of Wales has been discovered. It is to set the fashion for men in dress.

Veteran professional baseball players do not approve of changing the 90-foot diamond to one of ninety-three feet.

Whittier was a richer poet than was generally supposed. His estate has been appraised at $133,000, the copyright on his books bringing annually $5,500. But this is nothing like the wealth accumulated by Tennyson.

An enthusiastic citizen of Montana remarks: "From her paying gold mines Montana can produce gold enough to pay the national debt. Montana can produce $150,000,000 in gold if forced to it." Then why doesn't she do it?

Philadelphia is waking up and hustling. She has increased in population nearly 100,000 since the census of 1890 and now has about 1,145,000 inhabitants. It will be interesting to know how many Chicago will have when she cleans up house after the World's fair.

There will be, temporarily at least, a papal ecclesiastical court in America during the stay of Archbishop Satolli in this country. It will hold its sessions at Washington at the Catholic university. Mgr. Satolli will be the head, and two clergymen chosen by himself will assist him in hearing and judging cases.

The great American packing houses report such a shortage in the hog supply that many of them are now running on half time. All the same, however, the public has observed no shortage of the great American hog on the street or in public conveyances. He still spits upon everything within reach, and the cold weather, if possible, intensifies his generally boggish performances.

A learned writer in The Popular Science Monthly quotes the old saying, "Horses feel a famine first." Then he thinks we shall not understand it, and he explains it as follows: "The meaning, of course, is that in the commencement of a dearth of cereals the stables would be pillaged of the grains fed to the horses by a hungry populace before it clamored to the authorities for bread." To be sure! Grains fed to the horses by a hungry populace" is exactly the idea.

The Teaching Sex.

Of women college graduates it is safe to say that more than half of those who enter breadwinning occupations after leaving school engage in teaching. Even the ladies who obtain medical diplomas very often teach in some woman's college or high school in preference to practicing their profession. Women graduates of art schools and of schools of oratory, acting and music oftener become teachers than public professionals. As superintendents of girls' gymnasiums numbers of women physicians are finding employment.

So generally does the feminine sex drift into teaching that General Francis Walker, who recognizes the tendency, advises that there should be a special pedagogic course established in colleges attended by women. It would be well to have such a course in all colleges, in truth, for both sexes. But as the teaching profession is falling more and more into the hands of women, General Walker thinks their colleges should take the initiative in the matter.

He would have the students in such normal course practice especially upon the art of putting questions to the pupil in such a way as to stimulate thought. This one art, putting questions that stimulate the child's thought, he would have "studied and practiced, practiced and studied, year by year," until the teacher who is to be comprehends perfectly that her work is not stuffing a child's memory as poultry is stuffed for roasting, but is, on the contrary, developing the child's mind as sunshine and shower develop a perfect flower. He would have the normal pupils take turns frequently in playing school and practicing the art by which they will earn their living.

The demand for thoroughly trained teachers is everywhere greater than the supply, and graduates of physical culture courses especially have good places engaged for them often before they leave school. General Walker writes in The Educational Review:

> I would not have the colleges for women attach the more arts of the pedagogue, which may without offense be called the knack of the trade, or undertake to anticipate the necessary work of experience. But I would have the history and philosophy of education made prime subjects of study. I would have the psychology of teaching taught. I would have the mind, in its processes of observation, observation, reflection and expression, studied as objectively and as scientifically as specimens in natural history are studied in the classroom and the laboratory.
> The order of development of the human faculties, the child's way of observing, the child's way of thinking when untaught and untrained, the steps by which the child may be trained to observe and learn out of himself—these should be the matter of eager, interested investigation. Surely they are as well worthy to be the subjects of study as are the processes of vegetable or animal growth, as the order in which the leaves are set upon the stem or as the mechanism of the human body.
> I would have small classes formed to investigate problems in education, starting questions, starting propositions, collecting facts, discussing principles, essaying solutions, assigning the objections, under the guidance of teachers who should have their own minds directed upon the end of teaching their students—not merely to communicate thought, but to create it.

GENERAL BUTLER DEAD.

He Passes Away at His Washington Residence.

A GREAT CHARACTER OF THE WAR

Engaged in Legal Controversy the Day Before—He Is Attacked by Heart Failure at Half Past 1 in the Morning and Quickly Expires.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Benjamin F. Butler, of Massachusetts, died at his Washington residence on New Jersey avenue at 1:30 this morning. It was not even known that he was ailing any more than any man who had lived and labored so long would. The announcement this morning that he had died from failure of the heart created more than a little surprise.

The familiar face and broad brimmed hat of General Butler was seen on the streets of Washington in general term yesterday. The old contest over the will of Samuel Strong, heard by the general term on an appeal from the circuit court, was to have been tried this term. Judge O. D. Barrett asked the court to put the case down for hearing this week to accommodate General Butler, as it might not be convenient to attend later in the term.

GENERAL BUTLER.

The court was obliged to refuse the request, as other important cases had precedence, and the bench was short handed until Judge Cole takes his seat.

His age as well as a general impairment of health while listening to the oral decisions—looking for his own—was a matter of remark time and time again. Finally a few weeks ago the case was decided against him. Whether or not the loss of this case, to which he had paid so close attention, brought anything more than the sorrows of a casual defeat will not be known.

A Sketch of His Life.

Benjamin Franklin Butler figured in more cases than any other public man of this age. There have been several abler generals, many more prominent statesmen, as many more eloquent attorneys, though very few as successful, and perhaps a few as astute politicians. But no other man played so many parts as well, from the place of small lawyer to that of prosecutor in a captured city in the most delicate era and difficult situation of the civil war.

As a child Butler was very sickly and irritable. He went on a long fishing voyage and got rid of all his troubles—except a tendency to irritation, say some of his critics. He was indeed combative from the start.

In college he was half the time engaged in a controversy with the faculty, and barely escaped expulsion. In politics he often bolted party lines, and in Congress he was perpetually in hot water. He reached his maximum of greatness about 1865-76, and after 1884 was practically withdrawn from the public view. Thus retired the most unique and versatile character that ever appeared in American politics.

Personally, an eulogist of Butler said of him: "He is a thorough 'Yankee'—using that phrase in its most slangy as well as local and genealogical sense. Other men may be somewhat Yankee—he fills the bill. Like all intensely positive characters who possess ability, he has been much admired, more feared and most intensely hated; but it cannot be thought that he was ever widely loved.

"Many have cursed him; no one ever said he was a fool. As to stock, it would be hard to find a purer blooded Yankee. The Butlers came to New England among the first, and Ben's grandfather, Captain Zephaniah Butler, fought under Wolfe at Quebec and gained fame in the Revolution, while his father, John, was a captain in 1812-15. His mother came of the Ellery's, a Scotch-Irish family, and the Cilley of New Hamshire who was killed in the noted duel was a cousin of the general."

He was born at Deerfield, N. H., Nov. 5, 1818, was graduated from the Baptist college at Waterville, Me., in 1838, and was in no long time admitted to practice at the bar, was married in 1840 to Miss Hildreth, and became a general of Massachusetts militia in 1860.

Butler's Military Career.

It was of his capacity as an officer of the Massachusetts militia that he entered the service of the United States, April 16, 1861. On the 19th he started for Washington, and his experience at Annapolis, Md., from which his troops repaired the railway and locomotives and ran the latter, was one of the most interesting and encouraging incidents of the time.

"Can you repair this engine?" he asked of Private Charles Homans, of the Eighth regiment by them often before and since.

"I guess so," was the Yankee reply, "for I helped make it."

Calling to his aid other machinists who had worked in the same shop, they soon had the locomotive in running order, and Butler's command entered Washington on the 20th, exciting an enthusiasm of which no idea can be conveyed in words.

May 13, 1861, General Butler took possession of Baltimore, finding the late turbulent city quiet as a graveyard, and three days later he was commissioned major general of volunteers commanding the department of eastern Virginia, with headquarters at Fortress Monroe. There he issued the famous order, or decision, that "as slaves are property in Virginia, fugitive slaves who enter our lines are contraband of war," and many a year passed before the freedmen ceased to be called "contrabands." The first movement ordered by him resulted in the capture at Big Bethel, which at that time was thought a great disaster; but he soon regained prestige by aiding in the capture of Forts Hatteras and Clark, on the coast of North Carolina.

March 28, 1862, the so called "Butler expedition" reached and took possession of Ship Island; April 17 it started up the Mississippi and May 1 took formal possession of New Orleans. For the next twenty months General Butler was the most talked about and most heavily hated man in America. He has undoubtedly been threatened with a cotton fetich oftener than any other man in the world, except the czar of Russia, but verified the proverb by living long.

His fine imposition act was to raise $500,000, which had been deposited in the office of the Dutch consul, on the ground that it was for Confederate use. With this and other subsequently obtained by "asking banks and merchants" for an amount equal to what they had subscribed for the Confederacy, he not only provided for the poor of the city and paid for administering the local government. On the 15th of May he issued the famous "Order 28," known as the "Woman Order," to the effect that "any female who shall by word, gesture or movement insult or show contempt for any officer or soldier of the United States shall be regarded and held liable to be treated as a woman of the town plying her vocation."

No Prayer for Jeff Davis.

Another order (No. 27) commanded the pastors to keep their churches open, and forbade "a day of fasting and prayer for Jefferson Davis." Another order (No. 28) was William Munford was hanged for having torn down the American flag from its place on the mint. For these and other acts Jefferson Davis offered a reward for Butler's capture.

He began his political life as an ardent opponent of the somewhat aristocratic Democracy of Massachusetts, as a New Englander, and soon earned the reputation of being a "leveling Democrat of the most vulgar type."

In that era Butler was stigmatized as an "Old Hunker Democrat of the worst sort." As such he ran twice for governor of Massachusetts and was overwhelmingly defeated—it gave him control of the federal patronage of the state, though—and in 1860, as a delegate to the Charleston convention, he voted fifty-two times for Jefferson Davis.

In 1866 he was elected to congress by the Republicans, but though he struggled long and earnestly for it they would never give him the governorship. In congress he was a hard and successful fighter till the Hayes administration came in; then the issue on which he had fought ceased to become obsolete all at once, and on the new issues he was singularly unfortunate.

In 1882 there was a gleam of success; by a combination of Democrats and Greenbackers he became governor of Massachusetts. His term as governor was picturesque throughout. Thereafter he ranked as what he might call an Independent-Democratic-Labor-Greenbacker.

Butler as a Lawyer.

Whenever Benjamin F. Butler was not fighting as a soldier or in the political arena he practiced law, and his reputation in this profession was that of an extremely shrewd and able man. Very early in his career he gained a reputation as a skillful cross examiner. Volumes might be filled with amusing stories of the encounters between severe lawyers and the "smart" witness, and Butler's name would furnish many.

His early practice was largely for the poor, but since the war he has earned in some years as much as $150,000 in fees, his income since that time of other public men of this age. There have been several abler generals, many more prominent statesmen, as many more eloquent attorneys, though very few as successful, and perhaps a few as astute politicians. But no other man played so many parts as well, from the place of small lawyer to that of proconsul in a captured city in the most delicate era and difficult situation of the civil war.

NEWS AT WASHINGTON.

The Immigration Bill Passes the Senate.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL CONTROVERSY.

The Pope by Mgr. Satolli Asks the Bishops to Give Their Conscientious Views Upon Propositions Already Submitted to Them.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—In the senate the bill granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the secretary of the treasury and the Marine hospital service was passed. An important amendment was adopted to the section giving the president power to suspend immigration from infected countries, and now the section gives to the president power not to suspend immigration, but to prohibit, in whole or in part, the introduction of persons and property. An appropriation of $1,000,000 is made to enable the president to carry the act into effect. Compensation is to be made for quarantine buildings and property received from states or municipalities. The act of March 3, 1879, establishing the national board of health, is repealed.

The anticoolie bill was then taken up, and Mr. Vilas completed his argument against it. There was no action on the bill, the senate sojourning for lack of a quorum.

After a sharp and decisive contest in the house the opponents of the bill allowing the Norfolk and Western Railroad company to extend its line into the District of Columbia gracefully admitted themselves defeated, and the bill was passed without a division. All the business days of the present week were assigned by the committee on rules to various committees.

Agent Cooper Exonerated.

Secretary Noble has sent to the commissioner of Indian affairs his conclusions regarding alleged irregularities connected with the payment to members of the Sioux tribe of Indians of the $100,000 appropriated by congress to reimburse them for property destroyed during the recent Sioux outbreak. He exonerates Special Agent Cooper.

The joint committee on printing fixed upon the standard of paper to be used at the printing office and approved the estimates of the public printer for the next fiscal year. Bids for supplying the necessary goods will be opened at a meeting to be held Jan. 27 for that purpose.

The Silver Bill.

Senator Sherman is in favor of the repeal of the silver bill. He has said as much and has so expressed himself on the floor of the senate. His colleague, Senator Morrill, the venerable chairman of the finance committee, is also in favor of it. In supporting any proposition that will tend to remove the danger of free coinage and will have for its effect the repeal, while the members of Mr. Allison on the money question is well known. Party lines have been obliterated in the discussion of this matter, and the talk indulged in by senators shows that the subject has been considered upon the broad basis of statesmanship, rather than the narrow plane of party policy or political expediency.

Fair Sized Deficiency Items.

Deficiency estimates are beginning to pour in on the appropriations committee, and it is likely that this year's deficiency bill will be a fairly good sized one. For example, $875,000 in deficiencies was asked for the care of and furniture in public buildings. Chief Clerk Stocks, of the treasury department, asked the committee for $100,000 more for pay of custodians of public buildings, $150,000 more for fuel, lights and water and $75,000 for furniture. These amounts are asked in part because of the large reductions made in these items in last year's bills.

The Pope and the Schools.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The important controversy on the Catholic and public school question has developed a new and most interesting phase. The papal delegate, by order of the holy father, has sent out an important notice to the archbishops and bishops of the United States. It is a mandate from the pope that each bishop shall remit within a certain time (March 30) in a sealed letter mailed to the pope, either directly or through the intermediary of the legate, his personal, conscientious opinion of the propositions on the school question which Archbishop Satolli in the pope's name laid before the New York conference of archbishops in November last.

The bishops are not asked to suggest any corrections, but simply to give their conscientious opinions of the propositions as a whole. The mandate does not state or even suggest that there is a likelihood of the pope changing his views on this question. The question being one of practical experience rather than of doctrine, he has thought proper to consult the bishops upon it before issuing the document which, it is announced, he will shortly give out to terminate this question.

Brother and Sister Dead.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Jan. 11.—J. A. Clark, son of the millionaire thread manufacturer of Scotland, was killed by being thrown from a carriage after receiving a telegram informing him of the death of his sister.

Bids for Milwaukee's Public Building.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—The treasury department opened bids for the construction of a public building at Milwaukee. Thomas R. Bentley, of Milwaukee, was the lowest bidder at $714,950.

The Monterey Accepted.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 11.—The new armored coast defense vessel Monterey, built by the Union Iron works and which had a successful trial, goes into commission on Feb 2.

Both Had Eczema

In Its Worst Form

After Physicians Failed, Hood's Sarsaparilla Perfectly Cured.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. This is fortunately by no means true of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is recognized as, for it expels the foul humors from the blood, and restores the diseased skin to fresh, healthy brightness. Read the following from grateful parents:

"C. E. H. of Co. C., Lowell, Mass.

"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most valuable medicine on the market for blood and skin diseases. Our two children suffered terribly with the

for two years. We had three physicians in that time, but neither of them succeeded in curing. At last we tried Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in a month both children were perfectly cured. We shall always as a standard family medicine, and would not be without it." Mr. and Mrs. H. H. BAKER, 1412 2nd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

THE FRENCH TROUBLES

One Ministry Resigns, Another Constructed.

M. RIBOT REMAINS AT THE HEAD.

The Republic Stands, Although Carnot Is Accused of Unfaithfulness to the Panama Prosecutions—M. Casimir Perier Elected President in the Chamber of Deputies.

PARIS, Jan. 11.—The French ministry resigned yesterday owing to differences in the cabinet over the arrest of ex-Minister of Public Works Baïhaut and other matters. Although the resignation caused widespread excitement, there was no attempt to create disorder. The order that is prevailing throughout the city may be and no doubt is due to the fact that the serious element well knows that any disturbance will be put down with a strong hand by the military.

President Carnot charged M. Ribot with the duty of reconstructing the ministry. The ministry which has resigned was the same old ministry of M. Loubet, with the relative situation of its members changed and without M. Ricard and M. Roche.

The New Cabinet.

The new cabinet organized by M. Ribot is as follows:

M. Ribot, premier and minister of the interior; M. Develle, foreign affairs; M. Tirard, finance; M. Bourgeois, justice; General Loizillon, war; M. Burdeau, colonies and marine; M. Dupuy, instruction; M. Viger, agriculture; M. Siegfried, commerce; M. Viette, works.

The most notable difference between this cabinet and its predecessor is shown by the absence of M. de Freycinet and M. Loubet. M. Loubet's lukewarmness as regards the investigation of the Panama scandal has been ill concealed. In fact, he has declared in a newspaper interview that the deputies had rushed into the inquiry with reprehensible recklessness of consequences.

M. de Freycinet, who has been minister of war in several cabinets, has been mentioned frequently among the possible victims of the Panama investigation. Ribot, while retaining the premiership, has exchanged the ministry of foreign affairs for the temporarily more important post of minister of the interior. M. Develle has assumed the ministry of foreign affairs thus vacated, relinquishing the portfolio of agriculture to M. Viger, a new man. M. Tirard retains the portfolio of finance, and M. Bourgeois, whose probing policy in the Panama matter caused much dissension in the last cabinet, still holds the all important department of justice. M. Viette and M. Burdeau also remain at their former posts, and M. Dupuy remains minister of public instruction.

M. Sarrien, formerly minister of commerce, has been supplanted by M. Siegfried. He was once associated with the notorious Cornelius Herz. M. Albert Viger, the new minister of agriculture, is a radical Republican.

A Friend to America.

M. Siegfried was one of the most active members in securing the appropriation for France's participation in the Chicago World's fair, and it is believed that he will do much to aid the exhibition, as the French commission to Chicago will be under the direction of his department.

M. Siegfried will also have much to say about the next commercial convention between France and the United States. He was the most active supporter of Mr. Whitelaw Reid when the latter, as United States minister to France, was trying to have the prohibition of the importation of American pork rescinded. M. Siegfried has a son in New Orleans.

It is openly alleged that the president and M. Ribot are not in earnest in the Panama prosecutions.

In the chamber of deputies M. Casimir Perier, an ardent Republican, was elected president by a majority of 155.

At 11 o'clock last evening it was learned that M. Burdeau had refused the ministry of marine and that the portfolio would be offered to Admiral Gervais.

CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

The Revolving Man.

This little figure may be made to balance itself amusingly. Get a piece of wood about two inches long. Cut one end of it into the form of a man's head and shoulders and let the other end taper off to a fine point. Next furnish the little man with a pair of wafers shaped like oars, instead of arms, but they must be more than double the length of his body. Stick the wafers on his shoulders. Place the little man on the point of your finger, as shown in the illustration, and gently spin it around by twirling between the thumb and finger of the disengaged hand.

What Polly Did.

"I feel as cross as a bear!" said Polly as she came in from school.

"Then you have a good chance to make the family happy," said grandma smiled.

"Your mother has a headache, the baby wants to be amused and little brother is fretful. A cross Polly will make that fry, and then the baby will cry, too, and that will make your mother's headache worse, and"——

"Why, grandma, what do you mean?" interrupted Polly.

"Oh, I haven't finished what I want to say. That's what a cross face will do, but a good natured bear can make Jamie laugh, and then perhaps Jamie will make the baby laugh, and if your mother hears them perhaps her head won't ache so badly, and if she grows better it will surely make papa smile when he comes home, and if papa smiles I shall be happy too."

"All right," said Polly. "You'll see what a good natured bear can do."

She went into the nursery and capered so comically that Jamie laughed with delight. Then she took his hand and they danced back and forth before the baby, sitting in her high chair, and Jamie's laugh was soon echoed by the baby's.

Mother heard the happy little voices through the closed door and said to grandma, "It is better than medicine to hear those voices."

"That is what I told Polly," replied grandma.

As the tea table papa said, "It is such a comfort to find mamma's headache is really better," and he smiled at Polly, while grandma beamed at both of them as she poured the tea.

"It's like a Mother Goose story," said Polly. "The bear began to please the little brother, and little brother began to amuse the baby, the baby began to cure the mother, the mother began to comfort the father, the father began to cheer the grandma, the grandma—she began it all!" and Polly stopped for want of breath.—Youth's Companion.

Upsetting the Moon.

Mabel Greene is a Brooklyn five-year-old. She is full of odd conceits. One evening she stood at a window of her home with her pretty face flattened against the pane intently watching a slowly gathering storm. Darker grew the low hanging clouds, but Mabel showed no signs of fear. Instead her features were animated and she appeared to be absorbed in the scene. Even when a violent clap of thunder seemed to rend the heavens and forked lightning flashed the child was unmoved. At last, tiring of the sight, Mabel turned to her mother, sitting near.

"Mamma," she said, "I fink Dod is dettin weady to light his stove."

"Why, darling?"

"'Cause he's scratchin matches on the sky."—New York Sun.

Interpreted the Passage Literally.

The beautiful and peaceful picture of the lion and the lamb lying down together is tame and ineffective compared with the ideal brought home from Sunday school by a small boy last week. His mother asked him what he learned in the school pertaining with the beasts of the field. Inquiry revealed the interesting fact that Johnny had learned a hymn in which he thought he detected allusions to a time when he could play happily with all the animals which now he sees through cage bars at the circus. The hymn was, "He takes the children to his arms and to his bosom bears."—New York World.

Persistent Doll in the World.

I once had a sweet little doll, dears,
The prettiest doll in the world;
Her cheeks were as red and as white, dears,
And her hair was so charmingly curled.

But I lost my poor little doll, dears,
As I played in the heath one day;
And I cried for her more than a week, dears,
But I never could find where she lay.

I found my poor little doll, dears,
As I played in the heath one day;
Folks say she is terribly battered and torn,
But her petticoat's still washed away.

And her arms (stuffed out in the sawdust, dears,
And her body with sawdust bestuffed)
Yet the cat rather seems to peep out, dears,
Which I'm sure is extremely rough.

in Georgia, April 12, 1862. The engine was turned out of the Rogers works in 1856 and employed in service till 1890, and with the exception of a few removal parts will appear at Chicago exactly as it did when the famous run was made. Of the seventy-two raiders eight—including Andrews—were hanged, eight escaped, and the other six were exchanged in 1863.

Note.—See Worlds Fair.

and cost a little over $100,000. In the great hall of this building many musical societies will assemble during the fair, and some of the finest music will be rendered. The building is almost circular, so as to give the greatest practicable room for the great hall, which is constructed to produce the finest effects.

Germany's Building in Chicago.

Germany's building at the Columbian exposition will be a curiosity indeed, as it will combine nearly all the styles of architecture, and in fact a section of it will represent all the schools of German art and nearly all the eras. The main structure will be 132 by 106 feet, but from the center and rear an extension will put out 50 feet, making the central section 183 feet long. This extension is known as the chapel, and will contain objects of an ecclesiastical nature, such as altars and painted windows. Above it will rise a belfry tower 160 feet in height. The plans were drawn by an official architect in Germany.

WISCONSIN'S MONOLITH.

The Largest Single Dressed Stone in the World to Be Exhibited at Chicago.

The largest single dressed stone in the world, so far as known, will stand in Jackson park during the Chicago exposition if no accident occurs in transit, for it is already taken entire from the quarry. It is of brownstone from the immense Bayfield ledge on the Wisconsin shore of Lake Superior, and its production is the result of a discovery as to the peculiar, active merits of ancient and modern builders.

Mr. Frederick Prentice, of Ashland, Wis., declared that he could surpass the largest single stone wrought by the Egyptians, and would furnish the proof from his quarry as a gift to the state if the latter would transport it to Chicago. On the 1st of last August forty men were set to work and five steam channelers to running, and the huge monolith, known locally as the "Giant," was finally liberated from its place and the finishers put to work. The shaft, when dressed, will be 135 feet long, 10 feet square at the base and 4 feet at the top, with an apex 5 feet long and tapering to a point. It will stand upon a foundation of granite 10 feet high and 12 feet square.

THE MONOLITH.

The famous Egyptian obelisk is 108 feet 7 inches long and 9 feet square at the base. The notion that the ancients could quarry and transport larger stones than the moderns no longer holds dominion. They did it much oftener, however, because their laborers were slaves, as a rule, and so the cost was not counted. The monolith is of the finest Lake Superior brownstone, which is shown by analysis to consist of 91.40 per cent. silica, 8 per cent. ferric oxide, 0.33 per cent. alumina and a few minor elements, of which lime makes up only a quarter of 1 per cent.

Guides at the World's Fair.

Some one has estimated that 5,000 guides will be required at the World's fair. Other persons equally well informed contend that 1,000 will be enough. Whether official guides are appointed or not, it is certain that hundreds of bright Chicagoans of good address will go into the business of showing foreign visitors around on their own account.

A War Relic.

Of the many relics of the civil war to be seen at the Columbian exposition none will have a more pathetic interest than the famous tin engine, General, which ran the locomotive of the ill-fated Andrews' raiders, made famous by the movie, the Great Atlantic and

AN INTERESTING RELIC.

The Wyliam Dilly Engine to Be Shown at the World's Fair.

Among the relics of great historic interest to be shown at the Chicago World's fair will be the Wylam Dilly, one of the first living engines to be operated on railways. The station engine house and engine built on the Leicester and Swannington railway in 1832 by Robert Stephenson are still in use, but the first engine to be operated on the rails was the Tweethick, the Wylam Dilly and the Puffing Billy, on Cheapside cars. Both the first named drew a train of coal, the load of passengers ever moved by steam on a railway. The fate of that engine has never been known.

Being the success of Mr. Tweethick, who constructed it, Mr. Heddy, of the Wylam colliery, went to work to improve the method and in 1831 turned out the two locomotive engines named the Puffing Billy, so called from the noise made by its two blast pipes, long since went the way of old iron, but the Wylam Dilly is in fair repair, and it is now in a museum at Newcastle-on-Tyne, workable at Chicago. The first locomotive engine used in America was long since turned into scrap iron.

How the World's Fair Is Advertised.

No enterprise in the history of the world has ever been so thoroughly advertised as the World's fair. The department of publicity and promotion is responsible for this. Interesting matter is collected and collated by competent writers and put into type in several languages. The progress of the work is recorded every week. The regular supply of news is sent to 18,000 newspapers, 10,000 journals and periodicals and 5,000 class or trade papers. From the mailing room of the department of publicity and promotion have gone forth the lithographs and other papers which have become so familiar to the public. For several months there was an average distribution of over 20,000 pictures per month. The average number of electrotypes now supplied to newspapers is over 300 a month. Competent writers are employed, who, supply the papers and newspapers any special articles which they may desire in connection with the World's fair.

A Young Woman Manager.

Of the many talented ladies managing the women's exhibit at the Columbian exposition Miss Florence Todd Patterson, of Westfield, N. Y., is probably the youngest.* At any rate she is the youngest of the members constituting the state board of New York. She was graduated from Vassar in 1888, has since traveled abroad and taken much interest in various schemes for the advancement of women. Of her appointment she says: "I suppose that I owe my appointment, for the most part, to the great activity in which this part of the world displayed during the late Gaston W. Paine's campaign. He was Democratic governor and also member of congress from this district."

Arkansas World's Fair Building.

Arkansas has won a certain sort of fame by being the only state to have a building at the Columbian exposition designed by a woman. The lady was Miss Jean Loughborough when her plan was adopted by the Arkansas commission, but soon after she was married, at the capital of that state, to Mr. Frank M. Douglass, and she is now a resident of Chicago. She learned architecture in that city, and her design for the Arkansas building was selected almost at the first view, over dozens of many competitors. For its rare combination of beauty, simplicity and convenience. The Arkansas building looks just what it was meant to be—a delightful clubhouse, where friends or visitors may rest and enjoy themselves socially.

Too Brief a Space.

In less than fifteen minutes after the man who was raising a board took his seat in the front parlor the girl with a pink and white complexion appeared at the doorway in hat and wrap.

He was astonished to see her.

He had been going with her for four years and had never before known her to be ready thus expeditiously.

"Oh, John"——

Her embarrassment was brief and vivacious.

"I've a scheme for saving time, I"——

She came close to his side and there was a bewitching twinkle in her eyes as she looked up at him.

"——propose to put on my gloves as we go."

The expression of doleful in his face froze the glad smile on her lips.

"Kate," he observed, knitting his brows thoughtfully, "I don't believe you can do it. Why"——

His look was all that is frank and ingenuous.

"——don't be so at an hour on that way."

All she could do was to summon bits of being mean and pout.—Detroit Tribune.

Their Manners Were Friendly.

Two rats barred outside of the 42 cities abouts were both dressed in their shabbiest duds one day last week. A stylishly dressed young lady sat in the opposite seat. Turning to one of the rats she said:

"What is your name, little boy?"

"Harold, mum," he replied.

"And yours, dear?" she asked, addressing the other.

"Oh, my name's Godfrey," said the little fellow with some show of pride.

"Why, what pretty names!" exclaimed the young lady. "And you look so much alike. You are brothers of course?"

"Oh, no, mum," spoke up Harold; "our mothers is only friends."—New York Herald.

OLD TIME WEATHER

MORE SNOW AND FINE SLEIGHING.

The Small Boys Prefer "Hitching" to Coasting and Consequently the Hills Are Not Packed.

Another heavy snow storm began falling during last night and has continued all day. This is the fourth snowfall this month and the remains of three previous ones, helped by the zero weather which has prevailed, makes an excellent "bottom" for sleighing. On January 5th about two inches of snow fell, which was increased the next day to six inches by another storm. Last Monday evening, the 9th, two more inches of the flakes were added, and as the snow is still falling we may begin to prepare for Farmer Dunn's prediction of nine feet of snow during January.

It is a very noticeable fact that the chronic grumblers who generally find fault with the weather on all occasions, at last seem satisfied.

It is also equally noticeable that the small boys, who, on previous Winters, would make the most of an inch of snow by "making" the hills for coasting, are now allowing the best opportunity of the season, thus far, to slip by.

The Broadway hill, the Rahway road hill, and Hyde's hill, which, in the past afforded so much pleasure for the numbers of young people are now deserted, although considered safe, being used very little by vehicles.

BREVITIES.

—The Kill von Kull, the Rahway river, Newark Bay, and Elizabeth river are frozen over.

—Hear the free popular talk to be given by Franklin S. Smith at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

—Neuman Bros., those thriving grocers, say they are making special inducements to the public, in their large and select line of canned vegetables and fruits. Their reserved sugar corn, they say, is the finest in the market.

—The following members of the Crescent Wheelmen will bowl a game this evening with the Journal trophy team on the Crescent League alleys: J. Haynes, captain; J. Doane, L. B. Wooleton, J. J. Kenny, J. F. Buckle, W. H. Rogers, H. Doane, C. Leggett, G. Tobin and Dr. Adams.

Columbian Half Dollars.

A few of the special issue of the new souvenir half dollars of the World's Fair series have reached this city. They look bright and new and are handsomely made. One side is a profile head of Columbus, which differs from the many pictures of Columbus as much as they all differ from each other, showing him with a Roman nose, long hair and we know not what color eyes. On the "head" side are the words "United States of America" "Columbian Half Dollar" and on the back, or "tail" side, is a clearly embossed figure of Santa Maria, which was Columbus' sailing vessel, and the two hemispheres. The details of the ship and the maps are very delicate and clear, though Plainfield is not to be distinguished on the map of America.

J. Hervey Doane of Park avenue, is making a brooch with one of these coins for Mr. Davis, who leaves this city to-day for China where he is going as a missionary for the Seventh-Day Baptist church. He has been a missionary in that country for many years and is now returning from a brief visit to this country, the last few weeks of which he has spent in this city as the guest of William H. Rogers of Central avenue.

Cashier Frank S. Runyon of the First National Bank also possesses one of the new coins.

An Important Decision.

The Court of Errors and Appeals of New Jersey has just rendered a very important decision, which holds that the owners of the ice which has been licensed for several years at a fee of $150 or less can prosecute a writ of certiorari to try the locality of an order for an election to be held in the township wherever the ice is situated, under section four of the act of 1889, to determine whether the minimum fee to be charged for license in that township shall be $8,000. Such an owner is threatened with a special injury to his property, which enables him to prosecute a writ of certiorari.

The opinion just rendered reverses the opinion of the Supreme Court. The Court further holds that a public notice of an election under the act must mention the amount of the fee which is to be the subject matter upon which the electors of a township are to vote.

"A Magazine" To-night at the Casino.

"A Magazine" is the title of a very novel entertainment to be given at the Casino this evening under the auspices of the Literary Society of Grace church. By means of readings, tableaux and poses every characteristic of a first-class metropolitan magazine will be presented. Even the love stories and advertisements forming an important part on the program.

Both Feet to be Amputated.

Thomas Tyndall, of Elizabeth, who for years has led a hermit-like life, was found yesterday morning in an old house on Colonel Kean's property, where he lodged, with both feet frozen.

The ambulance was summoned and the old man removed to the hospital. The doctors fear for his recovery, as both feet will have to be amputated.

A SEASON OF ART WORK

UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE CAMERA CLUB.

Now in Progress, for the Pleasure and Education of the Club's Members and Friends.

Each club made about a hundred lantern slides from the handsomest negatives of its members and after an exhibition of them to their own club started them on their journey to the other clubs in the interchange. The slides are sent on a regular route, and the Plainfield Club receives slides every two weeks through the Newark Club, and after exhibiting them on the sheet, they are forwarded from here to Waterbury, Conn. They thus keep traveling, each club exhibiting the slides of a sister club every two weeks, and at the end of the season, the slides all return to their respective owners. It is proposed to continue this custom every Winter, using subjects made during the Summer.

Selections from the work of nearly a thousand of the country's best amateurs were last presented and aside from the instruction gained of our great fund, they are exhibitions of art.

The Plainfield Club has already exhibited views from the Newark and Orange Clubs and on Jan. 16 will illuminate the Hoboken club's work, to be followed every fortnight with work of the other clubs in the order named until exhausted. Beside these entertainments there will also be a lecture during the season on Art Composition, by Mr. John Ward Stimpson, Manager of the New York School for Artist Artisans, and Mr. Chas. H. Davis, will devote an evening to the subject of Posing and Lighting, illustrated on the screen with upwards of one hundred specimens of his highly artistic productions. Mr. R. H. Fuller, will also read a paper on Photography.

Due announcement of each entertainment will be given through the daily newspapers.

The Club has a gallery fitted up for its use in the Post office building and the work of its members has a high standing in the position of the other clubs. "Points" are freely exchanged for the general good.

The Plainfield slides were last week exhibited by the Oakland (Cal.) Camera Club and will be enjoyed this week by the California Camera Club of San Francisco. It would be of interest to the Plainfield members if the criticisms of each club were made a note of and continue with the slides on their journey.

Miss Mamie Pixie of Elizabeth is visiting her sister, Mrs. Robert Mariner, of East Sixth street.

Mr. Alexander McKenzie formerly a clerk in one of the stores of this city but now a successful merchant of Bergen Point, where he went about a year ago, is the guest Mr. Harry Werner.

A large number of the society representatives of this city were present last evening at the reception given by Miss Emilie Schlipper at her beautiful home on West Seventh street from three o'clock until half-past ten.

Mr. B. G. Runkle of West Eighth street is a member of the Board of Directors of the Havana Gas Company of Havana, Cuba. He will leave for that city on Saturday to attend the annual election of the Board and expects to be gone about three weeks.

Mr. Garret Schenck of Manning avenue, who several weeks ago had one of his fingers nearly cut off while working at the machinery in the North Plainfield electric light station, is still suffering severely from the wound. It is quite probable that it may yet have to be amputated. He is an excellent machinist.

Miss Sarah Jane Allen of Scotch Plains was married on Tuesday evening to Mr. William T. Fournier of Chicago. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's parents by the Rev. J. H. Farra, D. D., pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. The happy couple will spend their honeymoon in Philadelphia. They will afterward reside in Chicago.

Rev. Lincoln B. Goodrich, a brother of Rev. C. L. Goodrich of the Congregational church, who for two years was assistant principal of the Plainfield High School, occupied the pulpit of the Church of the Strangers, in New York city, of which Rev. Dr. Deems is pastor, last Sunday. He has been studying for the ministry and is expected to preach in this city soon.

A Royal Blue Express Kills Three Men.

The Royal Blue Limited express train which is due in New York daily on the Central Railroad at 1.40 p. m., killed three men yesterday. A little beyond Bound Brook a tramp was killed. At Bound Brook, J. Blakely, a farmer, was killed while crossing the track. His horse was killed and his wagon smashed. At Dunellen, J. Cunningham, a moulder, employed in Stager's machine works, in Elizabeth, was struck and instantly killed.

NO MUSIC AT THE FUNERAL.

Rev. J. B. Jennings' Actions Again the Subject of Criticism.

The Rev. J. B. Jennings, rector of Grace Episcopal Church at Westfield, has again made himself the subject of criticism.

He refused to allow singing and the opening of the coffin at the funeral of the Rev. William B. Earle on Monday afternoon, and accordingly all the members of his church by his action. As the choir which he drove from the building was from the Presbyterian church, the members of that church feel that they have been insulted.

The Rev. William B. Earle was connected with the American Exchange National Bank, of New York city, and although in the seventy-third year of his age he went to Boston daily. While on his way from the bank to the Liberty street ferry last Friday afternoon he was stricken with apoplexy and fell to the sidewalk. He was recognized by several business people who were on their way to catch the train, and he was carried home. The family physician was summoned, but Mr. Earle died before morning. He had been a resident of Westfield for twenty-two years, and was at one time rector of Christ Episcopal Church, the present Grace Church. He continued a member of the church even after he resigned as its rector. He occasionally officiated in this city. His wife, now deceased, was a Miss Runyon of Plainfield. He leaves one son and three daughters, all of whom are married.

The funeral services were held on Monday afternoon, in Grace Church, by wish of the family. Bishop Scarborough conducted the services, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Jennings, the rector, the Rev. O. Malcolm, of Roselle, the Rev. Mr. Simpson, of Metherwood and the Rev. Mr. Edgecombe, of Cranford.

Since the charges of drunkenness which were made against Mr. Jennings recently all the members of his congregation, with the exception of two families, have left the church. The organist was among the last to go. Mr. Earle's family requested Organist Chambers, of the Presbyterian church, and four members of his choir to assist in the service. They consented and took their places in the choir loft. Rector Jennings said nothing to them at the time.

The family desired that the casket containing the remains be left open during the service so that the friends might take a last look at the corpse. Mr. Jennings refused to permit this and the services continued until the musical portion was reached, when Mr. Jennings again came forward and said he would not allow the choir to sing or the organist to play. The recruits from the Presbyterian church left the building.

Mr. Jennings being the rector of the parish, no one had the power to countermand his order, and the service was finished without music. The interment took place in Fairview Cemetery.

Mr. Earle's relatives bitterly denounce Mr. Jenning's action.

Members of the Presbyterian church declare that Mr. Jennings insulted them a direct insult. Mr. Jennings refuse to explain anything, and he will not talk to newspaper men.

Bishop Scarborough has not yet taken any action with reference to the case of testimony taken on the charges against the Westfield minister, and the church members are growing impatient.

Post Office Thieves Active.

Post Office thieves are operating more successfully now in Monroe, Ga., than in the past two years. Four offices have been entered. Last night the Post Office at Mansfield was broken into and about $15 worth of stamps taken.

A week ago the Post Haven Post Office at Newborn was entered by the thieves. The Postmaster had removed the book contents of the safe that day, and the thieves got only a small amount of the plunder. Previous to that the Thomaston Falls Post Office, kept by John Bostick, was entered by the thieves and about $100 in cash and stamps taken.

The Post Office at Social Circle was robbed of $100 in money and stamps. The thieves got away with nearly $200 worth of property, including postage stamps and cash.

CARMENCITA DANCES.

A LARGE AUDIENCE AT MUSIC HALL LAST EVENING.

The Play of "The Prodical Father," Causes Much Laughter—Everybody Apparently Pleased.

Carmencita proved a great drawing card for Music Hall last evening and one of the largest audiences of the season filled the theatre. The play for the occasion, "The Prodical Father," was an unusually good one and very laughable throughout, and it was acted with vim and dash.

The audience seemed well satisfied with the performance.

Carmencita appeared between the second and third acts in her own peculiar Spanish dance, being a combination of quick, willowy movements of the body most that of the feet, accompanied by dainty tosses of her skirts. Many of the audience enjoyed her dancing while others saw nothing particularly beautiful about it. The story of the Spanish dance is told by Carmencita by pleasing gestures, many tosses of the feet and quick graceful movements, together with the pose, and of the challenge with which it ends. They are all the movements of a passionate Bayadere of Spain, who is supposed to be dancing before a lover. That is the way they do it in Spain, and the movements of Carmencita are as eloquent as the flowery language of her native land of sunshine. To a connoisseur of emotive gestures her dancing and movements must have appeared a perfect work of art, and as such made for her the far-spread reputation she has, and which more than anything else attracted the large audience last night.

Of Interest to Horse Owners.

Mr. A. E. Hoagland of 20 North avenue sends me the following:

"About the middle of November last a horse of a scrub team belonging to Mr. A. E. Hoagland of 20 North avenue ran a nail into his foot. To reduce the fever he was turned out into a wet pasture, but when brought in at night it was found that the fever was worse than at first, and a short hose between the hoof and fetlock, to his left left front leg. Dr. Pocock, who was summoned, firmly bound the broken leg in a plaster cast. A sling was placed under the horse, and he was left for five weeks for the bone to repair. He kept in good health and the injured leg was healing. About Christmas the sling and plaster cast were removed and the horse left free to lay down if he chose. He seemed afraid to do so and stood up a week, perhaps, on the three legs, only slightly resting on the broken one; then it was noticed that well from leg was giving way from constant strain, the muscles had been overtaxed and stretched and that the front leg was bowed backward like his hind legs. The horse was then thrown, and lay down for the first time in six weeks. Before the doctor went away the horse dropped into a sound sleep and was soon dreaming, for he moved his legs as if his dream was that he was trotting, and snored as if in perfect bliss.

"After the sleep he seemed much refreshed, and all went well until one day he got up and ate some feed left in a manger by another horse. Not being accustomed to ground food acute indigestion set in. Twenty grains of morphine were administered, but had no effect. One eighth of a grain is a dose for a man. A horse may safely take ten times as much. Ten grains were given at the first injection, and ten more an hour later, but even so large a quantity did not seem to lessen the animal's suffering, and he finally died. After death the broken leg was amputated and the bone found to have been shattered into fine splinters. Although so badly shattered the process of repair was going on nicely, and the bone ultimately would have become solid again and the horse practically as good as ever."

The snow storm which has been falling all day came down even faster in the afternoon, but nothing daunted the gunners were on hand with their weapons determined to carry out their programme. The result of the shooting match is not yet known.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When a man is elected mayor six times, as has happened to Citizen Ferdinand C. Latrobe, of Baltimore, it shows the people of his town have confidence in him.

Good gracious! A German professor, Brugsch by name, has discovered that the fight about the ratio between gold and silver was on fully 5,000 years ago, and that the ratio of the two metals in ancient Babylon was 1 to 13½. Later, in Egypt, a new supply of gold seems to have been struck, for there Professor Brugsch finds that 124 parts of silver were equal to 1 of gold.

Double-ender locomotives of enormous size and strength have been built to carry freight across steep grades in the railway from Tampico to Mexico. Each engine has one cab in the middle, with a boiler and firebox at each end. The whole weighs 105 tons, and is called the Johnstone compound locomotive, after its inventor. Mr. Johnstone, superintendent of the motive power of the Mexican Central railway.

The Hyattsville Plan.

It is known that the village of Hyattsville, six miles from Washington and one of that city's most popular as well as populous suburbs, has by vote of its council adopted the single tax system and been for some time operating its government after leaving the court house day afternoon, looking after some business, and during the day took a severe cold, which later developed into pneumonia.

Nevertheless he sat down to dinner at his home with his accustomed cheerfulness, and afterward sat chatting with the members of the household. The subject of sudden death was one upon which he had frequently spoken, and he had predicted that he would go off like a flash some day. He had no dread of sudden death. On the contrary he had said frequently he would prefer to go suddenly rather than to linger and suffer.

Reference to Mr. Blaine.

He spoke of Mr. Blaine in this connection at dinner and asked how he was. Being informed that he was holding his own, he replied, "Mark me, he will outlive us all yet."

The general retired early, and soon after midnight he ordered his servant, Wm. Wood, who has accompanied him on all his journeys for the last ten or fifteen years and who slept in an adjoining room, heard him coughing violently. He went into the general's bedroom to see if he could be of any assistance, but found that the general had passed on to the bathroom adjoining. Father Wet followed and offered his assistance. The general mentioned that his expectoration had been discolored with blood. He did not appear to think serious of the matter, however, and after his valet had assisted him to his bed he said: "That's all, West. You need not do anything more," and composed himself to sleep.

He had lain on his bed but a few moments, however, when his heavy breathing again caused alarm.

Dr. Bayne, the family physician, was summoned, but the general was beyond help then. The doctor so informed the two nieces of the general, Mrs. Dunn and Miss Stevens, who were at his bedside, and death almost immediately ensued. The end was apparently painless, and according to the doctor's certificate was brought about by heart failure, superinduced by an acute attack of pneumonia.

Telegrams announcing General Butler's death were sent to his surviving children—Mrs. Ames, wife of ex-Governor Adelbert Ames, of Massachusetts, who is residing at Navesink, N. J., and to his son, Daniel, at at Lowell, Mass.

He Chooses His Epitaph.

In a speech in Lowell on Jan. 29, 1890, General Butler said: "When you bear me to that little inclosure on the other side of the river, which I hope for as a last resting place, I pray you put over me as an epitaph, 'Here lies the general who saved the lives of his men at Big Bethel and Fort Fisher and who never commanded the Army of the Potomac.' I ask for nothing else." General Butler's wealth is estimated at $7,000,000. He owned half a million of real estate in Washington and as much more in Lowell.

He was interested in manufacturing at various points and had a large share in the American Bunting company, of Lowell. Among his western investments were the Craig ranch of 100,000 acres in Colorado, three-fourths of the Mora grant of 600,000 acres in New Mexico and his large holdings in the San Miguel Consolidated Gold Placer Mining company, of which he was president.

He Married a Star.

In the autumn of 1843 he visited Cincinnati, to find theater goers somewhat excited over the announcement that a lady of surpassing beauty and many accomplishments would make her first appearance Butler went. The local report says:

"The house was packed. Some minor actors and actresses appeared. They were given faint applause. Finally a handsome lady appeared upon the stage. She was dressed in a flowing robe of white satin that swept away in voluminous folds from the white throat. A black ribbon on one shoulder heightened the effect. For a moment there was intense silence. The young actress—it was her first appearance—kept silent for, a moment, gazing at the thousands before her. Somebody began to applaud. Then it came thick and fast with a mighty roar.

"The vast audience rose in their seats and cheered. A shower of bouquets was flung at the feet of the young debutante. Finally, when the applause had decreased somewhat, she sang. Her pure, innocent young voice swelled high and clear and passed over the faultless contents of the theater. When she finished she was encored repeatedly." For two weeks young Ben occupied a box in the theater.

His wooing progressed rapidly to a favorable conclusion, and Mrs. Butler remained a devoted wife as long as she lived. She died in 1880, prior to New Orleans, and did much to mitigate the evils of the situation, both while the troops were on Ship island and after the occupation of the city. Their daughter Blanche inherited all her mother's beauty and grace. Their son Paul is a happy mixture of both parents.

During the last illness of Mrs. Butler some years ago the general left nothing undone to restore her, but in vain. His love for her was the most amiable part of his life, and her death was the greatest blow he ever received.

THE GENERAL'S EPITAPH

"Here Lies One Who Saved the Lives of His Soldiers."

'O REST AT LOWELL, HIS HOME.

In Speaking of Mr. Blaine He Said, "He Will Outlive Us All Yet"—His Wish to Die Suddenly Was Gratified—Facts of His Romantic Courtship.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The body of General Butler will be removed from the residence of his relatives, where he died, to the railroad station at 3 o'clock today. The services at the house prior to the removal of the body will be brief and of a very simple character. Ex-Governor Ames, General Butler's son-in-law, has arrived in the city and will return with the remains to their last resting place. The interment will be at Lowell.

Upon his recent trip to Lowell General Butler was very active. One day last week he left for Salem early in the morning regarding a will case on trial there. He returned to Lowell at noon, attended a funeral, and was then driven to the station and left on the train for New York and Washington.

His Last Illness.

He was taken ill on the train, but recovered, and no marked premonitions of his sudden death manifested themselves. There had been some apparent increase of feebleness in his gait recently, but not more so than might be expected from his advanced age—seventy-four. This was partly due to his increasing weight and partly to the fact that originally weak feet and weak ankles upon which to support so heavy a weight. His faculties remained unimpaired. He went to the war department after leaving the court House day afternoon, looking after some business, and during the day took a severe cold, which later developed into pneumonia.

Nevertheless he sat down to dinner at his home with his accustomed cheerfulness, and afterward sat chatting with the members of the household. The subject of sudden death was one upon which he had frequently spoken, and he had predicted that he would go off like a flash some day. He had no dread of sudden death. Then it came thick and fast with a mighty roar.

"The vast audience rose in their seats and cheered. A shower of bouquets was flung at the feet of the young debutante. Finally, when the applause had decreased somewhat, she sang. Her pure, innocent young voice swelled high and clear and passed over the faultless contents of the theater. When she finished she was encored repeatedly." For two weeks young Ben occupied a box in the theater.

His wooing progressed rapidly to a favorable conclusion, and Mrs. Butler remained a devoted wife as long as she lived. She died in 1880, prior to New Orleans, and did much to mitigate the evils of the situation, both while the troops were on Ship island and after the occupation of the city. Their daughter Blanche inherited all her mother's beauty and grace. Their son Paul is a happy mixture of both parents.

During the last illness of Mrs. Butler some years ago the general left nothing undone to restore her, but in vain. His love for her was the most amiable part of his life, and her death was the greatest blow he ever received.

FEARFUL DUST EXPLOSION.

Twenty-seven Miners Suffocated and Half a Dozen Missing.

DENVER, Jan. 12.—An order reached Denver last night for twenty miners to go from Cokedale, Colo., and the Trinidad and South Park division of the Union Pacific railroad. Particulars of one of the worst mining accidents in this state were received here. The Union Pacific owns and operates coal mines at King, four miles from Cokedale, where are 200 miners. Yesterday afternoon a premature explosion occurred in one of the chambers where twenty-eight miners were at work. The accident was what the miners call a "dust explosion."

The concussion was terrific. The shock killed twenty-seven of the men, only one escaping, he being nearly at the entrance. The bodies were not recovered until midnight, and consisted of (the) blackened condition only eleven of the twenty-seven were recognizable.

Half a dozen other miners are missing and may be in the mine. But little damage was done to the mine, but it will be kept closed until the state inspector arrives.

Paris Socialists Proclaim.

PARIS, Jan. 12.—The Socialist union has issued to the people a manifesto, which says: "Opportunism has begun to wallow in the quagmire of blood shed at Fourmies and the mud from the Panama scandals. As it sinks it threatens to drag the country and the republic to ruin. In this emergency safety can come only from the ranks of the nation's workers. The system of delivering up parliamentary power to a handful of politicians must be abolished if the republic is to be a republic of honesty and to maintain the position it holds with so much glory in the vanguard of the nation. The political constitution of the country must be revised by a constituent assembly with imperative mandates. We must organize ourselves for battle, by the people through the medium of universal suffrage."

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—A special to The World from Hot Springs, Ark., says: It was stated that there would be no match between Jack McAuliffe, the champion light-weight boxer of this country, and the Englishman Burge. McAuliffe refused to fight at 128 pounds, the light-weight limit, and Burge finally admitted that he could not get below 135 pounds and retain his strength. Burge is considered a very clever boxer and catch-weights. As he could not arrange matters on this line, he announced that he would sail for home Saturday.

LEGISLATORS IN KANSAS

Rival Factions Camp on the Scene of Battle.

THE LADDIE ACT AS COMMISSARIES.

A Truce Declared During Last Night to Enable the Members to Sleep—The Populists Are Weakening, While Democrats Favor the Republicans.

TOPEKA, Jan. 12.—The two rival branches of the lower house of the Kansas legislature continued in session from noon Tuesday to 2:30 yesterday afternoon, when a truce was declared to last until 7:30 p. m. until 9 a. m. today, each faction to lose none of its rights or advantages in the meantime. No accommodations for sleep were afforded during the night, and the facilities for obtaining meals were limited and of the luncheon order. Late in the evening the female sympathizers with the Populists converted one of the committee rooms into a restaurant and served coffee and other refreshments on strict partisan principles. The Republicans had meals sent from a neighboring hotel.

Two Speakers Occupy One Desk.

The two houses were arrayed side by side in the hall, with two speakers presiding from the same rostrum for twenty-six consecutive hours, neither faction showing any disposition to yield a single point. It was a spectacle never before witnessed in Kansas politics, and hundreds of spectators crowded the hotel scene all night. Conference committees have been at work and many delegations have visited Governor Lewelling.

Populists Make Overtures.

The sentiment now is that the Populists are weakening in their position. Some of their members have already approached the Republican speaker regarding positions on committees, and it is thought that the better element of the minority crowd is inclined to yield to the legal majority.

The three Democratic members-elect waited on the governor yesterday and informed him that they believed the Republican house to be the lawfully constituted body. When wanted, he said, was a fight at the proceedings of the past two days, but they will no doubt appear in their seats today. This will give the Republicans 67 members, 63 being a constitutional majority.

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off, and intended to have that half way across my hand. Then it got on my wrist, and I had to have it cut out. Then it came out on my neck and then on both sides of my face, and the right eye. Then it came on my right hand. Doctors said it was the they ever saw. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. I kept on till I had taken two bottles, and then I knew I was cured. I have enjoyed my health ever since. Any one can write to me if they want to. Yes, you may. For the past year I have been well and hearty."

Work all the Time.

Before, I could do no work. I know not what to say strong enough to express my gratitude to Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has indeed cured me." GEORGE W. TURNER, Farmer, Flat Way, Saratoga county, N. Y.

THE ARCHBISHOPS' CONTROVERSY.

A Rivalry as to Who Is the Most Patriotic Toward America.

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The Rev. Father Lavelle, of the Cathedral, has spoken for Archbishop Corrigan, who is out of town, in answer to the published statements that the suppressed disagreement between Archbishop Ireland and Corrigan was due to the latter's opposition to the Knights of Labor and his un-American support of Cahenslyism.

Father Lavelle said: "You may positively put down such statements as false. Archbishop Corrigan is an American of the Americans and a Catholic of the Catholics. For instance, on March 30, 1887, the papers printed a memorial presented by Cardinal Gibbons to the pope regarding the Knights of Labor. The statement was made in that memorial that but two of the twelve archbishops voted to condemn the knights. The two, whose names have frequently been mentioned, although I do not care to, live over 1,000 miles from New York.

"In regard to Cahenslyism," continued Father Lavelle, "the Metropolitan of New York has always been a determined and active opponent of those principles and all efforts to introduce the system into this country."

GOVERNOR BROWN'S ACT

Reprieve of Four of the Eight Negroes Sentenced

FOR THE MURDER OF DOCTOR HILL

Various Threats Are Being Made Against the Governor and the Criminals, but the Cold Weather and Wise Counsels Prevent Acts of Violence.

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Jan. 12.—Intense excitement reigns in Kent county. Four of the octet of murderers who assassinated Dr. J. H. Hill have been removed from this place. Their sentences have been commuted by Governor Brown.

Those who are left and who will surely hang Friday, if they are not lynched before, are Charles Brooks, Moses Brown, Fletcher Williams and Fisher Conegrve.

Sheriff Plummer was awakened at 2:30 o'clock in the morning and informed that Captain Cadwallader, of Baltimore, was at the door with thirty policemen and an order from Governor Brown for four of the condemned prisoners, whose sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment.

"I charge you," the order went on to say, "to be careful that secrecy is preserved and that these men are delivered instantly upon the vessel which goes for them and safely conducted to the Maryland penitentiary. Caution your deputies that secrecy must be observed and nothing must interfere with this order."

Taken Away at Night.

Excitement and indignation amounting almost to madness followed the discovery. Remarks were made that it would be dangerous for the governor to be seen about the city now that the murderers had been commuted. Crowds gathered in the neighborhood of the jail and in all places of public resort and discussed the matter in loud tones.

There seemed to be but one opinion—that the eight men should have been hanged. Lewis Justice, a prominent merchant, appeared to voice the sentiment of the excited populace when he said: "I should not be surprised if the other four were lynched tonight. You can hardly realize the pitch of excitement to which the people are worked. If the secret had leaked out last night the police would not have had so easy a job to get those men."

The Governor's Reasons.

The governor says: "Since I became governor I came to the conclusion that the ends of justice, the ends of right should in this case be tempered with mercy. I had also to protect the fair fame of Maryland. Such a wholesale execution as this would have been has never been heard of before in the criminal annals of the country. The whole country was aroused over it. The murdered man will be amply avenged, and the outraged law of the state will be carried out by the execution of the four whose sentences have not been commuted.

"The fair name of Maryland will be preserved from the stain that would have been inflicted on it by the execution of these ignorant boys, who were probably the unwilling witnesses of a crime they were powerless to prevent."

At the jail everything is quiet, but it is known that Sheriff Plummer has a well drilled and very wakeful guard of men behind its doors.

EVENING DRESS.

Two Handsome Toilets Illustrated and Described.

One of the figures here sketched represents an elegant evening toilet in salmon pink velvet. The low, darling bodice with rounded point has the front deftly draped in slight waves at the top, where it is caught up with velvet twists, forming shoulder straps. In the center of each twist is a large bow in finely plaited satin, which also extends over the folds of the novel short sleeves; three overlapping rows of narrow satin frills edge the train skirt with side gores. Gold galon is cunningly threaded through the split ends of the coiffure and finished off in the center with two upstand ing loops, peculiarly becoming to the style of face.

The second figure shows low bodice and skirt, with watteau plait in black satin bordered with graduated rays and side spirals in sparkling jet. A narrow velvet ribbon edged with jet work is displayed through the side slash of the skirt and corresponds with the short puckered sleeve, at the top of which is arranged a cluster of velvet satin loops. The loose hanging sleeve, berthe bow and drooping end are in black silk net spangled with gold. In the hair is a beaded net, and the bouquet carried is of orchids.

WOMAN IN POLITICS.

TO HER IS DUE THE FOUNDING OF THE PRIMROSE LEAGUE.

The Wiles of Its Fair Dames—The Famous Organization Caused for the Liberals Much of Their Ill Success in the Election of 1885.

Now that the influence of women in politics has passed beyond the stage of conjecture and entered within the province of serious experiment in the United States, of peculiar interest is an article in The Forum, written by Millicent Garrett Fawcett, on the development and recognition of the woman element in the British body politic. This development has been brought about gradually by processes opposed to revolutionary and catastrophic changes. The recognition has been secured, not by aggressive declaration of rights, but by efficient practical service which politicians have learned the fallacy of depreciating or antagonizing. Herein lie the sagacity of the woman leaders, the strongest refutation of the arguments urged by the opponents of woman's fitness for political power, the example for the comparatively unintelligible force of the suffrage party in this country.

Mrs. Fawcett claims that the participation of women in politics is now without precedent in history, for 600 years ago abbesses equally with male ecclesiastical dignitaries were summoned to sit in parliament. Later the ownership of boroughs entailed membership in parliament not infrequently devolved on women, as instanced by the story of one Countess Anne, who, in answer to a letter from the secretary of state recommending a candidate for one of her boroughs, replied: "I have been bullied by a manager; I have been neglected by a court, but I will not be dictated to by a subject. Your man shan't stand."

The most valuable historical evidence of the capacity of women for political affairs is to be found in the lives of women sovereigns, who, in almost every country that admits the right of a woman to succeed to the crown, have proved themselves patriotic statesmen and skillful administrators. Feudal and monarchical systems, founded on an enthronement of the weak, made a place for women in politics, from which democracy and republicanism, founded on an aristocracy of sex, shuts them out.

Women in England, according to Mrs. Fawcett's conclusions, have at the present time achieved some share of political power by doing political work. Every political organization of men in the United Kingdom encourages similar organization among women. Despite Mr. Gladstone's present attitude on the suffrage question, in 1879 he said to women in a Midlothian speech, "In appealing to you to base your own part in a political crisis, like this we are making a large practical use of the duties which belong to you, the neglect of which would in future years be a source of pain and mortification, and the accomplishment of which would serve to gild your future years with sweet remembrance."

The women politicians have to enlist women in their ranks was the Irish Nationalists, who, when Gladstone suppressed the Land league in 1881, admitted their services under the name of the Ladies' Land league. During the imprisonment of Mr. Parnell agitation was carried on by the Ladies' league, but on his release it was dissolved, and he assumed its liabilities.

The next and in Mrs. Fawcett's opinion the first political organization of women was undertaken by the Conservative party when the famous Primrose league was founded in honor of Lord Beaconsfield. Beginning humbly in small quarters near the Strand, its membership increased phenomenally, sometimes at the rate of a thousand a day, until now it numbers more than a million "knights" and "dames" pledged to support the constitution, religion and the empire. It occupies palatial offices, controls considerable funds, is respected by the party it supports, and its regular annual festival is chosen by Conservatives as the occasion for some of their most important declarations of policy. Though the league contains quite as many knights as dames, to the activity of the latter a large proportion of the success of the organization is due.

To the wiles of the Primrose dames the Liberal party attributed much of its ill success in the election of 1885, and charges of corruption through gifts or threats were made against the ladies, though none of the charges was ever substantiated in court. After absorbing the next tribute to one's imitation, and in 1886 the Woman's Liberal federation was founded, with Mrs. Gladstone as president. It now has local branches being organized in 1888. But for the success of the Primrose dames neither of these organizations would have received the support of the new party leaders, who frankly declared their position at the opening meetings of the organizations, "We should have preferred to keep you out of all political activity; politics are not woman's sphere; but as the leaders of the opposite party are encouraging women to work, we can't afford to do without you," with similar inspiriting remarks, represented the attitude of men at that time.

The experience of a few years of woman's active work in politics has caused a revolution of sentiment. During the election of July, 1892, more work was done than ever before by women in a political contest, under the stimulus of stirring appeals addressed to them by all the principal party leaders. Mr. Gladstone gave encouragement to political activity among the women of his party, and frequent acknowledgments were made by the successful candidates of the very substantial degree to which the result was due to the labors.—New York Sun.

Size of Table Napkins.

Fashion has decreed that a napkin shall not be put on the table a second time until it has been washed. Few housekeepers, however, have the means to provide themselves with such a supply of napkins, not to speak of the laundress to care for them, so that napkin ring is still a necessity in the average household. It is important, however, that the supply be large enough to admit of their being changed two or three times a week. For general use a dinner napkin is to be preferred, unless a separate set of tablecloths and napkins are desired for breakfast. In size the table napkins should be smaller than for dinner.

Fringe is rarely used except on fancy doilies. The plain, square napkin comes in all sizes, from twenty inches to the size of the dinner napkins, which measure twenty-seven inches, and the cost is anywhere from $1.50 to $50 a dozen.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Making a Grate Fire.

There is a decided art in making a coal fire in a grate. An expert first cleans the grate, then in defiance of preconceived notions fills it half full of coal, on which is built a wood fire. The wood soaks on top of the coal, the heat passes to its center by convection, and a fire thus constructed, burning slowly with a moderate heat, will last all day.—Exchange.

FRENCH FUN.

How the Illustrated Papers of Paris Cast Ridicule Over Exiles.

English critics declare that the Americans of today are the most humorous people on earth. Americans have until recently been inclined to yield the palm to the French. There are, however, two kinds of fun which are to Americans much funnier than they are thought to be—viz., the serious comments of some very serious English writers on our society and politics, and the attempts of Frenchmen to be funny at our expense.

It is pleasant to learn that the illustrated papers of Paris contain caricatures of the Chicago World's fair, for it shows that Europe is interested in it, and their ideas about us are decidedly funny. One paper, for instance, gravely informs its readers that a great attraction at Chicago will be Buffalo Bill and his heroes, showing how they would have routed the armies of Dahomey if only the French government had employed them. Bill is apparently better known in France than any other of our public men.

Another gives an illustration of Vesuvius. The volcano is to be "transported to Jackson park," and to make it safe it will be covered with boiler iron well riveted. Furthermore, when put on exhibition, instead of lava and ashes it will belch forth a shower of fresh roses and perfume, "all of which," says the Parisian caricaturist, "are included in the one price of admission." He adds that there will be roasting railroad accidents, the passengers volunteering to risk life and limb in order to show foreigners how the thing is done. Also incendiary fires to show the promptness and efficiency of the fire department. In short, if half this Frenchman says were true, the exposition would be a marvel indeed.

The Memorial Art Palace.

The permanent Memorial Art palace, in which all congresses will be held, is rapidly rising on the lake front, Chicago. It will have two audience rooms, each to seat between 3,000 and 4,000 people, while twenty smaller rooms will afford accommodation for from 300 to 700 participants each.

A New Monument for Chicago.

Chicago is exerting herself to put style and finish on as many as possible of her public adornments in time for the great exposition, and the visitor thereto will be surprised at the many new monuments of one sort or another in the city. Among the latest is the beautiful gift of George M. Pullman, commemorating the memory of the Fort Dearborn garrison, Aug. 15, 1812. In that affair Black Partridge, who was in truth a "noble red man," rescued the young wife of Lieutenant Helm from a savage who had his tomahawk lifted to dash out her brains, and this incident the sculptor—Carl Rohl-Smith—has chosen for his subject.

THE MASSACRE MONUMENT.

Behind these three an Indian is represented as killing Dr. Van Voorhis, surgeon of the post, and to one side lies a baby awaiting in childish terror the fatal stroke. Thus there are six figures, and the action is wonderfully lifelike, almost terrifying in its realism. The bronze group will stand on a base of polished dark Quincy granite, 10 feet high and 8 feet by 4 feet 7 inches, at the corner of Eighteenth street and Calumet avenue. On and around that spot thirty-eight soldiers, two women and twelve children were on the date named killed by the Pottawatomies.

SOME OF PORTER'S STORIES.

Showing How Witty the General Can Be on Occasion.

Everybody is interested in a good story teller. We present herewith a few samples of General Horace Porter's ready wit. It must be remembered that it is not more the subject matter of General Porter's stories than his inimitable way of telling them that provokes from his hearers the roars of laughter that are chronicled between brackets in newspaper reports of his speeches. And it is not only his way, in the sense of personality, which cannot be put in print, but in the quaint turns of speech which make his stories when printed read with a smack of Artemus Ward or of John Phoenix.

Here are the stories:

Stories Number 1 and 2.

"I once tried to travel through Germany on my Pennsylvania dialect. When Germans didn't understand a word we said it was not only no fault of ours, but a painful misfortune that they had not been brought up in the state of Pennsylvania. When I was in Germany they addressed me in various ways. They would spin out a sentence in that closely jointed, attenuated to the calmness of a corpse, and if I did not accept signs of comprehension they would telescope the whole sentence into one confused word and try me with that. I went on for two days and did not understand a word. I began to feel lonesome, and the more people came up to me the more lonesome I felt. It reminded me of my early days, when I used to go and see what it was like and then come away. He linked his arms in ours, and we got down to the depot. The second train went on, and he watched with intense interest the violent gesticulations of the actors, not a word being spoken. He leaned over his seat, put his hand to his ear, and when the curtain went down he remarked: 'I say, I am drunker than I thought I was. I haven't understood a word that has been said in the whole play.'

"That is just the way it was with me in Germany. Finally it became absolutely necessary for me to know whether a certain train went through to Berlin. I plowed my grammar, and gathering together certain fragments of that disjointed language I called the conductor and hurled at his head the following verbal projectile. I knew if it struck home I should be apt to hear from him: 'Gehl Gasse Rug nach Berlin ohne Wechsel?' He turned upon me a look I shall never forget. 'Mein Gott in Himmel,' he said, 'what a tam fine kind of German is that which you have spoke?'"

General Porter is fond of drawing on his own reminiscences for humorous anecdotes. Here is one, with the application thereof:

Story Number 3.

"When I look around upon these grouting boards I think of one of Sherman's bummers down in South Carolina during the war. The regiment was ordered one morning to strop their accoutrements on their shoulders and ford a river. The river had swamps six miles on each side, and this bummer while crossing turned around to his comrade and said: 'Bill, I'm allowed if I don't believe we have struck this 'ere river lengthways.' When I took around upon the length and breadth of the superb hospitalities you have spread out before us tonight I think with each invited guest here that we have struck this hospitality lengthwise."

Here is another war story told at a dinner to General Grant:

Story Number 4.

"I know that our guest (General Grant) will not forget the soldier in the Wilderness who strayed off to the right of his company and was isolated in fringe-trees with an air that seemed to say, 'I got 'em every time.' The captain of the company approached him and said, 'White, fall in with the rest.' White replied, 'All right, go on with your shooting, but as for me I am going to have a private massacre to myself.'"

General Porter's story of the Irishman and the grog has been told by many other people, but it is the general's own story, and this is the original version of it:

Story Number 5.

"An Irishman worked all day for the agent of an absentee landlord on the promise of getting a glass of grog. At night the agent brought out the grog to him, and the Irishman tasted it and said to the agent,

"'Which did you put in first, the whisky or the water?' 'Oh,' said he, 'the whisky.' 'Ha! ha! Well, maybe I'll come to it by and by.'"

Here is another of the general's stories with reference to the sons of the great Irish nation. It is to be told how a Chinaman got the joke on an Irishman for once:

Story Number 6.

"That learned Chinese statesman Chin Lan Pin, was home at the time Denis Kearney was having an unpleasantness with the original Chinese. Kearney said to him: 'Your people will have to get out of here. The Irish carry too much religion around with them to associate with heathens.'

"'Yes,' said Chin Lan Pin, 'we have determined to go. Our own country is too overcrowded as it is. We can't go there, and I think we'll go to Ireland.'

"Said Kearney: 'To Ireland? You will be jumping out of the frying pan into the fire.'

"Said Chin Lan Pin: 'I have traveled in your country and all around a good deal, and I have come to the conclusion that nowadays Ireland is about the only country that is not governed by the Irish.'"

Story No. 7 is a recollection of the war:

Story Number 7.

"When the commanding general of our forces was laying decided to make a decisive movement against the enemy and had made all preparations for it, he called to his personal staff officers, saying that when he gave the orders for the final charge the officer was to look at his watch and record the exact time. The young men thinking the decisive moment of his life had come, drew forth with that look of self and secrecy which is only begotten of youth and inexperience, looked at their watches and quietly opened his watch and informed the commanding general that it had run down."—New York World.

Just the Same.

"You can't have the old excuse of 'no snow' now," the whispered, after suggesting a sleigh ride.

"Well," he answered, "it's pretty near the same thing—now it's 'no cash.'"—New York Herald.

HOW IT CAME THERE.

What Her Musical Collection Amounted to After All.

"Your musical taste, Miss Quicksteps," observed the young professor, looking over the piles of sheet music that lay on the piano, "is highly creditable to you."

"I am glad you think so, professor," murmured the young woman.

"I am sure of it," he rejoined positively. "It is not only the loudest melodies, whose taste has been carefully cultivated, and whose ear is attuned to the divinest harmonies breathed forth from the souls of the classic masters, that is capable of making or enjoying a selection of purely classical music as this 'Schubert's Serenade,'" he continued, pointing to the cover upon which was reading the titles, "'Rhapsodie Hongroise No. 2,' 'Selections from Chopin'"—

"I do so love Shopang," interrupted Miss Quicksteps aside.

"He is adorable. 'Gems from Mendelssohn's Songs Without Words,' 'Beethoven's Symphony in A Minor,' 'Arias from Gluck's Operas,' 'Selections from Handel's Works,' 'Gems from Haensel Hoch'—by the way, have you heard d'Albert in"—

"Dollbare is wonderful, wonderful!"

"Dear me, professor, how he is indeed admirable. Here, I see, are some rare selections from Handel's 'Rinaldo,' from Haydn's 'Creation,' from Rossini's 'Stabat Mater,' 'Beauties of Judas Maccabeus'—everything classical—purely classical! And yet I must not linger too long in mere admiration. You will excuse me, I am sure, Miss Quickstep, with something from"—

"Oh, professor!"

"I shall not presume to dictate your choice. Your own exquisite taste, I am persuaded, will guide you far better in the selection of"—

"Professor, I—I don't play."

"Do not play! Do I understand you aright, Miss Quickstep?"

"Indeed you do. I can't play a note. This is a lot I made I got at the recommendation of a friend."

"You astound me! Then this—this remarkable collection is—pardon me—is it merely a"—

"You are right, professor," said Miss Quickstep, drumming carelessly on the table while she spoke, "it's merely a blind."—Chicago Tribune.

A Modern Job.

"Is he such an unlucky man?" asked Jack Hungry.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST." FRIDAY, JANUARY 13, 1893. SIX TWO CENTS.

PUBLISHED ON A STAGE.

A MAGAZINE FROM FRONTISPIECE TO ADVERTISEMENTS.

Under the Auspices of the Rectory Society of Grace Church, at the Casino, Last Evening.—A Large and Delighted Audience.

The Casino of the Union County Country Club was well filled last evening to witness the publishing of a magazine on the stage.

In the publishing of a magazine, of course the frontispiece comes first. A beautiful one had been selected for last night's issue, "Taking Leave of the Lyric Muse." It was a pretty picture in which Mrs. A. Kleinecke and Mr. D. Tiffany posed as the subjects. It was accompanied by the reading of the poem "Thalia."

Next came "A Pastoral Without Words," to which the factors were Miss Mamett, Mr. L. G. Timpson and Mr. O. G. Waring.

Miss Maude Agnes Bowers recited a short story, in which the tale of a poor Irish girl's trials in having her photograph taken were told in a manner which kept the hearers continually convulsed with laughter.

The handsome paintings "Midsummer," "Riverside," and "Reading Aloud" were presented in tableaux, by Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Miss Huntington and Miss Stewart. The sight which met the gaze of the audience as the curtains separated was most beautiful.

"Old King Cole" was the next tableaux, and Mr. L. Van Buren was clearly the part of the "Merry Old Soul." His pipe and bowl were brought to him by Miss Depew and Miss Erickson.

A comedy-sketch in two acts, entitled "The Deacon," was admirably acted by Mrs. Charles H. Brooks, Miss Maude Van Boskerck, Mr. Wm. H. Cook, Mr. Deuse Van Vliet, and Mr. Roger W. Erickson. "Abraham Bootbroyd," Mr. Cook, wholesale haberdasher, Mayor of Chippen Parbury on the Wold and Senior Deacon of Ebenezer Chapel, had never been to a theatre, and he hated them worse than vipers. He visited "Tom Dompster," Mr. Van Vliet, in his chambers. "Mrs. Bolingbroke," Mrs. Brooks, was present and succeeded in exacting a promise from the old gentleman to attend a play of science with "Tom" and herself, and when she told him it was a theatre he was dumbfounded, but he kept his promise. Act two—The party return from the theatre and the old deacon is nearly frantic with delight and vows that he will attend a theatre every night in the week. It was a laughable comedy and was acted in a manner which would have done credit to professionals, and the audience was thoroughly delighted with the performance.

The curtain rose and fell on round after round of applause. Miss Maude Van Boskerck did splendidly as "Rose Jerrolds," and Mr. Roger Erickson, as everyone who has seen him knows, cannot be surpassed as "the butler."

Mrs. R. H. Depew, Miss Guion, Miss Lowrie, Miss Green, Miss Holly, Miss Rodman and Mr. Kleinecke were enjoying a lunch and discussing who was the best physician. It was "Perplexing, Very."

"The Tables Turned," by Mrs. Louis Eward, Miss Bowers, the Misses Betts, Miss Morgan, Miss L. Van Boskerck, Mr. Mann, Mr. Huntington and Mr. Clay. A daughter imploring her mother to go home and receiving the reply, "Negyn't I Have One More Dance?" showed that the tables were indeed turned. The advertisement of "Pear's Soap" by Miss F. Waring, Miss Munn and Mr. J. Bartindale, and "Pearline" in which were Miss Lowe, Miss Waring, Miss Munn, Miss McClure, Miss Van Zandt, Miss Rodman, Miss Cox and Miss Fisk, brought this exceedingly novel and delightful entertainment to a close.

During the evening incidental music was rendered by Mrs. F. A. Pollock, Mr. F. A. Pollock and Mr. J. E. Poirie.

The Port Reading.

The new branch of the Port Reading Railroad from Bound Brook to Port Reading, near Sewaren, will be in operation by the middle of next month. Stations are being erected along the line, which is 18 miles long. Passenger trains will connect at Bound Brook for the Central road and passengers will be transferred there for Elizabeth, Plainfield, Newark and New York. The coal traffic of prospects to tide water at Port Reading where huge trestles are constructed, is very heavy. It is thought that during the Summer, trains will be run to Long Branch and points South along the coast.

Red Men to Celebrate.

The Great Council, Independent Order of Red Men, will meet to-night in the lodge room of Minisinomo Tribe, No. 113, of this city. Among those to be present are: Great Sachem Wald of Trenton, Great Keeper of Records D. S. Stevens of Camden, Great Keeper of Wampum W. Forsythe of Jersey City, and Past Sachems of all the tribes in this district. There is to be an entertainment followed by a collation.

Mr. Hill Wins His Suit.

John T. Hill of this city yesterday afternoon obtained a verdict for $6,000 against the Central Railroad of New Jersey for the loss of his foot, which was cut off as he was alighting from a train at Dunellen some time ago. Mr. Hill is sixty-four years old.

The railroad company's lawyer served notice that the verdict would be appealed from.

—Manager Demarest has secured as the attraction at Music Hall next Thursday evening, Dr. Carver and his play entitled "The Scout," depicting life in the Far West. "The Scout" is not to be judged as a drama. It is a show, a circus, and exhibition to a combination. The Indian village is said to be a most startling scene.

—The wonderful popularity attained by Hood's sarsaparilla Calendar last year, will be repeated by Hood's Sarsaparilla Calendar-Almanac for 1893, just published. A happier combination of calendar and Almanac, of beauty and utility, of art and advertising, has seldom been produced. The lovely picture of "The Discoverer," lithographed in many delicate colors, will be welcome everywhere, while the pad is attractively printed in colors but with sharp, plain figures. Copies may be obtained of the druggists, or by sending six cents in stamps to pay postage, at least one of two, to C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

UNDER PENALTY OF FIFTY DOLLARS.

Important to Doctors.

The Union County Medical Society at its meeting Wednesday, at Elizabeth, decided its by-laws so that henceforth no member of the society may act as physician to secret or benevolent orders in which there is a yearly compensation. He can be the recognized physician of the lodge or society, but he must get his pay from the patient and not from the organization, and shall charge him the same as any other patient. The rule is to go into effect April 1.

A LARGE CORPORATION.

THE AMERICAN LEATHER COMPANY'S FACTORY AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

To Manufacture Sole Leather on an Extensive Scale—Plant to Cost Chicago Firm that Purchased Same Seventeen—$125,000 Paid.

It will be of interest to Plainfield to know that the American Leather Company, is a new concern which has recently been incorporated under the laws of New Jersey.

The Company was organized for the purpose of manufacturing leather, split, upper, leather substitutes, shoes, poultry food and dog food, tobacco cases, and polishing powders.

The factory is at South Plainfield, with an office in Elizabeth, on Broad and Jersey street, N.Y. Mr. Wm. H. Smith, is the general agent. Mr. Murray H. Smith, vice president and Mr. Jeremiah A. North, secretary and treasurer.

The Westminster Musical Club, Mr. Edward H. Dunham, director, gave a musicale at the residence of Mr. Joseph Smith, Somerset street, last evening. Mr. Smith is the president of the club. Mr. Dunham is the musical director. The next musicale will be given at the residence of Mr. Frank Hubbard, Park avenue, on the evening of Jan. 26th.

The following report to President Grover Cleveland to him, by Secretary of State T. F. Bayard, on the constitutional law of public order to disturbance, is of interest.

"Under the power to suppress a series of riots in the territory adjacent to the United States, the Governor of Illinois, in pursuance of the laws of that State, called out the militia of the State, and, in addition to the troops of the State, there were employed by the United States marshal, in executing the process of the United States courts, a large number of deputy marshals, who were sworn in to the number of one part of the militia called out by the Governor of the State. The militia and deputy marshals were employed in the protection of the property of the United States and in the protection of the property of private citizens and interstate commerce.

"The Governor of the State of Illinois, in addition to the militia called out by him, employed a large number of persons as deputy sheriffs, and the United States marshal in executing the function making cheese from milk furnished by and made for the farmers, which are located in Cattaraugus and Chautauqua counties, within easy reach of each other, at five of which are erected plants for making raw sugar of milk, which is sent to the refinery, and there the finished and refined product (chemically pure) is produced.

"The milk is purchased from the farmers at 6½ cents per 100 pounds, which contains four per cent of milk sugar; this will yield about three per cent of merchantable refined sugar, salable in New York at 17½ cents to 20 cents per pound. There is a very large demand for this product, which is suspected will yield an income quite sufficient to pay the entire running expenses of the raw sugar plants. Patents have been applied for covering the utilization of these products.

The company has acquired the entire plant of the following properties, which are in successful and profitable operation.

Cheese Factories—Chautauqua Co., N. Y., "Sinclairville," "Cherry Creek," "Ashville," "Bird," "Dennis Point," "Mayville," "Gerry," "Westfield," "Portland," "Cassadaga," "Columbus." "Cold Spring," "Smith's Mill."

"These factories have raw sugar plants now in operation.

The company's Boundary is a large and fully equipped building located at Chautauqua Valley, Cattaraugus Co.

The system and process of making and refining the sugar have been completed by a large outlay of time and money, and are, with the patents for the exclusion of the bye products, the sole property of this particular company. The business is an assured success, and is capable of large expansion with both a large home and export demand.

A statement of production and profits shows an output of 320,000 pounds of refined sugar, 320,000 pounds of cheese, commercial matter and 40,000 gallons of whey cream at a cost of $90,000, the market value of which is $96,000.

The imported milk sugar costs to land in New York, duty paid, 20¢ cents per pound, while our local product sells at 17½ cents, and cannot be a very considerable time before the price will reach 20 cents. The price will not exceed 20 cents, but even at 20 cents per pound it is far below the average price for years of the imported article.

The company's properties are valued at $125,000.

That "Shoot" to the Shore.

The shooting match which took place yesterday afternoon, during the progress of the storm, in Hyde's yard, resulted in the following scores:

Seven men took part in the "shoot." Those who took part were Messrs. T. Keller, H. Agner, G. Seiler, of this city, J. Porter of Bound, M. Hickey of Elizabeth, Abbott and Lockwood of Bound Brook. The boys were handicapped by Mr. W. Squires.

NO TRIAL FOR BISHOP JOHNSON.

The Testimony Does not Warrant Such Step by the Methodist Conference Here.

Word was received at Westfield yesterday that the committee of Methodist publishing editors, Rev. Dr. Buckley, Rev. Dr. Taylor of this city, and the Rev. H. H. Otterby of Brimbeck—appointed by Bishop Hurst—could see no case sufficient to charge Bishop Johnson with the Rev. J. E. Wakefield, and therefore there is no foundation for rumors that the Bishop will be tried by the Methodist Conference here.

The committee was appointed almost a month ago and has held two sessions. Charges of lying and drunkenness were made by Wakefield at the church, and a large number of witnesses testified. The Committee has not yet made an official report to the Bishop.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There is one millionaire to every 16,000 inhabitants in this country. Just wait till the rest of us catch up to the procession; then the millionaire list will be considerably larger.

Mr. Charles Edwards, writing in The English Nineteenth Century, disapproves strongly of the game of football. His paper is entitled "The New Football Mania." He believes the favorite college game brings out all that is brutal in a boy's nature. Hereafter football "the British substitute for the bull ring."

The Congregational churches of England and America celebrate this year a double and startling anniversary. Their church, built upon the principle that each congregation shall be independent and manage and control absolutely its own affairs, selecting always its own pastors, was really founded in 1593. A number of persons were confined in Bridewell prison, London, for heresy. In their prison they organized the first Congregational church. In 1642 another congregation was established in London. Several of these heretics and nonconformers paid for their temerity with their lives, likely in 1593 the pastor of the church and three or four of its members were hanged for saying there was another way to heaven than through the Church of England. But the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church, and it proved to be so of the Congregational church. While the Congregationalists of 1893 solemnly commemorate the 300th anniversary of martyrdom, they will find in the present and the future reason only for rejoicing and hope.

How to Get Good Roads.

It cannot be done unless the state governments co-operate in a way to insure uniform effort and expenditure. Perhaps the best way would be to utilize the national government to the extent of stretching a professor of road engineering to the agricultural experiment stations in each state. Bulletins on the best way to make a smooth, hard road would be as profitable as those about the lowest borer or the chinchbug. At any rate, it does not matter how the information is circulated, just so the farmer gets it perculated through his brain that he loses to actual cash hundreds of dollars a year because of that horror—the mud road.

It has been suggested that the state agricultural colleges should take the matter up and add to their courses of study a department in which roadmaking is thoroughly and scientifically taught. The young farmers who took the roadbuilding course along with their scientific agriculture could then go out and become road superintendents to some purpose. There is so much interest in this vital subject that one may hope Americans are actually awakening from their Rip Van Winkle sleep by the roadside. Mr Isaac B. Potter's magazine, Good Roads, is gaining a fair circulation in Michigan a reduction of half their road tax is given to teamsters who use broad tires.

St. Jackson's Day.

Nothing could possibly exceed the satisfaction with which Democrats in general celebrated the seventy-eighth anniversary of the battle at New Orleans, Jan. 8, 1815 in which the British General Pakenham was killed and the British were finally beaten and driven off by the indomitable Andrew Jackson.

The main reason for celebrating General Jackson each year may be his great victory over the British or it may be his equally great historic saying, "To the victors belong the spoils." However that may be the 8th of January is interesting alike to the Democratic politician and to the student of history. It really was a great victory that which Jackson won at New Orleans. To at least 12,000 of the best soldiers in the British army Jackson could only oppose perhaps 6,000 militia from Kentucky Tennessee Mississippi and Louisiana. To these states belong the glory of Jackson's victory Their regiments of hunters were excellent marksmen It is parteularly interesting to note, too, that among these valiant fighting men there was a battalion of negro soldiers The colored people, therefore, have a right to join in celebrating Jackson's Day Their race helped to win the victory

Then after the battle was all over and hundreds of brave British soldiers lay dead upon the field among them half the men of the splendid Ninety-third Highland regiment, Jackson gave orders for the burial of those who had fallen. The British were permitted to bury all their own men who lay beyond a certain distance from Jackson's intrenchments. Those within that distance were buried by the American soldiers themselves.

After all was over an incident occurred which shows that brave men are always generous The British commander was surprised at receiving from General Jackson, under flag of truce a package containing the watches, swords and epaulets of those of his officers who had been buried by the Americans. A courteous note from General Jackson requested that the articles be handed over to the families of the men who had fallen.

In this case, at least, the victor did not keep the spoils nor allow his followers to do so. Perhaps all of us—Democrats, Republicans, Populists and Prohibitionists—join in honoring the memory of Old Hickory

BLAINE HAS A RELAPSE

Dr. Hyatt Stays at His Bedside During the Night.

NITRO-GLYCERINE ADMINISTERED

The Increased Activity About the State Mansion Convinced the Waiting Reporters That the Distinguished Patient Was Worse Than the Doctors Admitted

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—At 6:25 o'clock last evening messengers were hastily despatched for both Dr. Johnston and Hyatt as Secretary Blaine's attending physicians. Young Mr. Blaine was also quickly summoned. This fact, taken in connection with evidences of unusual commotion about the family residence, led the little group of newspaper men on police duty to believe that Mr. Blaine had suffered a serious relapse. Both physicians promptly responded to the demand for their attention and went at once to Mr. Blaine's bedside.

After some twenty minutes spent in consultation Dr. Johnston left the house. He stated that nothing of a positively serious nature had occurred, and that Mr. Blaine's condition was practically unchanged from what it had been during the day. He further said that whenever any symptoms developed that might be construed by Mr Blaine's attendants as unfavorable the physicians were immediately notified.

Responded Quickly to Treatment.

About 7 o'clock Dr. Hyatt left the Blaine residence. He said that the stroke which had occasioned a hasty summoning of the physicians was the difficulty which the invalid experienced in breathing.

The attendants supposed that the labored respiration was caused by an attack of heart failure.

Dr. Hyatt said that upon examination the heart was found not to be affected, the only apparent difficulty being in respiration. Medicine was administered, to which the patient quickly responded, and the unfavorable symptoms which had alarmed the family passed away.

His physicians called at 9:30 o'clock and remained in the sickroom for forty minutes, during which time they made a thorough examination of the patient and gave him some additional medicines.

When they came out Dr. Johnston said that Mr. Blaine had not had a relapse at 7 o'clock as stated; he could not call it that. There were complications, however, at that time which yielded to the treatment readily, but from which the patient had not recovered except at the loss of strength. He was sleeping at 10:15 when the doctors left the house, but it was thought prudent for one of them to return. Dr. Hyatt would go back at 12 o'clock and then determine whether it was necessary for him to remain through the night.

Dr. Hyatt Remained at the Bedside.

Dr. Johnston left with the understanding that he would not return unless Dr. Hyatt, when he came, thought his presence was necessary. From 9 o'clock until late in the night no one visited the house except a young friend of Jamie G. Blaine, Jr., who was evidently sent for, as he remained his evening dress from some of the up town clubs. There was no unusual activity around the house, but there was an air which indicated that Mr. Blaine was worse. The guarded utterances of the doctors especially were more significant from what they failed to say than from what they actually said.

At midnight Dr. Hyatt was still in the house, and it was obvious that he was there for the night or until relieved by Dr. Johnston, so as to meet at short notice any counteract any sudden emergency, such as that which threatened the early summons of both physicians early in the evening. It is understood that the doctors have had again to resort to the administration of nitro-glycerine to stimulate the heart's action, and the fact that shortly after midnight bright lights were burning in the room connecting with the sick chamber seemed to indicate that operations of further complications was not by any means fully allayed.

SENATOR HILL OUT.

A Proposed Bill to Provide Pensions for Certain Soldiers.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—A special to The Mail and Express says: A bill framed by Senator Hill, providing for pensions for Mexican veterans who served in the war with Mexico, and all the Indian wars since 1812, is to be introduced into the senate. It is said to be the intention of the senator to call up the measure at the next session of congress. It will be left to the people to decide whether the bill was introduced by Hill as a candidate for the presidency or as a statesman. It is said that Hill has obtained information that the measure will be favorably received by the senate, and that it was also to be favorably received by the house.

It is understood that the payment of the pensions will be made by the states, and that the bill will be introduced in the senate first.

Senator Hill was not present at the democratic caucus on Tuesday when the question of the Nicaragua canal was discussed. Simply because he was not present at the caucus on Tuesday is no reason why Senator Hill should not vote for the Nicaragua canal bill, if he desires to do so, when it should have come up for action.

Richard Croker was asked if the report from Albany that he intended to resign as leader of Tammany Hall was true. He answered:

"I have not anything about it. No, I won't say whether it is true or not."

Congressman Bourke Cockran before leaving for Washington said to a reporter: "If Mr. Blaine should die before the end of Cleveland's administration a surprise. There will be no Democratic opposition to the president in the senate. I believe that Tammany will support the honestly."

THE GREAT STORM.

25 Steps Railroad and Steamship Traffic. Various Reports.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—According to the telegraphic advices received at the weather bureau the storm started in northern Montana Tuesday and came slowly eastward over the middle Mississippi valley, where there was but little fall. It reached last night in West Virginia and gradually took a southeasterly and northeasterly course, spreading over North Carolina, Maryland the District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, New York and all of New England.

There was very little wind, and the thermometer did not fall greatly except in sporadic instances, but it will be colder today all over the middle Atlantic and New England states. The officials of the weather bureau say this is the deepest snow that has fallen in the section indicated for several years, and they anticipate much interruption of railroad traffic. The snow is four inches deep east of the Alleghanies from Maine to North Carolina, and it will be six inches deep by nightfall.

The snowstorm tied up the street cleaning department, blocked the horse car service and made navigation difficult for all the ferryboats. There are no less than six boats fast in the ice in the upper harbor. The steamship Hudson, which arrived from New Orleans yesterday morning, reports having had a hard time getting up the bay through the ice.

A Boston special says: The ice in the harbor is heavier now than it has been for a number of years. Many of the docks on the east Boston side are frozen to the depth of several inches. The field ice extends across the channel, beginning at the New York and New England docks and extending as far as the Narrows.

SENATOR KENNA'S FUNERAL.

Mass Celebrated in the Senate Chamber by Bishop Keane.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The body of the late Senator Kenna was removed from his home to the Capitol in a blinding snowstorm. The senate adjourned and the members of the upper house took their seats on the east side.

Senators arose and remained standing while Speaker Crisp, escorted by officers of the house, advanced and took the chair assigned him at the right of the vice president.

President Harrison and cabinet, General Schofield, the supreme court and the diplomatic corps, with the family of the dead senator, were in attendance.

At 1:15 a procession of robed priests, preceded by acolytes bearing a censer and taper, was noiselessly lighted, marched down the aisle, followed by a squad of capital police in full uniform escorting and carrying the casket, which was covered with palms and flowers.

The priests, with Bishop Keane, of the Catholic university, in his purple robes, ranged themselves about the coffin. The bishop preached the funeral sermon.

MAY CALL THE MILITARY.

Governor Lewelling Recognizes the Kansas Populists.

REPUBLICANS REFUSE TO GIVE IN.

Possible Use of Force by the Military Authorities to Bring the Republicans to Submission—They Demand the Ballots and Are Confident of Victory.

TOPEKA, Jan. 13.—The members of the dual house were all promptly in their seats at 9 o'clock, but no pretense of transacting any business was made. No agreement having been reached by the joint caucus committee, each house maintained its organization. The usual motion to adjourn and meet again in order to make a legislative day was adopted by both sides, but it was about nothing was done in the early hours of the day, and the members killed time as best they could, pending a further conference of the committee. The three Democrats who yesterday decided to affiliate with the Republicans on the question of organization broke the monotony at 2 o'clock by announcing their decision publicly.

This action by the Democrats was received with loud cheers by the Republicans. The Populists pretended to exhibit light of it, but their leaders were evidently greatly disturbed. The addition of the three Democrats to the Republican membership gives the Republicans 57 members—a majority of 5—composed of 51 Republicans, 1 Independent (Wilson) and the 5 Democrats. The extraordinary demand by the action of the Democrats soon subsided, and the necessary of waiting for further developments was resumed.

Soon it was announced on the Populist side that the senate and governor would shortly recognize the Populist house.

Members on both sides are getting impatient for such action. It had been agreed that the senate should recognize the Populists by resolution and the governor should recognize it by addressing a communication to the speaker. The plan miscarried. The senate adjourned without taking the agreed action.

The Governor Recognizes the Populists.

Before the governor could be informed of that fact, however, his communication was on its way to the house. When Populist Sergeant-at-arms Dunmore called to the door to receive the governor's message and as Secretary Close was recognized the Populists arose and began cheering. Populist Speaker Densmore rapped for order and restored quiet.

The Republicans made no demonstration. Secretary Close called out, "Mr. Speaker Densmore." This official recognition gave the Populist side an opportunity to cheer. Women shook their handkerchiefs and members climbed into their seats and waved their hats. There were cat calls from the Republican side as the Populist chief clerk read the following:

To J. N. Densmore, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

In answer to your communication sent me Jan. 10 notifying me that the house was duly organized with Mr. Densmore as speaker, John Semple as speaker pro tem., Ben Rich as chief clerk and L. F. Deck as sergeant-at-arms and are ready for business, I desire to say that I will communicate with you further in writing.

L. D. LEWELLING, Governor.

The Populists took this as proof, but Republican Speaker Douglas rapped for order and said, "The legally organized house of representatives will proceed to order."

Some minor resolutions were then offered on the Republican side and the roll call was ordered on one of them. The call showed that sixty-seven members answered to their names.

Mandamus Proceedings Begun.

Mandamus proceedings against Secretary of State Osborne were begun in the supreme court to compel him to hand over to George L. Douglas, speaker of the Republican house of representatives, a certified copy of the roll of members elected to the Kansas house of representatives on file in his office.

The returns were compiled by ex-Secretary of State Higgins and show sixty-four Republican members of the legislature—a majority of two—entitled to certificates. Mr. Douglas is the speaker chosen by the Republican organization, and the object of the suit is to obtain from the court a decision whether or not the Republican organization is the house of representatives. The court received the petition. The matter was laid aside for consideration this morning. The Republicans have no doubt that the court's decision will be favorable to them and hope in this way to checkmate the latest move of the Populists, which resulted last evening in the recognition of the Populists' house by Governor Lewelling.

The way they will not leave the hall until driven out by the militia.

Republicans say they believe a regiment of state militia will be called out tomorrow to drive them from the house of representatives if Speaker Douglas attempts to call the house to order. Both houses adjourned to 10 o'clock today.

The Franco-Russian Confederacy.

GOOD HEALTH

NERVOUS DISEASES.

Civilization Not Responsible for Those Common to Uncultivated Races.

Among the errors which have been diligently disseminated by physicians who forbad athestigical information is that which claims that diseases of the nervous system, especially those of a hysterical character, have greatly increased with the development of civilization and are most common in the races of highest culture. Professor H. C. Bolmon affirms in Science that both assertions are erroneous. He says: "Those intelligent travelers who give the soundest information on this subject report that to uncultivated nations violent and epidemic nervous seizures are very common. Cowper describes them among the Siberia tribes. An unexpected blow on the outside of the tent will throw the occupants into spasms. The early Jewish historians paint extraordinary pictures of epileptiform convulsions among the Egyptians and Hurons. The Middle Ages witnessed scenes of this kind impossible today."

In a late number of The Journal de Medicine, Paris, Dr. de la Tourette points out the frequency of true hysteria and hysteroid seizures in the black race, among the Malagasy and the Arabs of Northern Africa, and among the natives of Abyssinia and Madagascar. The progress of the freedom was lately a patient in the celebrated office of Dr. Charcot, in Paris, and displayed the symptoms characteristic of neurosis. Civilization, so far from increasing this class of maladies, is one of the most powerful agents in reducing them in number and severity.

The Air Under Bedclothing.

The air under the bed covers immediately surrounding the body of the sleeper is exceedingly impure, being warmed and more impregnated with poisonous substances escaping through the excretory glands of the skin from the moment the person retires until he rises. The odor of the bedclothing, after having been occupied for a night, is often positively offensive to the nostrils of a person with an undisputed sense of smell, especially one who has just come in from outdoors, where the fresh, pure air has been breathed, says a sanitary journal. The danger to health from impure bedclothes air would be somewhat more likely to affect the susceptible constitution of a child than that of an adult when sleeping together. In either a person of the amount of the impurities in the air surrounding the sleeper must be greater than in young persons; consequently, while both persons would be more or less injured, the proportion of harm would doubtless be greater to the young person than to the person of more advanced years. Dr. Kenny of the London hospital, has called attention to the fact that wounds, especially of the lower limbs, heal much slower when exposed to the open air instead of being covered by bedclothing. He remarks that the air under the bedclothing is foul and pollutes hot, and tends to be very harmful to wounds with which it may come in contact.

Useful Bacteria in the Mouth.

If it were not tantalizing a fact, it might be well to remember that in the mouth of such healthy person there are always twenty or more different kinds of bacteria always present. Many of these are useful in splitting up the food which is digested, and they help it to be prepared for digestion. Other bacteria protect the teeth and prevent decay and the collection of tartar on the back of the teeth. Again, other bacteria have to do with the skin, the saliva, which is of use in preparing the food for the stomach. There is no doubt that we have in parts of our digestive tract bacteria whose duty it is to assist the breaking up of the food, digestion and assimilation, says The Mother's Nursery Guide.

GREETINGS ON THE ROAD.

Politeness an Armor of Proof Which Keeps Off Many a Wound.

"The gently bred household is distinguished from its opposite by the casual style in which it meets on the road," says Mr. Turner's Diner. "The good mornings and good nights of the kind from parents to children and from children to parents, the tidy manner, the bright, glad, free interchanges of the day, the air of sympathetic interest, are found in the home of good breeding. Politeness is a sense of good will always at play among a sound and wards off many a quarrel. On the road of life, often rough, often dusty, characterized by hardly a flower or beauty, with what pleasantness of speech and mien they salute one another! Even Mr. Dombey and Miss Much Afraid, in the way will not seem so long.

"Thad Stevens, the 'Fighting Quaker Preacher,' gives some fine examples of greetings on the road. There are Mr. Honest and Mr. Valiant for Truth, and Mr. Greatheart, school character of a sturdy, jolly, outspoken sort, the type of man that loves his way with the sword and puts down all opposers, and Christiana's children, Mercy, Mr. Honesty, with what pleasantness of speech and mien they salute one another! PERSONAL.

Mr. Seely Edsall will conduct the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, to-morrow at 4.15 p. m.

—Mr. Dow, Dr. Ketcham and Honeyman of this city were present at the dedicatory services of the new Roselle Presbyterian church Thursday.

District Deputy Grand Master Chas. W. Tallman of this city, and staff will go to Elizabeth and install the newly elected officers of Franklin Lodge at their meeting on Monday night.

Mr. Howard Fleming of Park avenue yesterday received a cablegram from Paris announcing the sudden death of his mother, Mrs. Mary Anne Fleming, widow of Rev. James Fleming, D. D., of London.

Messrs. Mohn and Mallery, two of the "student volunteers" for foreign missions, left Sunday for the College of the Princeton and Rutgers Y. M. C. A., will address the meeting at the Congregational church, to-morrow evening, at 7.30.

The will of the late Dr. Benjamin McCready of Bound Brook was filed for probate yesterday. His property is to be expended principally for a free hospital in Bound Brook, the income to be divided equally between three daughters and the heirs of his deceased son. One of the daughters is Mrs. Frances Jane Harris, mother of Carlyle W. Harris, who is to receive one-sixth of the income for the natural life of the latter. Carlyle W. Harris, who is now under sentence of death for poisoning Helen Potts. According to the will Mrs. Harris can will her share at her death, to anyone excepting her son. He gives his residence on Second street, valued at $6,000 to his daughter, Mrs. Sutton, but it is to be deeded to her son-in-law.

The Rev. A. O. Granville of Dunellen was presented a "present" with a goodly quantity of provisions at the parsonage yesterday afternoon, by members of the congregation of the village church. At his home, where he has a wife and three children, Congressman Phelps was presented with a beautifully decorated birthday cake which presented by his son. The ornaments on top were gold pieces amounting in value to $75—one dollar for each year of his life. Another cake was placed before Mrs. Phelps, the contents of which consisted entirely of dollars to the number of 25, each piece representing a year of her life. The aged minister and his good wife were too overcome to speak. Tears gave a good and eloquent expression to their feelings. It was a surprise from their children and friends.

Few persons realize the amount of work, worry and weariness experienced by the managers and directors of such interesting entertainments as "A Magic Slate," which was presented in the Chelsea Thursday evening. To Mr. and Mrs. Chester Brooks belongs the credit of the "Scottish" success. Mrs. Brooks directed the tableaux and actors while Mr. Brooks had the more arduous, and, not only local entertainer, but long appreciated part of overseeing the work back of the curtain. The Chelsea stage is rather small and the position of property man is no joke. But the entertainment was a success and that fact amply repays those interested for all trouble taken.

C. R. R. IMPROVEMENTS.

THE GRADE CROSSINGS TO BE ABOLISHED.

Preparations for the Work Commenced—All Obstacles Regarding the Bond and Mortgage Removed—Trains Given a Clear Track on all Cuts.

The Board of Directors of the Central Railroad of New Jersey has prepared to carry out the extensive system of improvements on the main line.

It will start in by ridding east and west Plainfield of the numerous grade crossings and Mount Horeb, changing it from a station, which will give it a new appearance. The commencement of a very high cut of gravel will be through Plainfield proper, and will be made from the Somerset street crossing to the Netherwood station. The cut will be made for four tracks, and by moving the fourth track will be a station for the accommodation of the people across Somerset way.

It was on the Jersey Central system that the Pullman Palace Car Company first put up and operated the Pullman Palace car, and to have one of the finest roads in the country is what the Jersey Central aims to do.

The work will take out eight grade crossings in Elizabeth at a cost of $500,000 and will be completed by the first of May. Between Jersey City and Bound Brook will be undertaken next in the forties, and will be completed by Summer. The total cost will be about $600,000.

A feature of the Jersey Central's improvements will be the building of fences opposite all the stations, separating the two main tracks from the two inbound tracks. This is designed to prevent people from getting mixed up with trains coming from the wrong direction.

The company will place gates on all its cars, elevated railroad style. The purpose of these improvements is evident. The Jersey Central has had its share of accidents, but it proposes to reduce them to a minimum in the future. The abolishment of grade crossings will enable it to increase the speed of its trains with perfect safety, and for this reason the changes will be welcomed by commuters.

At Dunellen there are two or three grade crossings which have long been a menace to the residents of that village. One of them especially is exceedingly dangerous, several persons having been killed there within a few years. There is considerable travel between that place and New Market, and to get from one to the other it is necessary to cross the tracks. The abolishing of grade crossings will be hailed with delight by Dunellenites.

THAT DEADLY BLUE LINE EXPRESS.

This Time an Elizabeth Man the Victim.

An Italian named Sanli was struck by a west-bound Blue Line train opposite the Central Railroad freight house at Elizabeth at three o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The man was employed as trackman on Conway's gang, and was stooping over fixing the rails when the train struck him.

Willing hands conveyed the injured man into the freight house, but he was so badly injured that he expired in a few minutes. His skull was crushed horribly and his brains protruded from the wounds. Amputations were performed, but the patient died, and neither arrived at when the man was dead.

This makes the fifth victim of the Blue Line express in a week. Last Saturday night Jamie Sullivan met death in a horrible manner at the Kent avenue station by the Blue Line express.

On Wednesday three more were killed by this same train between this city and Bound Brook. The fifth and last to be killed recently on the Blue Line was killed Thursday at Elizabeth. It has become known as the "Deadly Blue Line Express."

Literary Notes.

The Fisher Car Publishing Co. are going monthly, hereafter, with their publication, Car Service. Their first one presents a very handsome appearance, and is entitled "A Lady Engineer and Lady Assistant." The Fisher Car Publishing Co. are at 39 Vandewater street, New York.

The August Flower Company, of Buffalo, are the publishers of "Positive Diarrhœa," by Isaac Dunlap, a work from which much information may be obtained. The book answers the purpose, but is somewhat monotonous. The part concerning the flower is quite in keeping with the subject.

The ceremonies were held in Pythian Castle, on West Front street, Plainfield, and were witnessed by a large number of members of the order from Plainfield, Dunellen and Bound Brook, besides a delegation from Somerville Tribe, No. 32, of this city. ROSELLE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

A Description of the Handsome Frame Structure.

The Roselle Presbyterian church was dedicated last Thursday.

The new church edifice is a handsome frame structure, situated on the corner of Chestnut street and Fifth avenue, of Gothic architecture. There are three entrances, two on Chestnut street and one on Fifth avenue. Over the Fifth avenue entrance, which is one pointed arch, a window, in the form of a rose, is a feature day. The building inside is 70x40 feet, and 45 feet from floor to ceiling. The transept are of Georgia pine. There are no columns, the building being lighted by massive electric lights. The pulpit is elevated a few feet above the floor. There are three beautiful, large, stained glass windows, two of white, the one on the north and the one on the south side, and one memorial window, and were presented to it a church by members of the Congregation. The pulpit is of oak, and is very handsome, and was also presented to the church by members of the congregation. The seating capacity of the church is 400, are of oak.

Directly in the rear of and raised a few feet above the pulpit is a grand pipe organ, which is a recent purchase. The organ is a beautiful and powerful instrument, with all modern improvements.

The pastor's room is situated to the left of the pulpit. It contains a chair, desks, gas grate, and furniture of quartered oak.

The church edifice was erected at a cost of two thousand dollars. The building committee was composed of Messrs. Wm. Hall, Wm. Hetfield, Wm. Hall, Jr., and Wm. Hetfield, Jr. The contractor was Mr. Wm. Hall, Jr., and the architect Mr. Wm. Hetfield, Jr.

The church was dedicated free of debt, and the congregation is to be congratulated upon having such a handsome edifice in which to worship.

The Rev. Mr. Ketcham, pastor of the church, has been in charge of the congregation for about two years, and has been very successful in his labors. The church has a membership of about 200, and a Sunday school of about 150 scholars.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Everybody Use Correct Terms.

One of the most famous literary men in the United States, a gentleman who writes habitually elegant and forceful English, bringing to the reader's countenance a smile or a tear at will, habitually makes in conversation errors of grammar, idiom and pronunciation. It is because of the influence of corrupt early associations that he did not try to get rid of and does not try to this day, more shame to him. He parents undoubtedly said "them papers" instead of "those papers," and he does the same. If a cultivated foreigner were to meet him and converse with him awhile, what would he think of the English in writing of our distinguished literary men when he went back home?

Next summer the country will be full of the finest specimens of humanity from Europe, representing the refinement of the ages, come to visit the World's fair. Will the citizen of the grandest country the sun ever shone upon cause them to think we are a race of illiterate rascals by making constantly such slips as "these ain't nobody," "I didn't see nobody" etc., instead of saying "there is nobody," "I don't see anybody," and "I know nobody?" Stop using two negatives. Are the women of the country and the male citizens who watch chain going to persistently use "them" where they should use "those," and say "them cars" and "them books" instead of "those cars" and "those books?"

May more. Shall we come to an English speaking nation that habitually says "jist" for "just," "git" for "get," "right away" when we mean "at once?" Shall we let these foreigners know that there are Americans, and plenty of them—Americans educated in our public schools—who think it sounds stuck up and pedantic to use the best language they know therefore they drop into the vulgar idiom and 'mispronunciation with which many foreigner from Africa and from Europe have corrupted our common tongue? For the sake of our country and the memory of George Washington, not Do not let them know it.

Therefore start in now, early in 1893, and talk English. Don't say "The boys is going to school" or "people says." Stop giving us these degenerate, crippled monstrosities of the tongue.

After twenty-five years of knocking at the government door Washington the women who would vote have scored a second point. The first was to have their case regularly referred to a special senate committee. The second is that Senator Warren, of the select committee on woman suffrage, has reported to the senate a joint resolution to amend the United States constitution so that the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex and that congress shall have power to enforce the prohibition. Now, when both houses of congress pass Senator Warren's bill and the president signs it, and then it is ratified by thirty-three of the forty-four states in the Union, that amendment will become part of the United States constitution.

The coast of New Jersey at Long Branch is crumbling away at an alarming rate. The great hotels will soon have to be moved back or the famous seaside resort will be washed into the sea and leave only a memory behind. Every great ocean storm tears away an additional portion of the crumbling earth. While the serious storm that came in 1888 a slice of fully twenty feet of the bluff was taken off at one point, destroying beyond hope of repair part of the ocean driveway. We have here before our eyes an illustration of the submerging of land by the ocean, the same process that went on for so many ages in past geological periods.

Sir Morell Mackenzie, the famous British surgeon, had "views" on the woman question as pronounced as on other things. He believed women should work for their living and brought up his daughters up to trades or professions. One daughter, Mrs. Ethel Mackenzie McKenna, adopted journalism as her work and began to write for newspapers, with her father's approval and assistance, when she was only eighteen. She has already acquired a high reputation as a correspondent, doing choice writing for American papers and magazines.

Two classes of ocean passengers are at length beginning to have some attention paid to their wants by this republic. They are cattle and steerage immigrants. The cattle got the first attention. Now the human live stock is promoted to a bill introduced into the United States senate by Mr Chandler providing for more cubic space and better ventilation for immigrants on board ship.

Cannot somebody devise a way so that cities a house thoroughly on that we can get a constant supply of pure air without freezing ourselves when the thermometer is at zero? If such a way has ever been found the public is not generally aware of it.

THE PANAMA INQUIRY

Charles de Lesseps Under Strict Examination.

CONTRACTORS ABSORBED MONEY

M. Charles Lavroffe, Banker, Received Bonds and Francs for Devising the Plan of the Lottery Loan, Besides Profits on Stock of 1,500,000 Francs More.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—The evidence in the Panama trial justified the advice given to the parliamentary commission of inquiry by Viscount de Vitrolles Marcel that they should devote themselves to investigating the dishonest contracts made by the canal company. Through such contracts, he said, the company had squandered sums compared with which the corruption fund scandal was a trifle. The two men principally of Captain Freycinet and M. Etienne Martin corroborated the Viscount's statement. Captain Freycinet, after retiring from the navy, was sent to the isthmus as scientific adviser of the canal company. His report, which did not very favorably describing the utter hopelessness of the whole canal enterprise and the abominable methods of the officials and contractors, was suppressed.

M. Etienne Martin, once chief secretary of the canal company, described with gusto his experiences while in office and the methods he found in use among directors. The unwarranted enrichment of the contract system, he said, other financial aim of indemnifying them in advance to the disastrous storms with which the whole canal work was honeycombed. Eventually he resigned rather than sign contracts for machinery and floating dredges, the former whose bids, taken together, were 25,000,000 francs higher than the bids of English and Dutch firms. The directors had decided to refuse to accept the cheaper bids against bargain, and had left him the alternative of signing it or resigning, so he resigned. Everybody in the management of the company knew that this sort of work was being done; also that Baron de Reinach and other financial agents were getting large commissions.

Charles de Lesseps Testifies.

In a wrangle with Presiding Judge Periers Charles de Lesseps admitted that in 1887 he received, payable only to bearer, three great big 500,000 francs' checks for Genlois.

Charles de Lesseps was white and haggard, his eyes were bloodshot, his voice was apparently with difficulty, as he testified repeatedly and often dropped his voice so that only persons within a few yards could hear him. He admitted that he had become 1,500,000 francs in bonds as porteur 375,000 francs went to M. Baïhut, then director of public works, and 500,000 francs to Cornelius Herz. The remainder of the money was distributed in small amounts among persons whose favor was indispensable to the company.

M. Oberndorffer, the banker who suggested the plan of a lottery loan, testified that as a member of the guarantee syndicate he received 1,500,000 francs, instead of 6,375,000 francs, paying for them two francs fifty centimes each. His profits from the lottery were practically 1,000,000 francs. For this sum he did not, as he should have received, some 5,000,000 francs. As this had proved to be an excellent operation, he had "considered himself as being free."

"Was there any correspondence as to these matters?" asked Judge Periers.

"It is very strange that such a plan should not have been sanctioned by a single written word," he replied.

"The matter was treated in mutual good faith."

"Did you receive nothing for your work on the lottery in the company's interest?"

"Not a franc."

Large Sums to Financiers.

M. Flory, recalled as soon as M. Oberndorffer left the stand, testified: "Charles de Lesseps told me that he gave M. Oberndorffer large sums to reward him for suggesting the lottery plan and to prevent him from opposing it, as he did against the interests of the canal company."

Engineer Bloch, of the Commentry Iron works, said that the canal company was struggling against the most unjust and outrageous demands of contractors. Despite the opinions of expert engineers, the company persisted in its plan of a tide level.

M. Joly, a Panama shareholder, said that the newspaper attacks upon the canal company had decided him in 1888 to sell his shares for one-fourth their value. Baron Reinach, who discussed the matter with him, declaring that the attacks emanated from English sources and were not worthy of credence.

Several other shareholders gave evidence, and Senator Guichard, president of the Chamber of Commerce, presented a petition of Count Ferdinand de Lesseps and his son Charles.

Charles de Lesseps was finished, but he insisted that the letter said to Arthur Meyer, editor of The Gaulois, amounted to 100,000 francs. At his request M. de Lesseps was recalled for another examination, and he denied that Baron Reinach's statement was true.

M. Martin knows the rest well," he said "to say that I say did anything intentionally to injure the canal company."

M. Martin declined, however, to modify or withdraw any statement.

Convicted of Bribery.

The evidence so far in the Panama canal trial is regarded as asserting conviction. The report of M. Flory, the government commissioner, who investigated the scandals of the Panama financial enterprise, has been published in a book, and the whole board of finance directors, having accepted the report, have decided to prosecute those implicated by the statements in order to establish their innocence and protect their interests. The report leaves no room for the belief that the Panama canal company was not a gigantic swindle.

A MOB WITNESSES THE EXECUTION

CHATTANOOGA, Jan. 14.—Four negroes were hanged in the county jail here this morning at 10 o'clock for the murder of Dr. Hill, a prominent citizen, on the night of Aug. 27, 1891. The latter was a brother of Jim Hall, who was hanged in the same jail yesterday. The trap

THE NATIONAL CONGRESS.

The Anticipation Bill Considered in Congress in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The senate yesterday, after an explanation by Mr. Sherman, passed a bill to extend to the whole district of Columbia the provisions of the statutes for the protection of fur seals and other fur bearing animals. The McCormack bill was under consideration for some hours, and after a speech against it by Mr. Mills it went over till next Monday.

The anticipation bill was then taken up, and Mr. White's pending amendment to the second section was defeated. An amendment offered by Mr. Vilas, which would have the effect of restricting the operations of the bill to gambling transactions, was adopted for the rest of the day and went over without action.

The Republicans in the house filibustered all day against the consideration of the private war claims bill, with the result that nothing was accomplished.

AT THE BLAINE MANSION.

Dr. Johnston Remains During the Night.—Bulletin of the Doctors.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The doctors, after their 2 o'clock visit yesterday, gave out the following bulletin:

"Mr. Blaine was not so strong yesterday, but so far today he has shown no nocturnal weakness and is in the same condition as for the past few days."

Dr. Johnston returned to his residence last night at midnight. He said to a press representative that he expected to remain with the patient for some hours and probably until morning.

At 9 a. m. there was no indication of any change in Mr. Blaine's condition. Everything was quiet within and without the house.

The Nominated Registry.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 14.—The court room was too small to hold the crowd on the second day of the trial of Hugh Dempsey for complicity in the Homestead poisonings. The day was taken up by the examination of men who had been taken ill while working at Homestead during the strike and physicians who attended them. The physicians all expressed the belief that the men had been poisoned. Among the witnesses were George W. Arny, Louis Dreis and H. P. Thompson. At the adjournment Stephen V. L. Pelace, William E. Johnston, Benjamin Weaver, Wilbert Reed, Charles H. Smith, Louis G. Wells, Jr., W. E. Bullock and William B. Griffith testified to having been seized with sudden and severe illness after eating in the Homestead mill.

The Ice Embargo Lifted.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The boats that run to Ellis, Governor's and Bedloe's islands were able to make their regular trips yesterday. The steamer Massachusetts, of the Atlantic Transportation company, came up from the lower bay during the forenoon and dropped anchor off Bedloe's island, where she remained. The sister and rigging of the vessel were covered with ice. The ship arrived from London and made an attempt to get to her dock, but failing to force a passage through, she ice anchored off quarantine. The driving ice accumulated on the vessel and she was dragged out into the lower bay. In the North and East rivers the ice blockade has been raised, and all the ferry lines are running with comparatively little difficulty.

Death of Ex-Mayor Wickham.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Ex-Mayor William R. Wickham died at his residence in this city. Mr. Wickham was born on Long Island in 1809. He was for many years a member of the Mutual Hook and Ladder company and the Hamilton company, No. 12, of the old volunteer fire department. He was elected alderman for the Fifth Democratic party in 1876, was elected and served two years, declining a renomination in 1878. Mr. Wickham was afterward a member of the board of education for several years and served on many important committees.

Smuggling English Clothing.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The treasury department has received a report of the arrest in New York of the owners and part of the ship's crew of the Norwegian bark Ida, charged with smuggling English clothing into this country for Keene, a London tailor, three packages of clothes from New York, Boston and Dixfield (Me.) parties. Special Agent Whitehead, who reports the case, says this practice among steamship employes is quite common, and New York alone annually is defrauded of large sums by this means.

A New Question of Law.

BOSTON, Jan. 14.—The supreme court of the state, full bench, is to be asked to determine whether or not a person has a constitutional right to resort to a place for the purpose of smoking opium. Five men were convicted of resorting to a Harrison avenue opium joint and smoking there. Their counsel will take the case to the highest court, contending that a man has a constitutional right to resort to an opium smoking place if he wishes to.

Jay Gould's Will Admitted.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The will of Jay Gould was admitted to probate. Special Guardian Rollin M. Morgan was given $500 and Special Guardian Mapes $1,000 for services in the probate proceedings by Sherwood Ransom. They claimed $3,000 each for merely standing as legal sponsors for the minor children.

CLEVELAND IS LEADER

Tammany Ostracizes Hill, but Has yet Regrets.

SIGNIFICANT WORDS OF ORDER.

Congressman Cochran Reluctantly Pleased with the Result of His Mission to Mr. Cleveland.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—The Herald says: Echoes of the quarrel between the great Democratic chiefs fill the capitol corridors at Albany. In the absence of any positive statement by Mr. Croker the Hill men have shown more than their wonted reticence in his fatigue. They believe that the New York city machine will [illegible] to get along without Mr. Hill. Mr. Croker has not been particularly friendly to Hill in the state convention which nominated Governor Flower. The hint made by the County Democracy by-election that convention is a matter of history. But it is not known to many that the then mayor vehemently favored giving some show to the Cleveland men.

Yet such was his plan, and just as the Tammany braves [illegible] Saratoga he would have carried it out.

Hill on Democratic Factor He Enjoys.

"Croker and McLaughlin," said Representative Warner, "have long been rivals of Hill's pets. It oppressed them, and the public, that Hill was the only real progressive of us. Hill may send them, but they are now in a position to do without him. For my part I fail to see where Democratic Hill comes in. He is not important any more than Flower. He is not a politician."

When Roswell Cochran, the representative of Tammany Hall, left Mr. Cleveland's office in New York at the conclusion of an hour's interview with the president, he was asked if the authority which he had with what he had transpired. There is no doubt of the statement that Mr. Croker and Senator Hill will not [illegible] together in the future. [illegible] turns to [illegible] Mr. Cleveland is involved.

Cleveland Is Solid with Tammany.

"Is it peace or war between Mr. Cleveland and Tammany Hall?" was asked Mr. Cochran.

"There can be no war with Mr. Cleveland so far as the Democratic organization in this city or state is concerned. Tammany Hall will certainly support Mr. Cleveland in anything he may desire to do."

When asked if he knew of any declaration having been made to Mr. Cleveland that Mr. Murphy, as senator, would not oppose him, Cochran said he had no idea that any one seriously thought of opposing Mr. Cleveland's wishes. That the only opposition of Mr. Hill and Mr. Murphy, even if in the senate, could but fail. He pointed out the fact that Mr. Cleveland had won even when he had a Republican senate opposed him, and that he had secured the confirmation of Lamar to the supreme bench. Mr. Cochran reiterated that Mr. Cleveland was the leader of the party.

Preparing for the Inaugural.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Invitations have been sent out through Colonel H. G. Cobb, of the United States army, to the governors of all the states, inviting them and their staffs to participate in the inauguration ceremonies. A similar invitation committee requests that all civic organizations from various sections of the country who propose to participate in the inauguration ceremonies will notify the committee on civic organizations, William Dickson, chairman.

Harsh Disinherited by His Grandfather.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—Carlyle W. Harris, who is now under sentence of death for the murder of his wife, Helen Potts, has been disinherited by his grandfather, Dr. Benjamin W. McCready, who died a short time ago. Harris was done a great favorite with his grandfather, but the old man has effectually prevented him from receiving a legacy from [illegible] and her sisters.

Terrible Wreck at Chicago.

CHICAGO, Jan. 14.—The Cretz accommodation train on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad was telescoped at Fifty-Fifth street by the Chicago and Evansville through train at 7:30 this morning. Eleven people were severely injured in the wreck, but it is believed any one of the 100 or more passengers escaped bruises or serious injuries.

FASHIONS

Changes in Dress Fabrics.

Skirts all rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, continue to be made close fitting. The fullness and bone which are gathered at the belt are still the exception, according to a Paris correspondent of Harper's Bazar. Who further says:

Hot around the bottom they are scarcely wider than wider, and some of them now making are as much as 6½ yards wide. When the train is made, it is cut bias, and to four breadths, the front and sides of which being sloped, while the back is straight, the top is made narrower by darts, so that the fullness is sufficient to fall in graceful folds at the back.

Narrower fabrics, such as [illegible] are cut in [illegible] four breadths, two [illegible] and two [illegible] the front is inclined slightly toward the top and forms a part of the [illegible] all these side breadths are [illegible] and [illegible] the top is made narrower by darts, so that they fall straight through the middle, and the back breadths are cut the same, only bringing a seam in the middle of the back. BRILLIANT AURORAS OF 1892.

The Greatest Display of the Century. Wind Constitutes a Perfect Aurora.

The months of June and July, 1892, will long be remembered as having afforded three interesting auroral displays, one of them being of unusual grandeur and intensity. Two of the three, which in combination assigns it not uncommonly, Professor Lewis Swift, of Warner observatory, describes as follows in Science:

On the evening of June 18, just before midnight, turning my eye from the telescope, a bright, narrow beam of light was seen extending from the western horizon to an elevation of some 30 degs., or right angle to the magnetic meridian, and of about parallel with its equator. Here it divided into six parallel bands or branches, like six gigantic fingers of an outstretched hand (Fig. 1). After a visibility of about twenty minutes it slowly disappeared, and was the only sign of aurora observed during that entire night.

AURORAL DISPLAYS.

Again, at early twilight on the evening of July 17 a portion of a faint auroral band some 15 degs. in width was observed just south of Alpha Aquilla, having on the south two and on the north one short, narrow band close to the main one, making the principal one. This, being so far south, was of itself an uncommon occurrence, and as twilight deepened into night a slender one not exceeding 15 degs. in width issued from the western end and gradually lengthened, curving to the southwest and south until, like a mighty sickle, the band swung for a breadth and the curved ray lay the entire blade, it reached nearly to the southwestern horizon (Fig. 2). It lasted about a half hour, growing brighter and longer as the light increased, when it quite suddenly disappeared. Immediately after a rosy cloud and tinted streamers appeared in the northwest, and the greatest auroral display of the century commenced.

A perfect auroral exhibition consists of at least the following phenomena. It is very seldom, however, that all or even a majority of the requisites are present at any one display. They are here named in the order of their most usual appearance. 1. Evenly diffused light in the north. 2. A dark rent whose apex is in the magnetic meridian. 3. Streamers. 4. Luminous patches, especially in the north west, resembling a red color. 5. Motion for a long time stationary. 6. Colored patches and streamers. 7. Merry dancers. 8. Corona in the zenith. 9. Streamers in the equator; the point where the streamers seem by perspective to converge. 10. Streamers bowling south from the corona, occasionally extending to near the southern horizon. 11. Coronas, with frilled, wavy edges, apparently suspended from the sky. 12. Narrow, luminous bands, often issuing from the western to the eastern horizon, always at a right angle to the magnetic meridian, but seldom if ever coincident with its equator. Auroral flashes, or streaming others with the eye. All of the foregoing features were simultaneously visible.

Photographing a Rocket.

We are now generally familiar with the lightning records of the much-vaunted photographic cameras. We have such pictures of express trains, of runaways, of gymnasts and divers caught with unerring precision, notwithstanding the familiarity with speed, it was noteworthy while a picture of a rocket in its flight to a distressed ship was secured.

ROCKET IN FLIGHT TO A SHIP.

The rocket apparatus is a recent invention of Lyon, and consists of a rocket ship carried upon the rocket. This rocket apparatus therefore is of general interest. It is not often that such a photograph can be obtained, for the rocket flies most frequently in the dark hours. The photograph taken by Mr. H. J. Scofield was one of the attractions of the exhibition lately held by the Photographic Society of Great Britain.

Queen Cooking of the Atlantic.

In a recent paper before the English engineering society the writer recently traced the gradual development of the transatlantic steamboat traffic. He drew attention to the great increase only from breakdowns of machinery which at present characterized the results of the "Atlantic ferry," although the voyage is undoubtedly the swiftest and speediest trip in the world. Taking the year from Oct. 1, 1891, to Oct. 1, 1892, although there were no less than over 1,500 sailings made to and from the Atlantic ports, of nearly 3,000 departures from port, in all averaging nearly seventy-four per week, he had only been able to trace seven breakdowns of machinery which caused serious delay and only three total disablements. Considering, he added, "What of the future of this great ferry?" Looking back to 1870, when the greatest horsepower then installed in the Atlantic was under 6,000, and 10,000 to 12,000 were within reasonable distance, it might be fancied that the further increase for passage will be 4½ days, as at present was not beyond the scope of advancing improvements, and as the fastest boats at present in use, it must not be forgotten, there were no such fast steamers then, and there was no doubt commercial success would follow, as more voyageurs be made.

To Imitate Black Walnut.

A remarkable imitation of black walnut may be manufactured from pine, the quality of the wood appearance of the latter, such as to defy detection except upon very close examination, according to The Industrial World. To accomplish this end, a part of which is to be added to the water with six pounds water, and with this solution the wood is coated. When the material is half dry a solution of bichromate of potash, with water to rubbed on it, and the simulated walnut is ready for use.

PAUL'S FAIRY TALE.

The Wonderful Results that Came to a Boy Who Told a Lie.

Two children were blowing bubbles. Paul said, "My bubbles are larger than yours, Maisie."

"I am sure bigger than I am," replied little Maisie, "so you ought to make bigger bubbles out of your pipe, and my pipe is only a little one."

"My bubbles are pink and yellow and all colors, and they go sailing away into the sky like balloons. Oh, Maisy! Perhaps my bubbles will float half-way to the fairies to ride in. They look big enough to go so long that I think it must be full of little fairies going to the Golden land, where the sun goes to bed."

"But, Paul, the fairies would tumble out for the bubble has not room," said Maisy.

"That would be another lie," replied Paul, "for fairies have wings and would fly the rest of the way."

"I can't see any fairies, and I don't think they are there," said Maisy.

TWO CHILDREN WERE BLOWING BUBBLES.

"That is because you are not a Sunday child. Nurse says that only children born on a Sunday can see fairies, and you were born on a week day," said Paul.

Maisy looked disappointed. "And can you see any fairies, Paul?" she asked.

"Yes," said Paul, "but I have read so much about them that I am not sure whether I really see them, or only think I see what they are like, and I often make believe that I see them in my bed."

"Tell me one of the lies," said Maisy.

"Well, go on blowing bubbles for me to watch, and I will tell you," for Maisy knew that Paul was the best boy in the world. Paul blew one bubble after another, while Paul blew one bubble after another, while Paul blew one bubble after another, while Should an accident happen, on account of the girder, the Boards of Freeholders of Union and Somerset counties would be liable for damages.

Mr. Laine's Narrow Escape.

Mr. Eugene Laine, who resides at Evens, had a narrow escape Friday morning. He attempted to board a train at that station, as it was starting, his foot slipped and he fell. He caught hold of the steps and was dragged a distance of fifty feet, but let go just as he reached the Clinton avenue bridge. If he had held on he might have been seriously injured by one of the iron girders, as it was one of his legs was injured, and had to be placed in a plaster of paris cast.

The Bachelors Get their Cake.

Last Saturday night someone rang the door bell at the Park Club House. The janitor answered the call, but when he opened the door no one was in sight. Died From Exposure.

The results of exposure and the freezing of his feet proved more than the constitution of "Uncle Tommy" Tyndall, of Elizabeth, could stand, and Saturday morning, after suffering for several days, the old man died at the hospital.

On Wednesday morning the old man was found suffering with both feet frozen, and taken to the hospital. He was in his 70th year.

Both Feet Frozen.

A young man named Johnston, residing on East Fourth street, was one of a party of young people who went to Rahway last Friday night on a "straw ride." The weather was so bitterly cold that both of his feet were frozen. He is unable to leave the house, and will be confined for some time.

FIRE AT ZERO WEATHER.

PARTLY DESTROYS MR. T. B. PENTON'S BARN.

The Splendid Work of the Ice-covered Firemen Wins Warm Praise.—The Loss Estimated to be About $5,000.—A Brave Servant Girl.

A fire destroyed the barn of Mr. T. B. Penton, 413 Rockview avenue, Saturday evening, only the walls being left standing.

The fire was discovered about half past seven o'clock, when Mr. Penton immediately telephoned to Warren Engine House, but within twenty minutes the firemen were on the premises extinguishing the flames.

Meanwhile the servants busied themselves in removing the contents of the barn, including the horses and carriages, and were assisted later by the neighbors and firemen. The most valuable of the articles were thereby saved. A Swedish woman who had been only a few hours in the family displayed most wonderful energy and saved much property.

It was zero weather and the firemen became literally covered with ice before they fought the flames. They worked under considerable difficulty in other respects. The suction of the engine gave out, making the engine useless. Fortunately there is a hydrant of the Plainfield Water Supply Company in front of the residence, and a hose was attached to each of the two plugs.

The fire was confined to the barn where it started, and the loss will probably come within $5,000. The barn was insured for $2,000.

The cause of the fire is not known. The loss is covered by insurance.

Mr. and Mrs. Penton complimented the firemen on their promptness and efficiency, which, considering the cold, was very noticeable. They invited the firemen into the house, where they were provided with an abundance of sandwiches and hot coffee.

The firemen were so pleased with the consideration shown for them on such a cold night that several of the company called on THE NEWS office to-day to say that they wished us to be sure and mention their appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Penton's hospitality.

Incidentally the following fairy tale, purporting to be an account of the fire, appears in Sunday World, and seems to be about as near as that paper in particular gets to the actual facts respecting matters pertaining to this locality.

SHE SAVED THE HORSES.

A SERVANT GIRL DISTINGUISHES HERSELF WHEN MR. PENTON'S BARN BURNS.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 14.—The barn of Theodore B. Penton, a well-to-do retired New York broker, was burned to the ground to-night. The horses, as well as the clothing and personal effects of the family, were saved by the heroism of a servant girl. The loss will be over $10,000. The house narrowly escaped catching fire several times from the sparks which flew in through the coachman's room. The loss is only partially covered by insurance.

There's a difference between $5,000 and $10,000.

Farmer John Emmons, a neighbor of Mr. Penton, took charge of his horses, which are all very valuable animals, and Mr. J. G. Conover took charge of the vehicles.

A LAST TRIBUTE.

In Memory of the Late James E. Fancher of Fanwood.

The late James E. Fancher, of Fanwood, who died from injuries received on the railroad crash in this city, was for some time his active member of Washington Hook and Ladder Company, No. 1, of Scotch Plains, and a resolution was adopted at the last meeting of that organization to the effect that the company in common with the entire community, had lost no just and kind and sincerely grieved at the terrible accident which suddenly and without warning has been the cause of his untimely and tragic death. Mr. Fancher was a man possessed of a warm heart, a generous and friendly disposition, an impartial and honorable nature. His good qualities were such as would naturally greatly endear him to a wide circle of friends, and in his death the members of this company feel that the community has lost a man whose place cannot be easily filled. They extend their sincere sympathy to the widow, his chosen helpmate, his kindly and friendly greeting, the ardent advocacy of any measure in which he engaged. We feel that we have lost a friend, a companion, and the public a man who was one of its most esteemed citizens, one always ready and willing, nay eager to share in the labors and burdens of any good cause. We extend to his bereaved family, our kindest sympathy in their terrible misfortune hoping that this feeble tribute may be received in the kindly spirit in which it is sent, a spirit eminently worthy of such a man."

That Earthquake.

It is not known just what the brilliant Plainfield correspondent of The Sun took last night to keep himself warm, but, according to the following diary fairy tale, in to-day's issue of that paper he must have had the shakes rather bad, for the earthquake was only an imaginary one; there is the tale:

EARTHQUAKE IN NEW JERSEY.

A RUMBLING SOUND HEARD AT PLAINFIELD AND WINDOWS AND DOORS RATTLE.

PLAINFIELD, Jan. 15.—A slight shock of earthquake was felt here at 4:30 o'clock this morning. A heavy rumbling sound was heard, and windows and doors rattled. The direction of the shock was from west to east.

WILL NOT DISBAND.

THE CRESCENT LEAGUE STILL LIVES.

No Truth in the Reports that it is to be Disbanded—In Better Condition Financially than Ever Before—Owes Only $2,500.

For several weeks past reports have been circulated to the dissolution of the Crescent League, the League is not to disband, but will continue as Plainfield's most flourishing athletic association.

The League is in better condition financially to-day than it has been at any time since its organization, and the new race is started off with a debt of $2,000 to wipe out. They have succeeded admirably and reduced the amount of their indebtedness to that sum. This sum includes the amount of $600 expenses of last year's ball team.

The story of disbanding originated in the mind of an outsider, who overheard several members talking over the matters of their individual business and discussing what would be the best plan of action. Mr. D. Stokes Lee took it for made public that the club was to disband, their creditors pounced on them at once. The trustees have not been overcome all difficulties, and now the creditors are satisfied that the club is not to disband, even if they do. The matter was successfully settled recently by a member in whose hands the matter was placed.

AN EXCITING RUNAWAY.

MR. FELLER'S SWIFT RIDE THIS MORNING.

From the Park Avenue Bridge to Front Street in an Instant—Nerve and Muscle Triumph Over Brute Force.

Mr. George Feller of Pearl street had a thrilling ride this morning. One of his horses is a very spirited animal and every time it is driven near the cars tries to run away. As Mr. Feller was driving under the Park avenue bridge this morning, a train of cars passed overhead. This so frightened the thrill beast that it started on a run. Mr. Feller tried his best to stop it, but the animal only became more frightened at his attempt. The horse galloped madly toward Front street. It was going at such a rapid rate that in leaning in the horse, driver and sleigh would land in one of the large plate glass windows of the store opposite Park avenue. Then it was that the combination of nerve, good judgment and sinewy muscle won a victory over brute force, and Mr. Feller brought the horse in safe. It was an exciting ride, although short, and a large crowd of people assembled at the corner of Somerset and Front streets to witness Mr. Feller's miraculous escape. He stopped the horse shortly after, without assistance.

A MURDER AT WOODBRIDGE.

The Constable, or his Guard, Last the Murderer Escape.

Frank Devlin, thirty-seven years old, who was born and has lived at Woodbridge all his life, was shot dead in that place shortly before midnight Saturday by a Polander whose name is as yet unknown.

Devlin went into a saloon with a pail Saturday night to buy some beer. There were twenty to twenty-five men in the place. Devlin got into an argument with two of them regarding the labor question. He said that cheap foreign labor had a great deal to do with the low wages paid to the workingmen in this country. The argument became so warm that one of the men went out in search of Constable Hugh McDonald.

In the meanwhile Devlin got his beer and left the saloon. He had walked about three hundred yards from the saloon and was in front of Father O'Devine's church when he saw he was being followed by one of the Polanders whom he had been arguing. He turned to go on, when he was shot. Five shots were fired. One of the bullets struck and instantly killed Devlin, penetrating his heart.

Soon after the last shot had been fired Constable McDonald came along and found the man who had shot Devlin. He was standing near the body, which lay in the snow in the road. McDonald seized the man and said: "You are my prisoner."

The man answered in the most matter-of-fact way: "Somebody has shot this man, and I think I had better go for a doctor."

The constable let him go without further questioning. The man started off, not for a doctor but to escape. When last seen he was going in the direction of New York, where, it is said, he has friends.

County Surgeon Lawrence Donahue of New Brunswick was telegraphed and went to Woodbridge. The shooting was witnessed by two men, who were locked up.

Attorney Oliver and Detective Hoseell, of New Brunswick, and other detectives are looking for the murderer.

A Church Damaged by Fire.

The Third Presbyterian Church, at Elizabeth, of which the Rev. John T. Kerr is pastor, was nearly destroyed by fire Saturday night. The flames started in the basement, it is said, from an overheated furnace, and fire rapidly extended to the upper floor, and the new four hundred dollar organ, was completely ruined. The fire also spread to the building in the rear, used as a lecture room and Sunday-school, and in which the church library was situated. The building was thoroughly gutted, only the walls being left.

The interior of the church was badly damaged. The loss is from $60,000 to $65,000.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Let New York set the fashions for America if she wants to. The rest of the country will set the tune.

The Federation of Labor of Washington city is an organization embracing twenty-eight local unions of workingmen. Nearly half the delegates these unions send to the central organization are foreign born, yet the federation recently passed a resolution asking congress to restrict immigration for five years. Having got here, these delegates see how it is for themselves.

Colonel John H. Weber, United States commissioner of immigration, is known to his countrymen as the one office-holder on record who handed in his resignation to save the government his salary. Colonel Weber has been making a speech on immigration. He says it will not do at all to stop it entirely. We must have the strong bodied European laborers to do the rough work and develop our material resources. It can be made to be accomplished in his judgment by having a national quarantine instead of a suspension of all foreign steerage arrivals. The national quarantine could be made effective by means of duplicate statements and a permanent federal system of records of all arriving immigrants among other methods. Then Colonel Weber gave his audience this poser to work on. "Where will the servant girl of the future come from if you close the gates?" Perhaps Colonel Weber forgot the colored girl.

The New Architecture.

Mr. Burr Ferree's paper in The New England Magazine brings us suddenly face to face with the vast divergence in the aims as well as the style of modern architecture from the approved models of the past. The difference may be briefly expressed thus: In ancient times architecture was for the gods, in modern times it is for men. The same reflection idea dominated architecture during the Middle Ages and down even to this century. The churches of Europe are the structures upon which both wealth and artistic endeavor were poured out unsparingly.

All has changed. Churches are still built, beautiful and costly ones, too, but the most costly and spacious do not compare with the ancient temples of the gods or even the cathedrals of the Middle Ages. Now the architect works for man. He must expend his effort on houses that are for use six days in the week instead of only one.

The most striking monuments of Nineteenth century architecture are to be found in the factory, the bank, the office building, the railway station, the apartment house and especially in the school and college building and the library. The use of the elevator has evolved the skyscraping edifice of the modern city. Not King Solomon himself had the comfort and convenience in his palace that the modern well to do American citizen enjoys. Modern architecture is the deification of the useful. But modern architecture is not beautiful, as Mr. Ferree reminds us. It ought to be beautiful and must be made so.

To Get on in the World.

A good many thousand young men—yes, and young women, too—are wondering about this time how they shall fit themselves for a creditable career, or, if not a career, what they shall do to get at least a comfortable living. The wants of the time may be summed up in just two precepts. The first is learn to do something useful and learn it thoroughly.

This is a time of specializing. On the one hand is rough labor, which is performed by the foreigners who crowd over to America in the steerage. On the other are the hundreds of skilled trades and specialties and the few professions. In the professions the specializing tendency is at work, differentiating the criminal lawyer from the civil lawyer, the office practitioner from the advocate and the specialist, like the patent office legal expert, from both. Separate again from these is the pension shark, whose profession is not to be recommended to anybody. In medicine the differentiation is so great that in the large cities the general practitioner is becoming obsolete.

There is so much to be known that a lifetime is necessary to be thoroughly up in one single line of achievement. Choose what you will do, choose carefully and make no mistake. You can in a general way determine what you can do best by what you would like to do best. Then go in for that work with all your powers, full of hope and ambition, of energy that does not flag, of determination that no obstacle can down.

The next point is, cultivate agreeable manners. It is said that a certain famous millionaire and railroad president owes his rise in the world to his courteous and obliging manner to his employer while he was young. Keep your eyes open to see quickly where you can do little kindnesses and favors to all around you, from highest to lowest. Do this not from selfish motives, but from genuine good will and sympathy. You will receive so much sympathy in return that by and by the whole wave of good will rolling your way will push you onward to success. Cultivate graceful movements of body, neatness of person and a kindly, unsoiled voice. As has been said over and again, use always in your conversation the best English you know.

A POPE FOR AMERICA.

Mgr. Satolli Made Permanent Papal Delegate.

DR. McGLYNN'S CASE REVIEWED.

The Teachings of the Henry George Theories Coincide with Those Entertained by His Holiness—Critics of Satolli Severely Rebuked.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Mgr. Satolli received at the Catholic university the following cable message from Dr. O'Connell, the American secretary of the propaganda, who accompanied Mgr. Satolli to this country and recently returned to Rome:

ROME, Jan. 16.

To Mgr. Satolli:

The apostolic delegation is permanently established in United States, and you are confirmed as the first delegate.

O'CONNELL.

The importance of this message, proceeding as it does from the American secretary of the propaganda, will be readily appreciated. Inquiries at the Catholic university here, where Mgr. Satolli resides, fully confirm the authenticity of the dispatch. This decision the Vatican considers to be a sufficient answer to the opposition to Mgr. Satolli and his mission.

Early in December the faculty of theology of the Catholic University of America, in Washington transmitted to the person of Leo XIII their thanks for the sending of the apostolic delegate to the United States and for the selection of the university as his place of residence. The following autograph letter was received in reply:

Leo PP. XIII to his most beloved son, Thomas Bouquillon, dean of the faculty of theology of the Catholic university at Washington:

Beloved son—Health and apostolic benediction. The love and devotion which you and your colleagues of the Catholic university at Washington so fraternally manifest in your joint address, written at the approach of Christmas, are very pleasing to us. We rejoice indeed to see that you welcome with pleasure the proof of our paternal solicitude which we gave you in the appointment of our venerable brother Francis, titular archbishop of Lepanto, and we sincerely trust that in the discharge of your noble ministry you will endeavor with all solicitude that the students taught by you may be the defense and glory of the church and an ornament to their fatherland.

Leo P. P. XIII.

Dr. McGlynn's Teachings Not Obnoxious.

Archbishop Satolli authorizes the publication of a statement in regard to the pope's action in the case of Dr. McGlynn, of which the following is a summary:

On the very day of the reconciliation of Dr. McGlynn with the church public notice was given of it, with the statement that Mgr. Satolli had absolved from censure and reconciled Dr. McGlynn by special power for the purpose requested from and granted by the holy father.

This information so expressed should have sufficed to satisfy every one. Every sincere Catholic should at once have felt himself bound in conscience to recognize that all had been done in the case that was expedient and in accord with the spirit of the Catholic church.

Dr. McGlynn presented a brief statement of his opinions on moral and economic matters, and it was judged not contrary to the doctrine constantly taught by the church, and as recently confirmed by the holy father in the encyclical rerum novarum.

It is deplorable that any one should have dared to speak of the pope's authority over the church in America as foreign, and is a sentiment that utterances enormously erroneous and scandalous.

The Pope's Acts Are Supreme.

The action of the church and of the holy see in the things that belong to it is superior to every man-made boundary—universal and proper to every country in which there may be Catholics. For which reason it seems to be exceedingly opportune to recommend due respect in every sense to ecclesiastical authority, and before all to that of the holy see, as well as to that of the council of Baltimore.

Dr. McGlynn's Letter.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The Rev. Dr. McGlynn last night at Cooper Union said that in his letter to Mgr. Satolli he had neither condemned nor retracted the economic doctrine that he had been teaching. "And yet," he says, "thanks to the enlightened judgment and noble heart of Pope Leo XIII and the willing readiness of his worthy representative, Archbishop Satolli, in carrying out his instructions, I have been relieved of ecclesiastical censures and fully restored to my priestly ministry. I am only too happy to publish the letter which I presented to the apostolic delegate:

"MONSIGNOR—I am very happy to have that it has been judged that there is nothing contrary to Catholic doctrine in the doctrine taught by me as it was explained by me in the exposition of the same which I sent to your grace, and I rejoice that you are prepared to remove the ecclesiastical censures. I assure you that I have never and I would never say consciously a word contrary to the teachings of the church and of the Catholic see, to which teachings and notably to those contained in the encyclical rerum novarum I give and ever have given a full adhesion, and if whatsoever word may have ever escaped me which might seem not entirely conformable to those teachings, I would like to recall it or interpret it in a sense conformable to them.

"I have not consciously failed in the respect due the authority of the holy see, but if whatsoever word may have ever escaped me unconformable to the respect due to it, I submit to the first to recall it. And as to the journey to Rome, I will make it within three or four months if the matter be not otherwise determined by the holy father. I am your grace's very obedient servant.

"Dec. 31, 1892. EDWARD MCGLYNN."

"In the statement presented to Archbishop Satolli there is no minimizing, explaining away or departing from the doctrines of the United Labor party platform or the land and single tax league I have been teaching the doctrine for years."

BROOKLYN, Jan. 16.—At the burning of the flat building 310 Classon avenue the twenty occupants were forced to escape in their night clothes.

MR. BLAINE'S ILLNESS.

The Distinguished Patient No Worse Than for Several Days Past.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—At 2 o'clock all was quiet in the vicinity of the Blaine mansion, and all was reported to a continuance of the favorable condition of affairs existing throughout the day. The family had evidently all retired, as the lights were burning very low and no one seemed to be stirring.

The return of Sunday is looked for with some apprehension in connection with the illness of Mr. Blaine, for the severe relapse which he has recently experienced have occurred on that day. There was no developments of a serious character, other than favorable, and when Dr. Johnston left the house at 8:30 in the evening he said he should not return during the night unless specially summoned.

Early in the morning Senator Cameron, whose home is just across the alley from Mr. Blaine's, sent a servant to inquire as to the condition of the invalid. The attendant at the door appeared cheerful and made an encouraging response. The first callers at the door were Mr. and Mrs. Hale, and distressingly cold for this latitude, were Senator Hale and wife, who came about 10:30 o'clock and remained half an hour. Mrs. Hale was in the house when Hyatt and Johnston arrived to make their morning visit. Senator Hale told the reporters that Mr. Blaine had passed the most comfortable night he had experienced for many days. Dr. Johnston said glad to all appearance Mr. Blaine had not lost any strength since his attack last Thursday, and he was prepared to regard his condition as favorable as could be expected.

Publication of the fact that nitroglycerin had been prescribed in Mr. Blaine's alarming relapse caused inquiries this morning the drug, which as such is but little known. The use of nitroglycerin in cases of heart failure is probably not more than one case in a thousand. The usual remedies applied are tincture of digitalis (sometimes used in connection with aqua ammonia) and strychnine, generally a regulation dose of the former being fifteen and of the latter ten drops. When both digitalis and strychnine are used in one powder it is customary to add to the dose eight drops. Nitroglycerin is so powerful that even the handling of it is dangerous, and the use of it is extremely careful, the added effects having been obtained from the administration of one-fortieth of a drop, and in other cases a loss of consciousness and other alarming symptoms were produced by about the forty-fifth part of a drop.

Like bottle of amyl, nitroglycerin produces violent flushing, as though the heart would burst, and excessive action of the heart. The reaction of this powerful chemical production causes both muscular weakness and other partial or complete unconsciousness. The use of the drug in the most infinitesimal quantities would of itself produce fatal results after continued administration for a few weeks. The extreme compounding of the tablets is a dangerous task, as the yellow liquid of the nitroglycerin can be handled only when the temperature is below freezing point, and even then only with the most extreme caution.

A New Temperance Proposition.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—John Lloyd Thomas, at the Church of the Blessed Disciple, advocated the substitution of liquor prohibition the adoption of the scheme of the National Antiintemperance league, which is being formed and of which W. Jennings Demorest is president. The league, he said, is about to institute proceedings to determine the constitutionality of all laws licensing the traffic in alcoholic beverages. It also proposes to close all saloons under injunction proceedings as public nuisances on the ground that alcohol, when sold as a beverage, is a poison and hurtful to the general health of those who use it.

Suffering at Homestead.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 16.—Continued cold weather is increasing the suffering at Homestead, and it is stated that nearly 800 people are on the verge of starvation. In the mill there is a great deal of dissatisfaction over the wages. Saturday was the first pay day under the new scale, and many of the workmen claim their envelopes did not contain more than one-half the amount received for the same period before the strike. The officials claim that if the wages are smaller the men are not working as hard as formerly.

A Piano Forger at Haverhill.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 16.—A sensation was caused in the city by the arrest of Frank Vining, a prominent citizen and Sunday school superintendent, who, by his own confession, is a forger. Over two years ago Vining came to Lawrence with good references and purchased a half interest in business with Harold F. Hall for $10,000, paying $1,000 down and giving notes for the balance, collateral for the balance. These Vining finally confessed were forgeries.

Welland Tolls Abolished.

TORONTO, Jan. 16.—The government has decided to abolish its Welland canal discrimination against the American routes to the seaboard. A toll of twenty cents per ton has been levied on cargoes of all vessels passing through that canal, and a rebate of eighteen cents was allowed to vessels taking the Canadian route.

Bridgeport Hears a Meteor.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 16.—A meteoric display was witnessed here at 8:30 last night. It made a brilliant light in a zigzag track, lasting fully ten minutes. It sounded like a heavy body rushing through the air.

NEWS AT THE CAPITAL.

Senator Hill Talks of the Political Situation.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE CONVENTION.

Richard Croker Is Made Marshal of New York For... the Inauguration. Festivities ... Reception to Mgr. Satolli.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—The week promises to be eventful in the senate. Save the passage of the quarantine bill the senate has completed very little, and not one of the annual appropriation bills has been passed. The committee on order of business has determined that something must be done to advance the public business. It was at the suggestion of Mr. Sherman, chairman of that committee, that Mr. Washburn gave notice that he would ask the senate to sit next Wednesday until the antioption bill is disposed of. That threat can be done without a bitter struggle is not expected. What will follow the antioption bill will be decided by the committee on order of business before Wednesday. At present the indications are that priority will lie between some of the interstate commerce bills (if Senator Cullom is able to resume his duties), the Nicaragua canal bill and such a resolution to repeal the silver purchase act.

Mr. Peffer, of Kansas, is down for a speech on the limitation of the presidential term, and Mr. Morrill, of Vermont, on the Nicaragua canal bill, both next week.

The majority has mapped out a big programme for the house. Today is suspension day. Efforts will be made to pass the Bacon postoffice building and the bill for the election of senators by the people by a two-thirds vote. The majority of the rules committee has decided to allow Wednesday of the immigration bills, Thursday and Saturday to bills originating with the committee on foreign and interstate commerce. Friday, under the regular rules, is private bill day. There will be some opposition to the immigration bill, and it is hardly likely that one day will suffice for its passage. The friends of the quarantine bill reported by the committee on foreign and interstate commerce, which bill, it is contended, meets all the evils as to cholera which the immigration bill was designed to remedy, are opposed to the immigration bill.

The quarantine bill was antagonized very strongly by the state quarantine officers of New York, but at least a part of this opposition has been withdrawn. There is a probability of some trouble for each of those bills from the opposition of members who favor the other or the two measures.

Secretary Foster Entertains.

Secretary of State and Mrs. Foster will be the... a round of dinners within the next few days by members of the diplomatic corps, who will shortly take leave for Paris, when Mr. Foster will have charge of the case of the United States in the Behring sea arbitration. Secretary Foster has chosen him his portfolio the last week in this month. The arbitrators are to meet Feb. 23.

A reception will be given in honor of Mgr. Satolli, the papal delegate to the United States, by Mrs. Madaline Vinton Dahlgren Wednesday night next. In view of Satolli's new appointment diplomatic society has very kindly allowed to slip in a member, notwithstanding the fact that he has no official relations with the government.

Richard Croker, Marshal.

General Martin Maloy, of New York, grand marshal of the inauguration day parade, has made the following appointments: Colonel H. C. Corbin, U. S. A., adjutant general; General W. F. Tipple, U. S. A., chief of staff; William Dickson, of the District of Columbia, chief marshal of the civic parade; Richard Croker, marshal of the civic organizations of New York city and state; General Enmons Clark, of New York, assistant marshal.

Senator Hill's Statement.

Relating to an alleged row between Senator Hill and Tammany and the latter's adherence to Mr. Cleveland, the New York Herald says:

"Mr. Cleveland, as president, will have no trouble with the opposition."

This statement was made by Senator Hill. Mr. Hill says the assumption that any combination will be able to oppose Mr. Cleveland or his nominations for cabinet or other positions in the government is absurd.

"The presumption," said Senator Hill, "that there would be a combination between Senator Murphy and myself is preposterous. Mr. Cleveland has been elected by the Democratic party, and as Democrats both Senator Murphy and myself are obliged to support him whether we want to or not."

This admission on the part of Mr. Hill is an important one. It indicates quite clearly the future policy of the alleged Hill element in the United States senate.

Mr. Cleveland Paying Debts.

Senator Hill believes Mr. Cleveland is rapidly paying off many obligations. Henry Villard, who is now in Washington urging the repeal of the Sherman silver law, undoubtedly raised more money for the Democratic campaign than any one man. This claim Mr. Cleveland is said to have recognized by accepting an invitation to dinner.

The dinner indicated two things—first, that Mr. Villard will be taken to a position in the cabinet, and second, that Mr. Cleveland did not intend to give him what he wanted. The dinner, Senator Hill believes, ended the political debt Mr. Cleveland owed Mr. Villard.

Then came the Reform club. That organization had done work for Mr. Cleveland and believed that it was entitled to recognition. Mr. Cleveland appeared as the guest of honor at a club dinner, and in doing so wiped from his slate another political debt.

The chances of Tammany Hall with the new administration are very good. Mr. Cleveland does not fail to appreciate the work done by that organization, and will reward it with patronage, the only thing that will satisfy.

The Woman Suffragists.

The twenty-fifth annual convention of the National American Woman's Suffrage association will be held this week. Yesterday there were religious exercises in Metzerott's music hall, here the sessions of the convention will be held. A sermon was preached by Rev. Anna F. Anthony will deliver the president's address.

Suffered From Birth With a Severe Form of Scrofula Humor

"Until my boy was six years of age he was from birth a terrible sufferer from scrofula humor; sores would appear on him and spread until he was one mass of sores and discharges, followed by others, so that the largest part of his body was affected. He suffered greatly from itching, and as he grew older all of his sores ran on his head. The humor had a very offensive odor. Terrible

Intense Itching

We cannot tell how that poor boy suffered in all those years. Physicians did not effect a cure. At last I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before he had taken all of it, its good work was plainly manifest. The humor commenced to heal up, the flesh began to look more natural and healthy, and in a few months he was entirely well. My boy now has a smooth skin, and his flesh is as sound as any boy's. I have given Hood's Sarsaparilla to other children with the same good results, and I have no hesitation in saying that it is the best blood purifier in the world." Mrs. Harry E. Ruby, Box 254, Columbia, Pennsylvania.

DEMOCRATS AND REPUBLICANS JOIN

Peculiar Politics Developed by the Situation in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Jan. 16.—Dispatches from Lawrence, Hiawatha and McPherson say the Republicans and Democrats of those places held mass meetings and protested against the action of the Populists in the lower house, at the same time urging the Republican majority to maintain their position and asserting them of the inforcement of public sentiment. A dispatch from Wichita, Governor Lewelling's home, states that the Democrats of that place who supported him loyally during the election are considering the advisability of holding a mass meeting tonight to protest against his action in the legislative muddle.

The second week of the legislative session will begin with the lower house farther from having a working organization perfected than it was when it was first called to order. An organization of the Populist members lacking five of a majority of the members-elect is in existence and has the official recognition of the governor and senate. The Republicans and Democrats have an organization of sixty-seven members, which has not been given the recognition. Much talk has been indulged in looking to an amicable consideration of the two organizations. Many of the Populist members privately conceded that the Republican house is the legal one, but the fact that the Populist majority in the senate and the Populist governor has recognized the minority house leaves them powerless to recede from the action taken on the spur of the moment, when political excitement was running high last Tuesday, practically demanding the official seating of the senate and their governor. In other words, they do not know how to let go.

The Republicans will consider no arbitration propositions which does not recognize their organization as legal and regular. To make a division of the house officers or concede to a bifurcal the right to determine house contests would be a practical admission that their proceedings were in a measure at least irregular; and this they say they cannot afford to do. They say that in the event of a refusal of the Populists to come to terms the Republicans will enjoin the state officers from giving any orders to the Populist printer, and the first test case will probably be made on this question. The senatorial question is badly mixed. If the Populists are forced by the necessity of electing a senator with the aid of their present house organization the contest will be carried before the United States senate. For this reason many of the Populist leaders are urging the necessity of electing a fusion Democrat and presenting his credentials to the Democratic senate after the 4th of March.

A Five Hundred Dollar Witness Fee.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 16.—The attorneys for the defense in the case of Hugh F. Dempsey, district master workman, Knights of Labor, on trial for complicity in the alleged Homestead poisonings, were surprised today by an unexpected visitor from Baltimore, who came to testify before them a letter, which shows that one witness for the prosecution was well paid for coming to Pittsburg to testify. The letter in question is from Dr. James Cooper, the Baltimore physician, who treated Christopher Spaid, an alleged victim of the poisoning, and was to testified that Spaid was suffering undoubtedly from arsenical poisoning.

He was positive in his statements and would not recede from it under rigid cross examination by Attorney Foster. The letter is as follows:

PITTSBURG, Jan. 12.

MESSRS. Kaist & Co., Baltimore:

GENTLEMEN—Please send me one ton of coal. I think it is Sunbury No. 8. I will call on its arrival and settle the old account, as I have just drawn a fee of $500 from the Carnegie company. I will not return until Friday morning, when I will stop in. Yours faithfully,

JAMES COOPER.

LOWELL PAYS TRIBUTE.

The Remains of General Butler Consigned to Earth.

HIGH CIVIC AND MILITARY HONORS

The Entire Population Turns Out to Honor the Sturdy Old Soldier and Citizen—Comrades Undergo Suffering by Cold Rather Than Break Their Lines.

LOWELL, Mass., Jan. 16.—At General Butler's late residence on Belvidere hill Sunday morning private funeral services were held. Rev. Dr. A. St. John Chambre, of St. Anne's Episcopal church, read the service for the dead. Comrades bore the body from the house to a hearse drawn by four horses. A wild wind was blowing from the river over the hill. The veterans suffered, but not a man sought shelter. As the body was carried from the portals of the house the drum of the head rumbled, the colors were dipped and the company saluted.

At Huntington hall, where the body was to lie in state, a great crowd was waiting to be admitted. On the coffin rested the sword and spaulets that were from Lowell to the gulf and back again in the days when the negro was made a contraband of war by the brain that lay in the coffin. Behind the catafalque rested a bank of flowers that had come from President Harrison, from the convicts of the state prison and from all classes of people between these extremes.

A Wreath from the President.

President Harrison's wreath was placed in the coffin at Washington. Senators Dawes, Chandler and Hale, Governor Russell, Hon. Frederick Douglass, militia companies, societies and friends in Lowell, Boston, New York, Washington, Chicago and other places sent pieces that took up one side of the hall.

At Huntington hall, whenever General Butler appeared there in life, saw turbulent scenes, but those of Sunday surpassed anything ever seen before. Down in the street thousands pressed forward when they saw the doors open. All the afternoon a steady stream of people poured in, but the crowds that wanted to get in did not diminish. Hundreds left in line without getting in, only to return and swell the crowds this morning. The funeral of General Butler, which occurs this afternoon, is the greatest event Lowell has ever seen. The militia, the visiting dignitaries, Grand Army posts and about every local society will swell the funeral procession to enormous proportions.

In Darkest Africa.

LONDON, Jan. 16.—A dispatch to The Central News from St. Paul de Loanda says: A train crowded with Europeans and natives was hailed on the Congo railway near Matadi recently, and the engine was detached to join a wagon loaded with fifty-four boxes of dynamite and eighty-two casks of gunpowder. The engine moved down grade with great speed and collided with the wagon, exploding the dynamite. Fifty persons were killed, including M. Leguens, head of the Societa Anonyme Belge.

John L. Misbehaves.

ALLIANCE, O., Jan. 16.—John L. Sullivan, while waiting for a belated train, formed himself into a marching up Main street, with a howling crowd at his heels, he took possession of several drinking places and set 'em up for everybody. He shook hands with his shouting retinue, frequently hurling them to the floor with the remark, "Old John's a pretty good man yet, ain't he?" The police were glad when the big, brawling fellow was on his train.

A Cure for Cattle Disease.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16.—Dr. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry, reports on the experiments and investigations in the treatment of cattle for actinomycosis, or "lumpy jaw," saying the remedy tried—iodide of potassium—is a remarkable success, 65 per cent. of the cattle treated having been cured. It is also proved that the disease is not contagious.

THE NEWS FROM PARIS.

Panama to Be Reorganized and Aid Sought from America.

PARIS, Jan. 16.—The government has begun a campaign against foreign newspaper correspondents. The ministers have been seriously annoyed from the first by the attacks of English and German newspapers upon the men intrusted by the Panama canal. Herr Wolf, correspondent for several German dailies, and several other correspondents have been notified that they must leave the country.

President Carnot is thoroughly impressed with the dangers of the campaign, and his hand is being felt in a way which, for better or for worse, must be decisive.

Mme. Joseph Reinach, with her husband's approval, has relinquished all claim upon the estate of the late Baron de Reinach. The unfortunate Cornelius de Herz had another windfall. At one of the Paris banks is a deposit of 2,000,000 francs belonging to the Panama company. Besides the Reinachs none of the persons who made large pickings has shown any inclination to refund.

At a meeting of Panama shareholders and bondholders it was resolved to form an executive committee with 20,000,000 francs capital and then to apply for state aid. Count Keratry was appointed delegate to Washington to open negotiations with the United States government. Another delegate will be appointed to negotiate with the Colombian government.

New York's Proposed Ballot Law.

ALBANY, Jan. 16.—The amendments to the ballot reform law will be presented by next Wednesday. They will provide for a simple blanket ballot similar to the ballot now used in the state of Illinois except that the paster will be retained in all respects. Blankets left in the booths will be void and the candidate can only appear on the ballot once, under the head of the party first nominating him, even though his nomination be subsequently made by other parties. These amendments embody the ideas expressed by Mr. Croker recently. A bill will be introduced this week to extend the personal registration law which now applies to the cities and towns in the state to the other localities in the state.

Dr. Clark Renounces Presbyterianism.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The Rev. Edward Clark, D. D., who has for the past twenty years been the pastor of the Church of the Puritans, yesterday publicly renounced his allegiance to the Presbyterian general assembly. I am done with it."

WOMAN AND HOME.

PLAIN TALK CONCERNING THE SCIENCE OF HEALTH.

The Nesting of Nature—A Case of Spoiled Girl—Lowell's Second Wife—A Timely Question for Mothers—Directing the Natural Love of Pinery.

The house that the soul inhabits was intended to be strong, useful and beautiful. When the Creator placed Eve beside Adam but on a pedestal above him or on a footstool beneath him) he no more intended that she should be a sickly, nervous, nervous wasted, troubled faced weakling than that Adam should be so. Both of them were pronounced "very good," a verdict which could not truthfully be given upon the physical health of the majority of civilized women today. How have we fallen from our high estate? Simply and solely through ignorance.

Many of us do not know how to prevent disease, and we do not care to learn. We fight off pain and sickness by the drug habit, which some writer has said is the modern equivalent of the ancient compact with the devil. Just as man was fabled to purchase immunity from care by selling their souls to the devil, so the modern feminine bundle of nerves buys exemption from pain by the daily use of drugs. But we are not intended to suffer pain—we were never meant to be diseased. It is true that our bodies are often poor enough to begin with.

We inherit asthma or boils or consumption or debility as a disease beginning with some other letter of the alphabet, but this affliction is not sent to teach or reign satan—it is sent to teach self-determination. Health is a science just as much as astronomy and algebra are, and its principles can be mastered by study and practice. Its latest ignorance to suppose that a battle of letters will make amends for over indulgence in a box of sweets, that a dose of pills will undo the evil of overeating, or that a day spent in dawdling will offset the injury of a night spent in dancing.

The best housekeeper to take the desire charge of our tenement of clay is Mother Nature, and, like all other housekeepers, she is very partial to the virtue of cleanliness. Dr. Willard Parker says that "women can make themselves portable machines for office hunter." That's better than to get tired and dirty blood, and the cry is called neuralgia."

Breathe clear air from morning to night, and from night to morning again, and you will be rewarded with a lightness of spirit that the largest drug store is powerless to bestow. Eat clean food—food that is not greasy nor spicy nor hard of digestion—and you will be nourished and made strong by the only genuine blood purifier in the market. Bathe in clean water every day, and note the elevating and tranquillizing effect it has on the mind.

Think clean thoughts, and the body as well as the soul will seem to be nestefellow with the angels.—Wives and Daughters.

The Nesting of Nature.

The question of proper temperature for dressing and sleeping rooms is a puzzle upon a number of circumstances. To lay down an ironclad rule and expect it to fit all cases is absurd. The rule in a recent article that no room should be kept warmer than a temperature of 60 degs is a most excellent one—for some people for cold bathe are almost entirely necessary for continued good wants—with some people, this is supposed in this world that while the temperature of one's home is different from that of others it is because the temperament of one individual is different from that of others. At least this is generally the reason. Of course the necessity for pure air ought to be considered. It is in fact our life. But the fact should not be lost sight of that cold air is not necessarily fresh air. Consequently the prescription of opening the warm room to let the coldest air of the winter rush through it like a blast from the north pole is by no means as healthy as it is popular. Some of the governesses of Lowell's daughter when I first went to stay at Elmwood, and I then felt the charm of her fatherhood. Its practice was Swedenborgian, with the same faith and spiritual outlook I have generally found to be characteristic of those men with whom I have had sympathy of which I have never known another instance, a fine and subtle faculty of appreciation, serious and tender, which was to Lowell like an infolding of the native spirit.

The only particular in which the sympathy failed was in his feeling that she had in regard to his humorous poems. She disliked the vein. It was not that she lacked humor or the appreciation of it, but she thought that kind of literature unworthy of him. This she said to me more than once. But aside from this she fitted him like the air around him. He had felt the charm of her character before he went to Europe, and had begun to bend to it, but, as often the case after his marriage, he would make no sign till he had tested by a prolonged silence the solidity of the feeling he had felt growing up. He waited, therefore, till his visit to Germany had satisfied him that it was sympathy and not propinquity that lay at the root of his infatuation for her, before declaring himself.

No married life could be more fortunate in all respects except one—they had no children. But for all that his life restored to him to him healing from sorrow and a defense against it, could be, a very spring of life and hope.—W. J. Stillman in Atlantic.

A Timely Question for Mothers.

In these days when little folks are relegated to the care of paid nurses for at least twenty-one out of every twenty-four hours, is the day passed by when a baby is off the baby to visitors or who runs in occasionally to take a peep at it in the nursery appears to be only its mother in name, and not in fact? Are the women of today less motherly in the true sense of the word, or is it only because the altered living, the luxuries of modern life, the social claims, require a different demeanor, yet which is only the superficial veneer over the true, sweet heart of noble womanhood?

Our women are, we progressive, there are so many interests nowadays that formerly were not entered into by women that home life and home duties necessarily appear slighted, and no wonder if the children growing up in a circle where "mother" is but an occasional visitor will not come to regard the mother of the numerous and gay as the very priestly woman who shows in the attending of teas, receptions, balls and dinners, as such an altar Minister that in the early years of life, when character is formed, and the seeds of good or evil are sown, and the great wealth of love that should be kept for that season, be cast on earth divided up or scattered to the councils of life stranger? Is it time to devote to those upon the neglected children of a parent who is wrapped up in social or public obligations.

Perhaps there are few persons more acutely as in the olden days when "the children" were the beginning and end of every hope and every delight. But if they are the closing five tenderness and all absorbing love is many cases remain entirely unless of the whirling round of their outside obligations. —James Miller Illustrated.

Directing the Natural Love of Finery.

"Margery, run and fetch your beautiful new dancing dress to show to Tante," said a fond mamma to her infant of six, who trotted off to return an instant later carrying a billowy concoction of silk and lace. "Isn't it lovely? And won't my girl look too sweet in it for anything!" the mother continued, shaking out the tiny frock, while Margery stood looking on delightedly and apparently afraid of making that child vain," suggested the visitor, whose conventional views were rather shocked at the ostentation. "Not at all," answered the other "that is just my theory. I like her to care for dress. We all do, for that matter, so why not treat it as a natural gift, thereby directing her love to think of it in that way and as being only natural and right and one of the pre-requisites of her sex."—New York Tribune.

A Japanese Tearoom.

In one of the city homes a small reception hall decorated in Japanese style is used as a tearoom. Here one may call any time from the center of the ceiling, almost covering the space. The walls are draped with silk in subdued tone and conventional pattern.

The floor is also matting in Japanese conventional design, laid one rug before the bamboo lounge. The pillows, piled high upon it, are of Japanese thread with Japanese embroidery and china silk in conventional design. Between the tearoom and the drawing room next block curtains with the great awkward Japanese birds flying across them.

The tea table was of bamboo, the tea set came straight from the hand of the maiden. Doilies and tea cloth embroidered in the Japanese national flower, the chrysanthemum. One panel of apple blossoms painted in Japan and a vase of jade formed the sole decoration of the walls. Pictures do not look well on handmade. Chrysanthemums in quaint jars were the flowers used.

At an afternoon tea the hostess received in a kimono of pelest gray crape, with sash (or obi) and folds at the neck of pale rose. Two little girls in gay figured kimonos served tea.—Edna McKinsey in Home Journal.

Eminent Women of Greece.

Women in Greece elevate much thought to the moral regeneration of criminals, and there are Christian sisters who make this their mission. Queen Olga herself is at the head of the association not as a mere ornamental patron, but as a directing force and an indefatigable worker. She is one of the ablest of all the ladies of the Athenian princes, as well as the gentlest, and her associates in

A Woman in a Mexican Camp.

Mrs. John Rose Magruder, a daughter of the late Henry D. Cooke, the banker, has spent her home in the mountains of Mexico, where her husband has mining interests. During the greater portion of the time she is the only woman in camp, and on this account, as well as in order to be of aid in case of illness, she has acquired considerable knowledge of medicine. A clever device adopted to show the ignorance of native women when certain powders or pills should be administered was to make a little sketch of the country in that immediate vicinity and mark off on the mountainside the different points at which the medicine was to be given, at which the medicine was to be administered.—Kate Field's Washington.

A Jolly Game for an Evening Party.

A good "paper and pencil game" is illustrated Proverbs. Each player draws a picture illustrating some proverb; he passes it to his neighbor, who writes what he thinks the sketch may mean, then turns down the picture and passes on the paper. The next one reads the proverb, makes an illustration of it, and passes it on, first turning down the proverb and leaving only his own sketch to be seen, and so on until the game has had all the papers, which are then exhibited. It is not necessary at all that the players should know how to draw, for the point is in the sketches the clever amusing is the game.—Cincinnati Enquirer

A Stained Glass Window.

"Put a stained glass window in the children's playroom," advised a friend to a woman planning a new house, "for then the kids may play it will be a source of the greatest delight to the little people. I discovered that quite by chance in renting a house to put in my own bedroom. My baby, who was fretful from teething that winter, would go to sleep much quicker in my room than in his own, and when I remarked upon it the nurse told me it was because the bright window interested and finally quieted him. I soon saw that it was so. All children love pictures and gay colors."—New York Times.

Inexpensive Cases for Gloves.

Linen glove cases, which are simply a fold of the linen, large enough to hold the gloves, are buttonholed all around and have "Gloves" embroidered on the outside fold, with small flower sprays to scattering down at each side. They inclose a loose lining of silver paper and a small envelope sachet.—Exchange.

Serve quartered lemons with or also squeeze a few drops of juice over the top of all fried meats, broiled steaks, hams and breaded chops ready to serve.

Frances Hodgson Burnett says that she has made up stories ever since she can remember, and has written them ever since she was seven years old.

Respect the little secrets of children. If they have concealment, worrying them will never make them tell and patience will probably do its work.

A little powdered borax in baby's bath water prevents the little one's skin from chafing, and he is not so liable to "break out with the heat."

To proficiency as a pianist Princess Victoria of Prussia adds a mastery of the banjo which would not disgrace a music hall performer.

Potatoes for baking, either white or sweet, should never have the skin cut; use a vegetable brush for cleansing.

Some Wonderful Whips.

They had been telling stock whip stories all the ten in the old oil lug wash run out, and the snake in the bird was thick enough to be sawn. "Toothy" Hoskins remembered a fellow on the Distraction who could cut down a cow with his whip; this he had never up the carcass. "Squirrel" Boydland cut his way through two miles of thick scrub with a new whip and offered his "achievement" for competition.

A white headed youth, now arrived, had a relative who could take a stock whip in either hand and write the Lord's prayer on the back of the gum tree with the left hand weapon while playing a jig with the other on a tin dish at five paces. Harry Clark thought that pretty "considerable," but he had met a fellow in Bourke who could spell cuss with every stroke of his whip, and wind up a Waterbury watch by flicking at it from running distance.

Recently there was a carnival, with the clean swap shave and coast lead eye, ventured to remark. He was an inconsistent man, who had no respect for completion by saying grass at sea, and then dismissed the subject by dealing a bottle of rum big enough to go twice around.

"Now," he said, "in knockin round I've seen fellers that could give pub a hair cut and shave with a whip, nearly; but ain't many of 'em can make their abilities pay. I've seen a feller in Bourke who gathered a pile han'fin a stock whip."

"What could he do with it?"

"Pick pockets."—Sydney Bulletin.

Soldiers' Noses.

"The next thing we know," an old fashioned British officer complained recently, "the wars will be fought with handkerchiefs for every soldier in the army, and a review at Wimbledon will see all the forces manoeuvering under blue gingham. Umbrellas have come to be carried as long as skilful pocket handkerchiefs. Military life becomes more effeminate every day!"

The occasion of this complaint was the issue by the war office of a military handkerchief, patented by an officer. On this handkerchief, which is intended primarily for the soldiers' noses, is printed all sorts of information as to the loading and firing and construction of the Lee-Mitford rifle, the alphabet used by army signalers, the various bugle calls and so forth.

It has been the case ever since the use of pocket handkerchiefs by soldiers on duty was not permitted at all. One day, however, an officer noticed a man using his nose and blew his nose, and scolded at him at the same time for not having "blowed it."

"Please, sir, I did blow it," answered the man, "but I wouldn't keep blowed."—Youth's Companion.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

Several Communications Presented—Rooms to be Fitted up for the City Clerk and Treasurer—Delinquent Taxes to be Collected—Ordinance Presented—Other Business.

The City Common Council met in adjourned session last evening. The following councilmen were present—Coe, Erickson, Fisk, Glines, Fraser, Marsh, Millington and See. Absent—Councilmen Bird, Johnston and Weber.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

A communication from ex-City Judge W. E. Codlington was read, showing that 1,077 persons had appeared before him during the past three years, and that he had received for fines $4,381.76. Mr. Marsh moved that the communication be received and filed. So ordered.

The Board of Health, in a communication, called council's attention to the ordinance adopted in 1891, allowing connection to be made with the Pence street sewer. According to a section in said ordinance, any person, upon payment of ten dollars, is allowed to empty sewerage into that sewer. The communication contained a clause from the Corporation Counsel suggesting that the Council amend section four of the ordinance in regard to said sewer. The communication was received and referred to Committee on Streets.

The bonds of Collector Johnson and Constable Bates were received and referred to Corporation Counsel for approval.

The bond of City Treasurer Titsworth, approved by the Corporation Counsel, was received and ordered recorded.

The report of the City Treasurer was presented and referred to the Finance Committee.

A petition was presented, signed by Messrs. W. P. Slate and E. E. Brower, asking for electric lights on West Front street, between Evons and the city limits. It was referred to the Committee on Public Lights, with power.

Mr. See, of the Committee on Sewerage, reported that the committee held a meeting last Saturday evening, and that a full report would be presented to the Council at the regular March meeting. Mr. See moved that the Sewerage Committee and the president of Council act with the Citizens' Committee in the matter of sewerage. So ordered.

In a communication the City Treasurer stated that he would require more salary as his duties had become greater. Also he needed a desk and a place to keep papers. The communication was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. Fisk, of the Committee on Finance, reported that the committee, had investigated the matter of having all the city offices located in the Coward building. It was ascertained that there was room enough for the City Clerk and Treasurer, but that there was not vault room enough for the city's papers and records. The committee was authorized to procure the necessary desks etc., for such rooms, also to ascertain the price of a vault suitable for the city's purposes.

Mr. Fisk offered a resolution to the effect that Accountant A. S. Paterson be retained by the city, at a salary of $60 per month, to look over the city's accounts, audit all claims, etc., provided he would accept the position. The resolution was adopted.

A resolution was presented by Mr. Fisk in regard to the collection of delinquent taxes of several years standing, and suggested that a committee be appointed to act in conjuction with the president, to confer with the Corporation Counsel about the matter. Also that the City Clerk be authorized to send a copy of the resolution to the tax collector, and delinquent tax collector, notifying them to call out a list of names of the persons owing taxes and the amount of such indebtedness. It was adopted. The president appointed as the committee Messrs. Fisk and See.

Mr. See moved that the Committee on Streets advertise for bids for crushed stone to be used on the streets during the ensuing year. So ordered.

Mr. Marsh was granted permission to withdraw a former ordinance and to substitute another, relating to the City Treasurer.

The ordinance was passed on its first and second reading, and was ordered engrossed and advertised.

The City Clerk was authorized to communicate with Mr. Coward informing him that the Council Chamber was too cold and that it must be heated according to the lease.

An ordinance relating to the licensing of hackmen, hawkers, etc., passed its first and second readings and was ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Marsh moved that the City Clerk notify all hackmen that their licenses would expire at noon the first Monday in March, and that they must be renewed previous to twenty days before that date. So ordered.

The Committee on Stationery and Printing was authorized to purchase books and stationery required by the Council.

A number of bills were ordered paid and Council adjourned.

Grocers' Association Meeting.

The Plainfield Protective Grocers' Association met last evening in City Judge W. A. Coddington's office, on West Front street, the treasurer's report was read, and the delinquent list presented in book form to the association. The system of keeping the list prepared was discussed, and the election was postponed until Monday evening, January 30th.

20 DEGREES BELOW ZERO

LAST NIGHT THE COLDEST EVER KNOWN IN THIS CITY.

A Clear Sky and Little Wind—Telegraph Wires Snapped from Contraction—Hard on the Poor People.

Caps that cover the ears, no matter how old-fashioned or homely so that they were thick and warm, were much in come last night to the hardiest of persons who knew it was cold but little did they, who did not look at the outdoor thermometers, guess how great a fall the mercury had taken.

Mr. Miller's self-registering thermometer on Somerset street sometime during the night registered 20 degrees below zero.

At Mr. T. B. Penton's on Rockview avenue, it was 17 degrees below.

A milkman going his rounds at four o'clock this morning says it was then 18 degrees below the zero mark.

At eight o'clock this morning it was ten below zero, and even as late as nine o'clock it was five below.

Never has such cold weather been experienced here before.

Six of the main wires on the Western Union Telegraph system have snapped from the cold, and communication is entirely cut off. Men, with moustaches and beards snow-white from their frozen breath, wasted no time on the street to chat with passers-by but fairly ran to keep warm.

Coachmen and drivers were heavily imbedded in furs which were white with frozen breath and dark colored horses changed the color of their coats from the same cause.

At daylight this morning a heavy frost lay in the air like a fog. It was several hundred feet thick and enveloped the mountain so that it was not visible a quarter of a mile away.

Many hardy old men, who have for many years been telling of "good old time weather" now say they "never had anything as cold as this, and so lasting, too."

Those who say "cold weather is healthy" now confess that they think they made a mistake and amend their mare remark by saying that they think it is better for the health to "keep comfortably warm though that's impossible these days."

The poor people suffer greatly, many being compelled to sleep in cold rooms, covered up with clothing and shake shivering through the long night. The laboring men, together with the masons and carpenters are all idle, and in numerous cases the purses are very low. Many of these men go to the Y. M. C. A. rooms where they can get warm, but the wives and children at home, with little or no fire, suffer greatly.

No especial cases of individual suffering have yet been reported to Chief of Police Grant.

The snow in the streets has become hard and slippery. On the sidewalks it is a constant menace to the lives and limbs of pedestrians. In the road, sleighing is perfect, and the beautiful sleighs together with the merry jingle of the bells and merry faces of the riders, make a cheerful sight as they go dashing by.

Among the many handsome turnouts to be noticed are those of Messrs. Mason W. Tyler, J. E. Tracey, H. P. Talmadge, G. K. Thomas, W. Underwood, A. C. Vail, Mahlon Vail, Edward Van Buren, Wm. B. Wadsworth, John F. Wilson, O. T. Waring, John Weir, J. F. Wiechers, A. J. Woodruff, Mr. Wilder, Allan B. Wallace, F. W. Lewis, A. M. Ross, Judge W. A. Coddington, J. W. Reinhart, Wm. P. Smith, E. S. REVOLUTIONARY AND COLONIAL RELICS.

To Form a Part of the New Jersey Exhibit at Chicago.

At the meeting held at the Plainfield Seminary on the afternoon of Friday, January 13th, the undersigned, were appointed a committee to secure information regarding Revolutionary and Colonial relics in the possession of the residents of Plainfield and the neighboring towns, in order to make a full list of all such objects in New Jersey, and also with a view to having any such articles of especial interest, as the owners are willing to loan for the purpose, a part of the State exhibit at Chicago.

As the time, before the final arrangements must be made, is extremely short, it is earnestly requested that any residents of The Plains who may have such articles in their possession, or who can give any information on the subject, will communicate with the undersigned as soon as possible.

FIREMEN PAID AT LAST.

For Being On Duty Extra Time at the Boice Fire.

The members of the Plainfield Fire Department have just received their pay from the insurance companies for the extra time they were on duty at the Boice lumber yard fire, which occurred over a year ago.

While the fire was in progress an insurance agent of this city, representing several companies, requested Chief Deane to keep some of the firemen on duty for a week. This was done to protect property adjoining the burning heaps of coal, which smouldered some time after the building was consumed.

The insurance companies losses were so heavy that they refused at first to pay the firemen, which accounts for the long delay in effecting a settlement. Three thousand feet of hose were used during the entire week.

SHOOTING BURGLARS.

FARMER WALDRON FINDS TWO MEN IN HIS HOUSE.

He Shoots One and the Other Barely Escapes—A Midnight Battle—The Thieves Shoot at Mr. Waldron, but He is Uninjured.

WHITE HOUSE, N. J., Jan. 17.—(Special.)—Two men, in a sleigh drawn by a fine team of horses, drove up to the farmhouse of Mr. E. Henry Waldron at about twelve o'clock last night. The farm house is about three miles from the depot. They broke into the house and were ransacking it in a thorough manner when Mr. Waldron appeared with a shot gun. The burglars saw him and made a rush for their sleigh to escape.

Mr. Waldron opened fire with his gun and the thieves shot back with their revolvers.

Mr. Waldron fired again and one of the men fell, shot through the hip. The other man left the horses and ran off. He has not been caught.

The injured burglar and the horses and sleigh were secured. The man refused to say who he was or to betray his companion.

Mr. Waldron was uninjured by the burglars' shots.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Why Can't We Have a Drive?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS.—Can't the people who have horses have a speedway here as are found in other cities?

The center of Park avenue, from Seventh street to Randolph road was formerly allowed to be used for that purpose, but now that is all stopped by the police, which, to people who have rigs and live in Plainfield for the pleasure of using them, is rather hard.

Can't Mayor Gilbert give us a little consideration? No harm was done before and the police kept a conveyance which preferred to go at an ordinary gait at the sides of the road, where there was plenty of room.

Crowds assembled on the sidewalk greatly enjoying the sport—seemingly as much as the drivers themselves. The crowds were there yesterday as of yore, but the drives were not.

Probably no town in the country for its size has given so much attention to its drives as are to make them pleasant for those who drive, but what good are the drives for those who have no horses if they are not permitted to give the animals the rein, in even such a limited district as mentioned.

In behalf of the sleighers, I hope the Mayor will keep the minions of the law from duties, and give us a chance to enjoy this fine sleighing weather.

In some cities police are stationed to protect the drives, to ask the use of the center of the road, and that would be a good thing to do here. A TROTTER.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Hiram B. Kimball of Vineland is visiting Mrs. Charles H. Schermerhorn of North avenue.

Mr. Morgan S. Taylor and family started Friday for Jacksonville, Florida, where they will remain during the cold weather.

City Judge W. A. Coddington has been retained as counsel by the committee to protest against the opening of the Peace street extension in the borough.

Major-General O. O. Howard will speak at the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Y. M. C. A. of this city to be held in the Crescent avenue church on Thursday evening of this week at eight o'clock.

Mr. Henry M. Maxson, principal of the Plainfield public schools, delivered an address to teachers at the Trenton High school yesterday afternoon. The subject of his lecture was "Saving Time."

The Rev. J. W. Rimmerton will preach next Sunday in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Theme: "The Credentials of a True Christian." Wednesday evening Mrs. Pierson, the evangelist, of New York, will lead the meeting.

Miss Alice M. Fowler died yesterday at the residence of Mrs. Ellen Disbrough, on East Front street. She was a public entertainer and a member of the Society of Friends. Miss Fowler established an old ladies' home at Poughkeepsie, and was otherwise prominent in benevolent movements. Death was caused by apoplexy.

Mr. Robert Stewart of Greenville, Superintendent of Telegraphy of the Western Union, was in town to-day looking after the Company's wires. There is considerable difficulty in keeping the wires open on account of the cold weather, which causes the wires and poles to contract. This winter is unusual. In fact it has never happened here before. On five or six lines communication was entirely broken off.

What the Big Stamps are for.

Many people have wondered what the Government need stamps of the denominations $3, $5, $6 and $8 for. They are used for prepaying registered mail packages to foreign countries. The rate is five cents per half ounce and the limit is four pounds, and so a foreign package of the largest size allowed by the postage laws, would require $4.00 worth of stamps to be placed on it.

For Men Only.

All men are invited to a public meeting this evening, to be held in Trinity Reformed church lecture room, on West Second street, at eight o'clock. For men only.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Butler's Brain Heavier than Webster's.

BOSTON, Jan. 17, (Special.)—The Journal says it is informed that an autopsy on the body of Gen. Butler previous to interment showed that the cause of death was the bursting of a small blood vessel in the brain, caused by a violent fit of coughing. All the internal organs were found to be in excellent condition, and but for the accidental cause of his death he would probably have lived many years.

His brain weighed four ounces more than that of Daniel Webster, which was one of the largest on record.

A Storm Predicted for To-morrow Night.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—(Special.)—The record breaking cold weather of the past week is now on its last leg. To-morrow will be warmer, but to morrow night we shall probably have another storm. It may bring snow and it may bring rain. But it will be quite an able-bodied, long-winded storm.

And Attended the Sociable—Their Names to be Read in Church.

The people of St. Patrick's parish in Elizabeth, N. J., are greatly wrought over an address made by Father Meehan, of St. Patrick's church.

Father Meehan announced that all who attended a sociable given by the Eureka Pleasure Club on December 27, and who were members of societies connected with the church should be expelled by the church societies at once, and that if the church societies failed to act their connection with the church would be severed. Many of the members of the Eureka Pleasure Club are members of St. Patrick's parish and their young lady friends are members of the Young Ladies' Sodality and Children of Mary.

Previous to the holding of the sociable Father Meehan protested against it and forbade his parishioners to attend. His warning was unheeded and many of them attended. Father Meehan at once laid the matter before Bishop Wigger. The latter is known by the nickname of Bishop Fear. In case the guilty ones do not comply with the laws of the church it is probable that their names will be read in church.

MR. JENNINGS EXONERATED.

It is Said the Entire Vestry of the Church will Resign.

Samuel Elliott, senior warden of the Episcopal church of Wakefield and received a communication from Bishop Scarborough saying that the accumulated charges of clergymen previously in vestigate the charges of drunkenness and lying against Rector J. B. Jennings have decided that the charges are not sustained by the evidence presented. This contains the report published some days ago that Mr. Jennings had been exonerated.

It is said the entire vestry of the church, consisting of Samuel Elliott, Charles Forster, J. B. Greene, Charles Towne, R. C. Cole, J. H. Harper Rust and Mr. Shevill have signified their intention of resigning and turning the parish over to the bishop and vestry.

The Simpsons and Davisons families are said to be the only upholders of Rector Jennings.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Nicaragua Canal company is of opinion that if the United States government would issue $100,000,000 in national bonds for the completion of the work, then this country would hold undisputed possession of the canal forever. However the thing is to be accomplished, two points are clear. One is that the Nicaragua canal must be constructed as soon as possible; the other is that the United States must control it.

Fashion is cruel as the grave. More reprehensible even than the killing of birds to adorn ladies' bonnets is the practice of docking horses' tails, which is now demanded by the edict of a silly, wicked fashion. Not only is the tail docked below where the bone terminates, but the bone itself is amputated for the distance of a foot. The operation is much more painful to the horse than cutting off his ears would be, and more disfiguring as well. The tail bone is a continuation of the spinal column, with all its intricate vertebræ and nerve connections. Cutting a man's hand off at the wrist would be somewhat on a par so far as pain and shock go with docking horses. And when it is done the effect is painful and hideous to see. At the recent horse show in New York the horse that would show the shortest, most mutilated stump, was considered the handsomest by the depraved fashion votaries. A fine, flowing tail is an addition to a horse's beauty and comfort, of which nobody with an undepraved taste or a merciful heart will deprive him.

The Real Toynbee Hall.

As far back as 1874 graduates of Oxford university, England, began to spend part of their vacations working among the poor in the parish of St. Jude's, Whitechapel, London. Among the first was Arnold Toynbee, a young man beloved by all who knew him. He felt profound interest in the scheme to reunite mankind in one brotherhood, destroying mere caste and wealth distinctions. He believed that the means to accomplish this was for men of education and refinement, belonging to the so called upper classes, to take up their residence in the slums of a city, not to distribute tracts, or to be obtrusive or patronizing, or yet to dispense charity, but simply to meet the inhabitants on equal terms and by degrees to interest them in the things that interest all clean, well educated and moral individuals. So the slum people would come gradually to lead the lives of clean, well educated, moral individuals. As to the persons of the alleged upper classes, they would gain in their knowledge of life among the poor and lowly, and in another way would be benefited almost as much as the slum people themselves.

Such was the scheme that budded in the brain of the enthusiast, Arnold Toynbee. His enthusiasm was of that catching quality which drew others within its current and carried them, both the rich and the lowly, along like a mighty river. At length it was found best to have all the students gathered in one house, where they might live together. By that time Cambridge graduates and those from other schools had become interested, and there was a rising tide toward the "rediscovered power of union." And at this time the gifted, loving young enthusiast, Arnold Toynbee, died, with his grandest work before him. The college settlement plan was, however, carried out, and the first house for the students' residents was named Toynbee Hall.

Attached to the residential house are now a library, social meeting rooms and study rooms. There are thirty clubs of men and women. They study natural history, science, literature, civil government and political economy. There is even a Shakespeare class, and these Whitechapel slum people know, some of them, more about Shakespeare than the intelligent American who reads this account of them.

The members of the travel club save their money for excursions to the continent of Europe and elsewhere. One of the trips of art loving members of this club was to Florence and other cities of Italy. There is little charity in the way of money giving outright in the Toynbee Hall scheme. The poorest are taught by force of example to plan to get the most out of their money, and save and spend it for the things for which persons of education and refinement spend theirs. The best lesson that can be learned in this life is that there are always ways of doing anything one wants to do if he will set himself to find them.

Mr. Adele M. Garrigues, who writes of this noble enterprise in the Philadelphia Press, says:

East London is still—east London, and Toynbee Hall is a light in a dark place—a good deed in a cruel world. The rays of this "little candle" are gradually spreading in their number and in their power to shine. For the poor, whose hours of labor and crowded rooms leave them no hope of brightness in their homes, a hand is outstretched that touches the heart, and in the Slade Reformatory of New York, so that the sentence shall expire Jan. 23, 1893.

English Workmen Thrown Out.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Vaughan's Cleveland Steel works at Esteo in Yorkshire have been closed owing to a lack of orders. One thousand men are rendered idle.

Bridgeport's Ice Blockade.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 17.—No sailing vessels have entered or left the harbor for ten days.

SIX DAYS OF WEATHER

Unprecedented in Its Severity and Extent.

THE MERCURY FROZEN IN THE WEST.

Coal Famine in Cincinnati—Hangers and Destitution in Many Parts—Europe Entirely Enveloped by the Cold Wave. Trade and Traffic Paralyzed.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The past six days have been the coldest ever known in New York. The record of the weather bureau, which goes back twenty years, has nothing to equal it, and other records which extend back twenty years more admit that they have the record of no six successive days which equal those that New York has just passed through. The mercury reached zero yesterday morning. Trains on all the elevated roads were delayed and the platforms were jammed with people.

It was almost impossible to keep up a full head of steam, and the crowded cars had to move slowly. Nearly every train into New York and Jersey City was late. Back of Ellis and Liberty islands there are several ships as powerless as if they were high and dry on the beach. Off City Island six tugs, each with a schooner in tow, are in the grasp of the ice. In the East and North rivers ferryboats run pretty much on time.

The Cold Extends Over Europe.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Reports of extreme cold come from nearly all parts of the continent. The harbor at Kiel is completely icebound. All over Germany railway traffic is delayed and in some parts suspended. Between Rome and Genoa railway communication is maintained only with the greatest difficulty. In Vienna this has been the coldest winter. A person's nose or ear on the first day of the year "ring a five minutes" ears would freeze in the thermometer was walk. In the suburbs the ern Italy the 7 degs. below zero. In ...ntte, the last weather is severer than before in ten years.

The Cumberland Frozen Tight.

MEMPHIS, Jan. 17.—The Mississippi river is full of floating icebergs from Cairo to Vicksburg, and the prospects for navigation for the next three weeks are exceedingly gloomy. All of the boats in the Memphis trade have been withdrawn and placed in safe harbors. The suspension of river traffic has caused widespread destitution throughout this section of the Mississippi valley. The Tennessee and Cumberland rivers are frozen over from the headwaters to the Ohio for the first time in thirty-five years.

The Niagara Ice Bridge.

NIAGARA, N. Y., Jan. 17.—The ice bridge across the Niagara river, which formed on Jan. 8, is still intact, and the intensely cold weather is strengthening it. It enlarged until it has become the greatest bridge since that of 1880, when the Canadian hackmen made driveway across the river and used it for three months. Thousands of excursionists have visited the wonderful scene, and Niagara was never gayer than now, and it is veritably a winter carnival.

Cincinnati Never Saw So Much Snow.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 17.—Public charity is very active and well situated. Individual charity is also doing much promptly to relieve necessity, and there were never before so few cases of unrelieved suffering in the city. The Union Bethel Mission and over 600 people Sunday and yesterday distributed a hundred gallons of soup. The street sweepers are heaping great piles of snow, such as have not been seen before.

Baltimore Under Blockade.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 17.—Baltimore is under blockade by ice. Only the largest tugboats work their way through and then only under a full head of steam. Tugboat men positively refuse to move steamers from their piers.

Six Inches of Snow at Hot Springs.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Jan. 17.—A special to The Citizen from Hot Springs says that snow to the depth of six inches has fallen there, and ice has formed in the French Broad river for a distance of a mile and a half.

Mercury Frozen in Wisconsin.

SPARTA, Jan. 17.—The mercury from solid at 40 below zero. It registered 45 below at Whitehall, 36 at La Crosse and 42 at Medford. Terrible suffering among the Winnebago Indians is reported.

Senator Brice's Generosity.

LIMA, O., Jan. 17.—Senator Brice's representatives here received a telegram telling them to distribute to the destitute and suffering poor 100 tons of coal and 100 barrels of flour.

Frozen to Death at Fonda.

FONDA, N. Y., Jan. 17.—David Wemple, of Baltonville, was frozen to death last night on a road from Fonda to Johnstown. He was a nephew of ex-Comptroller Wemple.

Ten Degrees Below at Petersburg.

PETERSBURG, Va., Jan. 17.—The thermometer registered 10 degs. below zero at 6 a. m., the coldest weather ever known here.

Nebraska Republicans Gain a Point.

LINCOLN, Jan. 17.—The Republicans won the first move in the senatorial game by defeating the amendment providing that the Populist speaker preside at joint sessions. This was accomplished by the aid of three Democrats.

A Young Clubman Burned to Death.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—Young Arthur Allan, a millionaire, was burned to death. The origin of the fire is shrouded in mystery. Allan was left an estate by his father valued at upward of $7,000,000.

A Receiver for Solid Rock.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—Before Justice Horton the officers of the order of the Solid Rock stated that they did not care to oppose the prayers of certificate holders, and a receiver will now be appointed.

The President's Leniency.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The president has mitigated the sentence of Herman Sternberg, convicted in the State Reformatory of New York, so that the sentence shall expire Jan. 23, 1893.

Bridgeport's Ice Blockade.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 17.—No sailing vessels have entered or left the harbor for ten days.

"ABOUT THE SAME."

Mr. Blaine's Physicians Evidently Coming Up the Patient's Term Symptoms.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Shortly after 9 o'clock last evening Dr. Johnston made a brief call. When he left the house he told a reporter that Mr. Blaine was somewhat stronger than he was in the morning. His condition was about the same as it was yesterday.

At 3:30 o'clock this morning there was no apparent change in Mr. Blaine's condition. Neither of the physicians was in the house and the lights were all out.

It was hoped that when the physicians announced that at a specified hour they would be prepared to issue a fuller statement on the subject than had hitherto been given out that some facts would be allowed to transpire which would satisfy the natural desire of the public to ascertain the truth in regard to the illness of one of its most distinguished citizens, and at the same time stop the crop of contradictory and sensational rumors now prevailing.

This anticipation was not realized. There was a delay in the issue of the promised bulletin, and when it did appear it contained nothing but what had previously been made known.

Mr. Blaine has at various times in recent years been treated by physicians other than those in immediate attendance upon him at the present time. In the list are Dr. N. S. Lincoln, one of the most popular consulting physicians in Washington; Dr. G. S. Magruder, a Washington physician of large practice; Dr. Dennis, of New York and Dr. Hartzell, and others. Not one of these has been called to state the nature of Mr. Blaine's organic disease. One of them, however, said that he had once prepared an intelligible bulletin as to Mr. Blaine's condition, but was peremptorily requested to withhold it from the public. He added:

"The real nature of Mr. Blaine's illness will probably only be made known when the certificate for the health office is made public, and I fear that will occur before long."

Mr. Blaine's disease remains a mystery to all but the family and the attending physicians. The latter decline, without the express authority of the family, to divulge the nature of the complaint which has now kept their patient continuously in bed for seven or eight weeks, with constantly increasing strength and frequent alarming "sinking spells" threatening dissolution.

A Proposed Great Cathedral.

ROME, Jan. 17.—Cardinal Parocchi has submitted to the pope a vast scheme for adding another to the Catholic edifices of the country. The cardinal's scheme is to erect on the Monte Vaticula a church with a cupola equal in size and effect to that of St. Peter's, the cost of which is to be defrayed by the churches throughout the world. The estimated cost of carrying out the scheme is $6,424,000, and it is calculated that its construction would give employment to 14,000 workmen for six years. It is thought that the offerings at the pontifical jubilee will exceed those made at the episcopal jubilee, which yielded more than 40,000,000 lire in money and about 100,000,000 objects for presents.

Ireland's Home Rule Bill.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—At a cabinet council the financial details of the home rule bill were substantially arranged. In the first home rule bill the ratio of Ireland's contribution to the imperial exchequer was one-fifteenth, totaling £3,345,000 per annum. The new proposals, based upon juster data, will make Ireland's contribution only one-twenty-third, equaling £2,270,903 per annum. Another important feature in the Irish financial scheme is that a loan shall be granted from the imperial to the Irish exchequer to enable the administration to start fair. The demands of the Redmond section that Ireland's contribution should be only £1,800,000 will not be entertained by Mr. Gladstone.

To Test the Bancroft.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The secretary of the navy issued orders directing a board of naval officers to assemble at Newport, R. I., Thursday to superintend the trial trip of the steel practice vessel Bancroft. Speed is the only requisite in the trial. Should the vessel make more than the required speed—twelve knots an hour—her builders will receive $5,000 for every additional knot, while a penalty of $10,000 will be imposed on them for the loss of every quarter knot below the contract speed.

Chinamen to Be Deported.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 17.—The twelve Chinamen who three months ago were arrested on a complaint of U. Rosen's that they were being smuggled into this country from Canada were tried, and nine were sentenced to the Albany penitentiary for thirty days, and upon their release to be deported to their native country. The others, claiming that they were students, were discharged.

For Inducing Paupers to Vote.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The case against Edward C. Sheehy and Charles E. Simmons, commissioners of charities and corrections, who are charged on the complaint of United States District Attorney Mitchell with having induced a number of paupers on Randall's island to register and vote without legal right, was adjourned for one week.

Mohawk Valley Short of Water.

FONDA, N. Y., Jan. 17.—The scarcity of water is becoming a serious matter in the villages and farming communities of the Mohawk valley. The farmers have been compelled to haul water for miles for their stock.

Governor Abbett Withdraws.

TRENTON, Jan. 17.—At the joint caucus in less than half an hour James Smith, Jr., became the nominee of his party for United States senator. Governor Abbett withdrew at the last moment from the battle.

HIRED TO POISON MEN.

Gallagher, the Cook at Homestead, Testifies.

ONLY WANTED TO MAKE THEM SICK

Master Workman Dempsey Sadly Involved by the Testimony of the Witness in the Endeavor to Put Nonunion Men of the Carnegie Mills Out of the Way.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 17.—The court was thronged in the Dempsey trial for poisoning men at the Homestead mills.

Patrick Gallagher, the self confessed poisoner, was called. "I first saw Dempsey last August at 68 Third avenue in Knights of Labor hall," he said. "Robert Beatty and James Davidson were with me. Beatty said to Dempsey, 'These are the two men.'

"Dempsey spoke about breaking a street car strike in Chicago. He said powders had been used; that if we would use these powders in the Homestead mill it would make the men sick, and that we could break the strike in about ten days. He told us he would guarantee us fifty dollars apiece. He told us to get work in the mill.

Dempsey Furnished Powders for Soup.

"A bottle containing three dark yellow powders was given to me by Hugh Dempsey Sept. 7 or 8. He also gave me instructions how to use them.

"The day following I put one powder into thirty gallons of soup. The next day I put one powder into thirty gallons of tea, and the third powder was used the second way.

"Dempsey asked once if there were many sick in the mill. I told him quite a number were sick and that I did not like the new steward and quit work.

"When the story of the poisoning was first published I wrote a note to Dempsey saying: 'Beatty has been arrested in Louisville. Send me some money and I will leave town.'

"He said: 'What are you afraid of? If you are arrested I will get lawyers to defend you. If you do have to go on the stand, swear point blank that you don't know me, and I will swear that I never saw you.'"

Confirmed by an Accomplice.

Gallagher was not confused in cross examination, and answered all questions with a clearness and promptness. J. M. Davidson, Gallagher's alleged accomplice, was then called. He confirmed Gallagher's story. Among other things he said:

"Beatty suggested croton oil. I objected, and Dempsey did, too, saying he did not want to harm the men—only make them sick."

Wants to Appoint His Successor.

NASHVILLE, Jan. 17.—Hon. Peter Turney, chief justice of Tennessee, was sworn in as governor at his home in Winchester. He left Tuesday for Nashville, but was not able to come to Nashville to be inaugurated. Judge Turney refused to resign his position as supreme judge before taking the oath of office. By taking the oath as governor the judicial office is vacated, and he can then appoint his successor on the supreme bench.

Preparing to Strike.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 17.—Reports from the Westmoreland and Fayette coal regions indicate that the thousands of coke workers are not discouraged by the great defeat which they suffered in the spring of 1891. "I Owe My Life to Hood's Sarsaparilla"

"Words are powerless to express the gratitude I feel toward Hood's Sarsaparilla, for under God, I feel and know that to this medicine I owe my life. Twelve years ago I began to bleed, followed by nausea at the stomach, and later with evenings of chills, fever and sweats. I grew weaker and weaker, and finally grew worse until three years ago. Physicians did me no good. I

Caused by a Tumor

For several months I had been unable to retain any food of a solid nature. I was greatly reduced in flesh, had no appetite, and was confined to the house most of the time, and my life was despaired of. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after taking one bottle I felt better. I began to eat and gradually began to feel better.

I Began to Feel Hungry

Could, after a time, retain solid food, increased in weight, the nerves lost my fear, the bleeding subsided, and I felt better all over. For the past two years my health has been pretty good, and I have been able all the time to do my own housework. After what it has done for me I cannot but say a word in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla." Mrs. Cynthia Sangster, No. 10 Judson Street, Albany, N. Y.

FINALLY CAME TOGETHER.

Kansas Republicans and Populists Will Endeavor to Agree.

TOPEKA, Jan. 17.—For the first time since the legislature convened a week ago the rival organizations met in peace. Both sides have become weary of the prolonged squabble, and an honest effort was made to arrive at some understanding by which the deal house may be made one. To this end all outsiders were excluded from the hall, newspaper men excepted.

Both houses met and simultaneously took action for the holding of a joint session with the senate for election of a state printer.

Then each house adopted a resolution providing for an immediate joint session of both branches of the lower house for the purpose of discussing in a friendly way the differences which keep them apart. The two houses then went into committee of the whole, and at the suggestion of the Republican side A. N. Wittington, a Populist, was chosen chairman. A committee was appointed to devise means for the settlement of differences between the houses.

There was a general feeling last night that no settlement will be arrived at, and the two house committees will proceed in the way they have been doing for an indefinite period or until some move is made by the Populists to remove Speaker Douglass from the speaker's chair or pass an appropriation bill. Then the courts will be asked to interfere and the crisis will have to come.

WEALTHY MRS. COPE.

Her Son Trying to Prove Her Incapable of Caring for Her Millions.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—In the court of quarter sessions Judge Hare granted a writ of habeas corpus against Dr. John M. Chappin, superintendent of the Pennsylvania Hospital for the Insane, in the case of Mrs. Josephine P. Cope, to compel him to show cause why Mrs. Cope is confined in the hospital. The writ was made returnable on Monday next. Mrs. Cope is the widow of a millionaire bank president of this city, and was taken to the hospital last week on the certificate of two reputable physicians. Her son and sister claim that she is insane and not competent to manage her affairs. On the other hand, Mrs. Cope contends that she is perfectly sane and that she has been placed in the hospital so that the management of her estate can be taken from her. Both Mrs. Cope and her son are well known in society.

In National Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Three prepared speeches were read in the senate yesterday. The first was by Mr. Carlisle, of Vermont, against the McGerrahan bill; the second by Mr. Peffer, of Kansas, in favor of a constitutional amendment limiting the presidential office to one term, and the third by Mr. Call, of Florida, in defense of the constitutionality of the antioption bill. After a quorum was procured as the result of a call of the senate some considerable progress was made on the antioption bill. The amendments that had been offered by Senators Vilas, of Wisconsin, and Daniel, of Virginia, were defeated by a large majority, and some amendments offered by Mr. Washburn, of Minnesota, were agreed to, one of them fixing July 1, 1893, as the time when the bill is to go into effect.

For almost an hour in the morning the time of the house was consumed in the consideration of a resolution to which there was got the slightest opposition in any quarter and which was finally adopted without objection. It was one calling upon the executive departments for information as to the number and amount of war claims allowed or disallowed.

Nova Scotia Needs the Revenue.

OTTAWA, Jan. 17.—Mr. Charles Cahan, leader of the opposition in the Nova Scotia legislature, says that Premier Fielding, who had spent twenty years of his life in denouncing combines and monopolies, has seized the first opportunity to place eastern Canada under the control of a coal monopoly controlled by Boston syndicate. Reckless expenditure has about exhausted the provincial treasury, and the local government was desirous to obtain a few cents extra royalty per ton to cover its oblivious of the fact that for every dollar obtained for the provincial treasury the syndicate might easily exact $100 from the coal consumers of the country.

ASK D... CLARK TO STAY

Notwithstanding His Heretical Utterances.

HE WAS A SUPPORTER OF BRIGGS.

Wanting Greater Liberty, He Desires to Withdraw from the New York Presbytery, but That Body Asks Him to Reconsider His Intentions and Remain.

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The New York presbytery is not inclined to allow Dr. Edward L. Clark, of the Church of the Puritans, to withdraw from the church, as he has petitioned. A meeting of the presbytery was held Professor Briggs being among those present.

Rev. Dr. Van Dyke, chairman of the special committee on Dr. Clark's request, reported that they had written to Dr. Clark, stating their regret that he had not taken more time, and expressed the committee's belief that his action was based on a misapprehension of the position of the Presbyterian church and his duty toward it. In this communication they made an earnest appeal to Dr. Clark to remain in the church.

A Letter If He Insists.

They stated that they could not drop his name, but that he might obtain on formal request a letter of dismissal.

Dr. Clark replied that his request was made after six months' deliberation. He adds: "My individual opinion was expressed, as you say, by my vote of Dec. 20. This opinion seemed to me clearly in opposition to the great majority of the Presbyterian church and to the spirit of peace which I promised to abide by long ago." Dr. Clark also expresses pleasure at knowing that he may ask for a letter of dismissal. The committee was instructed to make another attempt to get him to reconsider his decision.

The Cleveland Presbytery Favors Peace.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 17.—The Cleveland Presbyterian union adopted a manifesto deprecating any effort to impose new tests of orthodoxy or to restrict the liberty hitherto enjoyed by men who have sincerely subscribed to the confession of faith. The union also expressed the belief that the interests of the church at large would be conserved by a cessation of ecclesiastical trials for heresy of men who sincerely profess their faith in Holy Scripture as the unerring rule of faith and practice and their entire loyalty to the gospel of Jesus Christ as the son of God. This manifesto has reference to the proposed appeal of the prosecution in the Briggs case.

Dunbar will be behind Johnston, 2:06¼, and Frank McGraw will drive Margaret M, 2:13. Every horse has a record of 2:20 or better, and it promises to be the most sensational race that has ever taken place on the snow. It will be for best three in five. As Justina has proven herself one of the fastest horses ever in Buffalo, it is the general opinion that she will win.

Report on the Coal Combine.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Messrs. Coombs and Patterson have practically completed their report to the senate committee on the investigation into the Reading anthracite coal combination. The report will show that the aim of the combination is to drive out independent coal operators and obtain a complete control of the anthracite coal industry, and is to sought to do this by fixing a high freight rate on coal, so as to make it profitable for individuals to turn in their product at the mines to the combination. The report will recommend the passage of the bill heretofore agreed upon by the committee, which will give the interstate commerce commission power to keep down freight rates. It was completed to recommend legislation for the divorce of the transportation and coal producing industries, but the two gentlemen found it impracticable by constitutional means to deal effectively with this matter, though of opinion that it is really the most efficacious remedy possible.

RAINY DAY DRESSES.

SENSIBLE ADVICE ON WOMAN'S WET WEATHER COSTUMES.

There Is No Reason, if a Woman Is Independent Enough, Why She Should Look Like a Fright Every Time She Goes Out in a Storm—Several Suggestions.

Some earnest student of human nature once said that the most melancholy sight in the world was to see a fat man with a bell on his neck trying to flirt with a girl in a fourth story window, but for real downright sadness a woman on a wet day distances all competitors. The average woman in a rainstorm is a sight to shudder at, for, however neat and pretty she may be on ordinary occasions, demoralization seems to set in as the rain begins to fall, and the result is a weird and awful appearance that would make a man cross the street to avoid meeting his own wife. Of course this all applies to the average everyday woman, who does not make a practice of taking a cab home when she feels the first warning scatter—a custom, by the way, which is getting to be unpleasantly common, though perhaps expensive, than struggling around trying to manage parcels, purse, umbrella and dress skirt.

Observe the average woman on a rainy day at the big bridge entrance, for instance, as she fumbles in her pocketbook for ticket or change, and if ye have keen perspere to shed them. Her hat is awry, but she knows it not. In one hand a portion of her dress skirt is hitched, while another portion has been gathering up the mud, as has the portion of one white lace trimmed skirt which, bedraggled and torn, flaps against her shoes, leaving them muddy and unsightly. Her right hand holds an umbrella as well as her skirt; her left fumbles in her pocketbook, while her other, as Sir Henry Bowie would say, endeavors to straighten her hair, fix a ribbon in her bang and do a few other things just as important. Her face is as red and hard looking and there is a wild glitter in her eye. When her lovely woman of to-night lodges that she was a female communist or a shoplifter, or that she was possessed of what in literary circles is known as "flow" But this woman is a respected member of society, a sketch member, a King's Daughter, the bond of a happy home and an admirer of Browning and Isben. But she doesn't look it a little bit

It is all owing to the attire which ordinarily same women persist in wearing on rainy days, making no distinction what ever between sunshiny, clear weather and that which is sloppy and "dismittionydamp, moist and uncomfortable." In these days when woman is "advancing" to such an extent that the tyrant man must needs step lively to keep pace with her it would be well if she would take a pause in debating such subjects as "How to Manage a Husband" and "The Final Extinction of Man," and earnestly discuss "Why Do Women Look Like Such Guys on a Rainy Day?" Then they would commence to realize where they were at in much shorter time than through a century of "talks" on vague and brief questions. There is no need for lovely women to make themselves look like a fright because she is going out in the rain, but neither is their any law, human or divine, which countenances her going about looking like a bedraggled hen.

Every woman should have in her wardrobe one or two "rainy day" gowns—that is, one or two dark light weight dresses that may outwork center uses, and that decently could be tucked over in the mud or in the laundress. Take the skirt of such a gown and denude it of all trimming, then shorten it with a liberal hand—as the fad is now—and if you have too much shears cutting away all that last foot of material that you so deeply, duckily, beautifully unduly about the streets are sloppy. It is much better to walk shroud in a gown that shows the tops of your shoes, if necessary, than to walk along blissfully unconscious, with dress skirt and petticoats hitched up to your knees on one side, while the other side trails ludicrously in the mire. You must wear a short, dark petticoat, under this black stockings and good stout boots.

Many women cannot wear overshoes, and if your pocketbook admits of a pair of boots made to order by a good maker for rainy weather use they will be found much more satisfactory and comfortable than the "rubbers" that so often are more bother than help. Now, if you are addicted to the muckintosh, you may wear one over this, as they are made up in very jaunty styles, but every woman knows how hot, heavy and perspiring rubber coats—even the lined rubber coats—are. Except in very violent rainstorms a short jacket which leaves the arms free will be more convenient. Women who affect stained glass effects as to costume and brown paper coiffures would do well to leave both at home on rainy days. Frouzy hair gets out of fashion and looks unkept and witchlike; "picture" hats get soaked; plumes wilt, and artistic neck garnitures droop in most unbecoming style under the influence of dampness. Braid your hair up snugly under a little English tourist hat or a sailor, either glazed or felt.

Wear a veil—not a cloud of gauze, but a sensible veil that will keep your hair in trim though the wind blows a hurricane. You can have a bit of white linen show at your neck if you wish or a trim mackintosh buttoned tightly across produces a neat effect. The short skirt idea may strike you as rather shocking at first, but try it and you will find it not half bad in wet weather. Indeed like this arrangement to keep trim and neat through the rain, and will never look like such a fright that her husband will stand down a side street to avoid greeting her. A bright looking woman has invented a sensible waterproof garment called the "duck's back waterproof," but every woman does not like those rubber garments, and for such why not adopt a home made rainy weather suit?—New York Herald.

A Fact That Will Not Down.

It is not in the least necessary to squeeze the breath out of one's body in order to look well. If a woman weighs 175 pounds it is the greatest mistake to attempt to dispose of the flesh. Pressed in at one portion of the body it is sure to protrude in another, and as long as it is there there is very little use to try to disguise it. A 26-inch waist with a 48-inch bust doesn't come within the range of good Dame Nature's idea of proportion. A well built waist, or what is substituted by many ladies, a corset with a part of the bones removed, may be made a very comfortable affair, but it should not be very tight. Indeed this is exactly where many women make a serious mistake. Don't do it, girls. If you are fat, the too solid flesh is useless, and you only make yourself absurd trying to lace it out of its natural position.—New York Ledger.

Jealous Wives.

The youngest woman who ever came out of the west and won fame in the east is probably Mrs. Eva Wilder McGlasson, who is still young enough to be thirty-five, and who has written a remarkable story.

How Toast Should Be Served.

An ideal piece of toast is crisp and golden throughout. Many say they prefer toast that is soft inside, and that they cannot eat hard, dry toast, but the ideal piece of toast is not really so hard as it seems. It breaks and crumbles very easily, and moistens very quickly in the mouth. If one would persevere with a slice he would soon learn to prefer it. At all events that which is soft inside should not be given to the sick. If they are ill they want the toast dry and thin moisten it, if needs be, by dipping the slices into hot water for an instant, not soaking them.

The toast should be served directly from the toaster. When this is not practical, pile is on a heated bread plate, cover it with a napkin and put it on the hearth or in the oven. It is given in all slight attacks of sickness because it is so easily digested. The more thorough the conversion of the starch the more easily and perfectly the system will manage it, for the change of starch into dextrin by the action of heat is simply doing outside of the body what takes place in it in the ordinary course of digestion by the action of the digestive fluids. Therefore when this is accomplished by artificial means nature is spared so much energy.

Toast thin slices of bread. Put into a shallow pan a pint of water, with half a teaspoon of salt. Dip each slice quickly into the water, place in a covered dish and spread with butter, piling one slice above another. Do not let the bread soak in the water—endeavor to keep a suggestion of brownness in it. Soft, spongy, sodden toast is not palatable. Serve hot with apple sauce, sweet baked apples or tart jelly. Water toast is really delicious if one is taken to have it hot. It can be eaten with relish much longer than milk toast.—Boston Globe.

Importance of Being on Time.

Few women realize the importance of promptness in the matter of keeping an engagement. Ten minutes more or less than a quarter is too trivial to be regarded, and when they say 10 o'clock 10:20 will answer just as well, they think, and would stack down a side street to avoid greeting her. A bright looking woman has invented a sensible waterproof garment called the "duck's back waterproof," but every woman does not like those rubber garments, and for such why not adopt a home made rainy weather suit?—New York Herald.

A Funeral Oration.

The free thinking males of a little French town had, in a rash moment, undertaken to deliver an oration at the funeral of a brother philosopher. This was more easily said than done. Our good males was no Demosthenes. When the solemn moment had arrived he uncovered his head, advanced to the open grave and pronounced the weighty words, "Brother Pochard, in the name of the law we bury you!"—Figaro.

Obeying Instructions.

Hostess—Will you have a piece of pie, Georgie?

Georgie—Yes'm, but please make it double size, because ma told me not to ask for two pieces.—Good News.

Sad.

I observed a locomotive in the railroad yards one day;
It was walking in the roundhouse, where the locomotives stay;
It was panting for the journey; it was oozed and fully manned,
And it had a boy the fireman was filling full of sand.

It appears that locomotives cannot always get a grip
On their tender iron pavement, 'cause the wheels are apt to slip;
And when they reach a slippery spot their tender they must shove
And to get a grip upon the rail they sprinkle it with sand.

It's about this way with travel along life's slippery track,
If your head be rather heavy and you're always sliding back,
So, if a common locomotive you completely understand,
You'll provide yourself in starting with a good supply of sand.

If your track is steep and hilly and you have a load to haul,
And if those who've gone before you have the rails quite slippery made,
If you're not the right materials of the upper tableland,
You'll find you'll have to do it with a liberal use of sand.

If you strike some frigid weather and discover to your cost
That you've liable to slip on a heavy coat of frost,
Then some prompt, decided action will be called into demand,
And you'll slip way to the bottom if you haven't any sand.

You can get to any station that is on life's schedule soon,
If there's fire beneath the boiler of ambition's strong machine,
And you'll reach the palace called Fluksberg at a rate of speed that's grand,
If for all the slippery places you've a good supply of sand.

Her Explanation.

During the recent celebration of the anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus each school in a Michigan city was trying to see which would have the prettiest decorations. The janitor of one of the schools, an old man, was directed to put up the flag, and as he couldn't see very well he was not very handy at the job. A little girl named Ethel saw this and stared at it in open mouthed astonishment, and when a little friend happened to come along Ethel asked what the flag was for.

"Why," said her friend, "Columbus is dead."—Exchange.

Thoughtful Son.

The Golden Rule reports the saying of a "colored brother" whose heart seems to be in the right place, although his manner of expressing himself is a little startling.

"Why don't you get married, Peter?" asked an acquaintance.

"Why, bress you," answered Peter, "I've got no time nowadays. I has to do fo' two, sah, an' if I don't bury her about as stacky as she don't git none. Now if I was to git married I'd hab to buy 'em fo' me, very likely. An' I'm sakin dem an alcohol's right out o' my ole meddler's nicut."—Youth's Companion.

A Natural Consequence.

Jonesy—So you are thinking of getting married?

Brine—Yes.

Jonesy—When is it going to occur?

Brine—Somerow.

Jonesy—Great Scott! Tomorrow? And you say you're only thinking about it?

Brine—That's what I say. You didn't suppose a man only ses day off from his wedding day wouldn't be thinking about it, did you?—Exchange.

Feats of Strength.

"I saw a woman carry an iron bar weighing 300 pounds a distance of seventy-five feet last night," said Hicks.

"Nothing strange about that," answered Dumbell. "I saw a fragile little woman stop a 2-ton horse car on Broadway this morning just by holding up her forefinger."—Harper's Bazar.

Must Do Something.

"I want a parlor suit with only one chair in it."

"What an idea!"

"Well, my daughter is twenty-seven and still unmarried. I'm getting desperate, that's all."—Detroit Tribune.

SLEIGHING PARTIES.

"STRAW RIDES" AND DANCING LAST EVENING.

Four Sled Loads Go to the Schring Homestead, One to Orange and Another to Westfield—Another to go to Elizabeth To-Night.

A large and gay party started from this city last evening in four big "box sleighs" for a straw ride to Schring's mills at Green Brook.

The party was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph, of Grandview avenue.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. G. Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Winkler, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Smalley, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Brokaw, Mr. and Mrs. Martin of Newark, Mr. and Mrs. S. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. D. King, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith, Miss Nettie Allison, Miss Gillette, Miss Fisher, Miss McNash, Miss Hall, Miss Van Winkle, and Messrs. H. N. Spencer, J. Smalley, A. Obits, A. Truss, G. De Mess, J. McLaughlin, C. McNab, W. Mc. Laughlin, G. W. Bird and W. Van Winkle.

The night was spent in treading the light fantastic about the smooth floor of the Watchung House, which is the name given to the old Schring homestead. The interior of the building has recently been altered and fitted throughout with electric lights. Basing logs in the old-fashioned fire places added to the cheerfulness of the occasion. Councilman Charles F. Schring made a genial host.

A jolly party of merrymakers of the city and borough drove to Orange Valley last night. Their destination was the home of Mr. Jacob Voehl, Jr., where they arrived late in the evening, nearly frozen, but in good spirits. Mr. Voehl was in readiness for them, having arranged two rooms for dancing, in which the guests, after getting thawed out, enjoyed themselves hugely. Later all partook of a bountiful repast, and started for home, arriving here about five o'clock this morning. The affair was arranged by Miss Della Voehl.

A number of young people of this city have arranged for a "straw ride" for to-night. The start will be made at eight o'clock from Second street, and their destination is Elizabeth, where at the hospitable home of Mrs. Van Nostrand the evening will be spent in dancing.

A party of sixteen went on a "straw ride" on the county road last night, from this city, as far as Elizabeth, and on the way home stopped at a friend's house in Westfield, where they spent the evening dancing and merrymaking.

STILL WINNING.

The Park Club Easily Defeats the Westfield A. C.

The Park Club bowling team of North Plainfield visited Westfield last evening and bowled the first game of a series of three with the Westfield A. C. team.

The alleys are built on a different plan from most of the bowling alleys and the North Plainfielders could not get used to them for the first half of the game, and at the end of the fifth frame the W. A. C. team was ten pins ahead. At the commencement of the sixth frame the Park C b bowlers knocked down nine pins in their old-time style, taking the lead and holding it to the end, winning by 140 pins.

The Park Club team has the honor of bowling the highest score made on the Westfields Club's alleys. The score:

The horse started to run away but was caught before he had gone far, by a policeman.

"If I Should Die."

If I should die to-night
And you should come to my cold corpse and say,
Weeping and heartsick o'er my lifeless clay—
"If I should die to-night,
And you should come in sorrow, grief and woe
And angels whisper in your ear and say,
"He's gone, you'll see him never more,"
I know what you would say.

If I should die to-night
And you should come to-morrow and kneel,
Clasping my hand so cold in yours and say,
"If I'd only known it was the last time,
And you should come in sighs and tears and then
Just stroke my forehead gently as in days gone by,
I know what you would say.

If I should die to-night
And you should come to-morrow with holy prayer,
Pray for the soul you claim to have had true,
If I should die to-night,
And you should come to-morrow all clothed in black,
And say, "Farewell dear brother,"
I know what you would say.

MR. MAXSON'S TALK.

A BRIGHT LECTURE TO TEACHERS ON "SAVING TIME."

He Approves of Teaching by Rote. The Studies Added to the Curriculum Call for a Close Economy of Time. Timely Advice to the Teachers of Our Public Schools.

There was a large attendance of teachers at the High School, Trenton, Monday afternoon, to listen to the address by Mr. Henry R. Maxson, principal of the Plainfield public schools, on "Saving Time." The address was a very plain, practical talk, and abounded in useful hints and suggestions. Mr. Maxson, among other things, said in substance:

Never have we as teachers needed to economize time so much as to-day. Constant additions are being made to the school curriculum, and these legislated studies call for close economy of time. The teacher must do the old studies and the new ones for the same number of hours. In regard to pedagogy, the principle of teaching by series is a very important one, that is impressing facts by strengthening them, as when so impressed they are more easily retained and recalled when needed. School work is a unit, and so treats of Geography as human relations rather than facts.

When you have arranged your work in series that order should always be maintained. The misconception of aim by cramming the child with secondary facts is calculated to work great harm. The old idea of a reading lesson, where the class took a line and read paragraphs alternately, with no attention from the teacher save when a word happened to be mispronounced, was merely a word calling exercise. There should be a closer connection between the manner of teaching the different grades, so that there may be no breaks between the higher and the lower. Thoroughness in all branches should be the aim. A person looking over a piece of writing done by a boy remarked several errors in spelling. "Oh," says the boy, "this ain't spellin'; this is composition." It is very desirable that teachers should keep in constant touch with their pupils. The work of the first years of a child's school life should be very largely devoted to training the perceptive faculties.

The first requisite is attention. If you would save time study to secure the attention of your class. Don't talk until you have complete attention, and stop when attention ceases. A very important feature is to have classes divided in sections. Train your pupils to pay attention to what you say. Say a thing but once and have them know what you say—train yourself in a clear and concise manner of speaking. Do not question in consecutive order, but at random, so that no one may be sure as to answer. Lastly, make the lessons so intensely interesting that the pupils cannot help giving you their attention. It is a waste of time to drive a child instead of drawing him on to take an interest in the lesson. We should work hard on the child to help him to work to the driving. Another essential is force of habit. What has been performed many times comes easily. What a meaning this for teachers. How difficult to eradicate bad habits.

What an immense amount of time can be saved by having no idle moments. Teachers should insist that all work is systematically and neatly arranged, and the child should be taught that nothing else will be tolerated. Many an act of omission or commission is largely a matter of habit, and not of willfulness. Children have been made stupid by repression. Don't repress the busy, active boys. Give them something to do that will claim their time and attention, and relieve you of their restlessness. The wise teacher will not repress, but guide and direct to the best results. The teacher who does not do this does not know her business. In the writing lesson an immense amount of time is lost by having no definite plan.

Time is wasted by the teacher sitting down instead of moving about correcting errors and suggesting improvement. Why is it our schools turn out so few excellent and rapid writers? Because the teacher has not work beyond the mere automatic adherence to form, and the filling of a page, or spending just so much time. If a boy writes slowly without regard to how the work is done. Teaching principles and not insisting that the principles taught be adhered to will not accomplish much. This painstaking in writing should run through all the lessons of the school. Those too frequent use paid the pupils becomes a fixed habit. Time is wasted in the manner of teaching children to read. At the end of the sixth school year the child will know how to read as well as he ever will without instruction in specific. Too much time is wasted in spelling. Too many words are learned that no use is ever found for. I would reduce the list of words to be learned to those in common use, that the pupils become familiar with them. Review systematically.

I would pay particular attention to the child's perception form, that the child may know the words by sight. In geography there is waste of time in manner and method. Too much study of dry definitions and not enough of maps, wars and customs and products. Teach from local surroundings the meaning of rivers, lakes, mountains, etc. The books are very often at fault, by using obscure terms. Read much and cover much in your reading that the habit of your pupils may be formed. There is a great waste in teaching arithmetic. It saves time to the teacher to give long examples, but does not save the pupil's time, and our aim is to save the pupil's time.

Teachers must be up and doing, so that no time be lost in planning, so that no time be lost in passing from one study to another. The whole work must be thoroughly planned and then the teacher must aim to plant her enthusiasm in the mind of the pupil, and impart instruction with the least expenditure of effort on the part of teacher and pupil.

THE ELECTRIC ROAD.

The Cranford Town Committee Blocks the Way.

The further progress of the Suburban Electric Railroad Company, which contemplates the construction of six electric railroads between Elizabeth and Plainfield was blocked last night by the Town Committee of Cranford, which met in the Town Hall.

The officers of the Garwood Machine Works and the Johnson Wagon Works, and a number of property holders who had signed to aid the petition for the road's franchise, asked that the Town Committee take no action on the motion until a subsequent meeting.

Hon. Foster M. Voorhees, counsel for the electric company, was present and assured the Town Committee that the road would be run by the corporation only which made the application and in the interests of no other parties.

Mr. William L. Force of this city attended the inauguration of Governor Werts at Trenton yesterday.

Mrs. T. H. May has returned to her home on Somerset street after spending two weeks with friends in Harlem, N. Y.

A few of the many friends of Miss Strenk were entertained at a musicale yesterday afternoon at her home on Richside avenue.

Ex-warden Charles Dodd of Elizabeth, has decided to return to this city. It is rumored that he will engage in the butcher business on North avenue, with a well-known Plainfielder as partner.

Badly Mixed Relationship.

The following mixedup family lived in Bridgeton. The relationship was brought out at a trial in the county courts last week. Mrs. Sarah Simpkins is the wife of her own son-in-law and the mother-in-law of her own husband and grandmother to the children of the husband. Joshua C. Simpkins is the husband of his step-daughter, and therefore the stepson-in-law of his own wife, he is a step brother-in-law of his own daughter and son and a stepgrandfather of his own children. He is, too, his own stepfather-in-law. Isabel Simpkins is a stepmother to her own sister, a stepdaughter of her husband and also her own stepmother. Her children should be the stepgrandchildren of the own husband, and that would make her the stepgrandmother of her own children. How about living in this crowd?

"The Beautiful Snow."

Written by a crusty old farmer for the Flemington Republican:

"O! the snow! the beautiful snow!"

Yes, just God pass the wood out from under it; go and shovel paths till your back aches, and your eyes see a dozen colors not recognized either in books or in the rainbow; go and tramp around in it till your boots are full and your trousers wet to the knees, trying to drive cattle with poor shelter, go and do what the average farmer has to do in the snow, and then, if you can still sing of its beauties, you ought to have a certificate as a first grade angel without further examination.

Freeholders Dine.

A banquet was tendered to the Road Committee of the Middlesex county Board of Freeholders at Taylor's Hotel, Dunellen, yesterday afternoon by Joseph H. Wilson, the contractor who constructed the road from Holly's Corner. Those who participated were Freeholders Tappen, Bishop, Vanderbilt, Fountain, Director Weiss, Lawyer Willis and Engineer Atkinson.

The Usage of Twenty Years.

At the bright age of twelve
Father learns to shave himself.
At fifteen he begins to think
He knows more than he ever thought.
And when forty years come
He finds more than he ever thought.
We know more than we thought.

Half a century, then,
Finds us nearly right.
At eighty, when we're feeble,
Though we need health there's much
We don't know quite as well
As when crowned with 40 years but a score.

Threatened to Shoot His Wife.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Horrible Scene at an Execution.

Glasgow, Jan. 18, (Special.)—A horrible scene occurred to-day at the execution of William McEwan for the murder of a woman at West Pollokshields. McEwan, after committing the crime, attempted to commit suicide by cutting his throat.

When he was brought out for execution this morning the mark of the self-inflicted wound could plainly be seen. The condemned man got a drop of seven feet. He walked without apparent fear to the gallows, and the rope was adjusted.

When the bolt was drawn an awful spectacle was witnessed, which caused even the experienced prison officials to turn pale. The man's head was nearly torn off, and blood gushed out over his body and the gallows. Death had been instantaneous. Much indignation is expressed against the authorities for not having taken precaution against such an occurrence.

Another Cold Wave Coming.

New York, Jan. 18, (Special.)—There is a rainstorm in the lower Mississippi Valley and a snowstorm over Michigan. Both are travelling towards New York. The forecast calls for a slightly rising temperature from now till to-morrow night, the cloudiness will increase, too, presently it will snow a little for a change, and by Friday morning another cold wave will be upon us.

A Terrible Accident.

Providence, Jan. 18, (Special.)—A sleighing party from Pawtucket returning from a dance and supper at Woonsocket at half-past one o'clock this morning, was struck by a locomotive of a freight train. Eight persons were instantly killed and sixteen injured.

Ovide Musin Sues for $35,000.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 18, (Special.)—Ovide Musin the violinist, who was injured in a wreck on the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad near Story City last Thursday, has brought suit against the Company for $35,000 damages.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW BRUNSWICK.

To be Connected by an Electric Railroad in the Near Future.

[From the New Brunswick Home News.]

The project of an electric road between this city, Bound Brook, Somerville and Plainfield seems to be steadily moving, although the scheme will not be originated entirely in this city.

The Bound Brook and Somerville projectors, who are interested in an electric road to connect those two places, will, it is expected, join with the New Brunswick capitalists to secure a good road from this city to Bound Brook. It is known that negotiations have been already made for the right of way over considerable property near Bound Brook, for the road to this city. It is believed that work on the Bound Brook road will be commenced in the spring.

Overtures have been made to the Plainfield Street Railway Company, asking them to extend their line to Bound Brook. If this is done there will then be communication between this city and Plainfield and Somerville, via Bound Brook.

A Home News reporter who rode on one of the handsome sleighs belonging to the Plainfield electric railway the other day found that the trolley system was being put to a severe test and proved itself to be already paying, and travel on the line is better every day. The cars are most comfortable and warm and the motor-man is most courteous and attentive to his duties. There have been no accidents to speak of, and the horses in the place very readily get accustomed to the vehicles.

"Picturesque Ireland."

To-morrow night, in T. A. B. Hall, on West Fourth street, the Rev. Charles J. Kelly of Jersey City, will lecture on "Picturesque Ireland." The lecture is to be given under the auspices of the T. A. B. Association of this city.

EDITORIAL NOTES

About Business Profits.

It is not often anything is written that will give comfort to the capitalist and his partner in iniquity, the railroad president whose salary is $50,000, but both these wicked individuals may get a large fragment of consolation from the argument of Mr. J. B. Mann in The Popular Science Monthly.

Are business profits too large? No, says Mr. Mann, they are not. He divides the factors of a successful business into four—capital, labor, skill and opportunity. By skill we understand him to mean the business ability necessary to seize on opportunity when it goes flying past a man. In case of ten boys, say, nine must be laborers and one an employer, for nature has so managed it that in every community the majority of men must be laborers. Under the present co-operative system all men would be both, but that Mr. Mann does not discuss.

The man who has business ability sees opportunity; the others do not. He invests capital to the extent of utilizing the opportunity. Capital and shrewdness hire the laborers and start a business. Profits accrue from it. Mr. Mann supposes that the money coming in from the industry is divided equally among the three partners—capital, shrewdness and labor. There can only be one capitalist and one man with business ability to, say, nine laborers, in the nature of things. Suppose the proceeds of the industry for a given time are thirty dollars. Let us divide it equally among labor, capital and business ability, which for short we may call gumption. Capital gets its ten dollars, gumption its ten dollars and labor its ten dollars. But there is one capitalist and one gumption, and they each receive ten dollars. If capital and gumption were united, then one person gets twenty dollars. There are nine laborers, and each laborer gets only a ninth of ten dollars, or a dollar and eleven cents.

But there is no business that pays the three factors in this proportion. As a matter of fact Mr. Mann declares that labor gets more than two-thirds of the income of most undertakings, while sometimes capital itself gets nothing at all and its owner no more than one of his own workingmen. Business cannot be conducted successfully where the margin of profit goes much below 5 per cent. That has been proved. When A. T. Stewart died he left thirty millions. Counting up the amount of his business transactions for forty years, it will be shown that his profits did not average more than 5 per cent. a year.

After Man, Who?

When the prehistoric gorilla was the highest form of animal doubtless he thought there could be nothing created higher than a gorilla. Was not his arm stronger than that of the lion or tiger? Could not his magnificent tush crack cocoanuts, which the lion could not? He could thrash anything in the shape of living creature, from a mosquito to an elephant. He was handsome, too, in his own opinion, the prehistoric gorilla. What creature had such fine fierce whiskers, such long, graceful toenails, such a glorious prognathous jaw?

That was when the gorilla thought a million years ago to doubt, for it is proved unmistakably that the gorilla of today can think. That is also what man thinks today. But may not man be as widely mistaken as his ancestor was? May there not yet develop by evolution a creature unlike man and as far superior to him as he is supposed to be to the gorilla? Evolution has hardly used up all the patterns in her workship. After man goes out may there not come in a gorgeous creature that is dazzlingly beautiful, that is never sick or lean or dirty or drunken, that is never selfish or bad mannered, and never spite? A creature that can make this earth what it might be today, only for the people in it—a paradise? Think seriously about it. Why not? At any rate we have the authority of a highly learned gentlemen that "a psychological differentiation may commence in continuation with the Darwinian morphological differentiation." Just so.

At last there is a prospect that some of the big trees of California may be saved. The secretary of the interior notifies all concerned that no more lands on which the sequoia gigantea grows shall be opened for settlement. The lands on which the few sequoias that remain are found will therefore become public parks. It was high time. We have exterminated the buffalo. The game warden of Colorado reports that the large game of that state is rapidly decreasing, and that the famous mountain trout has nearly disappeared. So it goes. By our greed and wanton foolishness we destroy the very things which give us most satisfaction. But if even a few of the big trees of California can be spared, there will still remain something to show foreigners what nature did for America in the first place.

All the world will be glad to know that at last Virginia has arranged for the final settlement of the state debt which has hung like a millstone upon her, crippling her resources for half a century. The commissioners of the Virginia sinking fund are now ready to receive "for verification, classification and exchange" the old state bonds held by creditors, wherever they may be.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

Sudden Death of the Ex-President at Fremont.

ONLY ILL SINCE SATURDAY LAST.

Neuralgia of the Heart the Immediate Cause—Events of an Active and Philanthropic Life—The Electoral Count of 1876—An Honorable War Record.

FREMONT, O., Jan. 18.—Ex-President R. B. Hayes died at 11 o'clock last night, but the information of his death was not learned for some time later, as everything was kept exceedingly quiet in the vicinity of the Hayes mansion. An early report that the patient's condition was improving and that he was resting easy allayed most suspicion, so that the sudden appearance of Webb Hayes with the announcement that his father had just died proved a shock to all. From Mr. Hayes it is learned that the condition of his father took a sudden change early in the evening and rapid dissolution followed. The members of the family have all along been exceedingly reticent regarding the condition of General Hayes.

His Last Illness.

Ex-President Hayes was brought here last Saturday suffering from an attack of rheumatism of the heart, with which he had been afflicted at Cleveland. It was the second attack of the kind he had received within two weeks, and although his condition was regarded as somewhat serious and excited the alarm of his family, the encouragement given them by Dr. Hilbest, the family physician, led them to believe that the patient would soon recover. For this reason all knowledge of the ex-president's illness was kept from the public. The fact that he was suffering from heart-trouble did not become known. While Dr. Hilbest remained almost constantly at the distinguished patient's bedside, no alarming symptoms appeared until last evening, when he became rapidly worse.

The sickness had been watched during the day and evening with much interest by the friends of the general, and as he generally the case many conflicting rumors were afloat, but an interview with Rutherford P. Hayes appeared to confirm the facts to the effect that his condition was practically unchanged. The members of the family passed the day quietly remaining at the family residence with the exception of Webb has remained with his father almost constantly, only leaving the house a short time during the day. Rutherford is associated with the Fremont Savings Bank and spent part of the morning at his place of business. In the afternoon he came down town, stopping at the telegraph office presumably to answer some of the many telegrams that are constantly pouring in upon them. During the afternoon Miss Lucy Elliott Keeler, a relative of Mrs. Hayes family, spent several hours with them.

The Life of Ex-President Hayes.

After his retirement from the White House March 4, 1881, ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes was heard of but seldom. Occasionally he attended a Grand Army reunion, and he was a prominent figure at the Columbian celebration and banquet in New York city Oct. 12-14, 1892. He was always present at the annual meetings of the board of trustees of the Peabody fund, of which all ex-presidents are members. But beyond these modest functions Mr. Hayes remained in absolute retirement at his home in Fremont, O., up to the time of his death. Mr. Hayes' career therefore one of the most interesting chapters in the political history of the United States.

He was born in Delaware, O., Oct. 4, 1822, his father having died in the preceding July. He was graduated with honor from Kenyon college, Ohio, in August, 1845, attended Harvard law school for a little over a year, and was admitted to the bar in 1845. In November, 1846, his health being somewhat impaired, he went to Texas for the winter, and after a period of unsettlement located in Cincinnati the next winter.

In civil cases his practice was not very large, but he won considerable reputation as a prosecutor in criminal cases and gained the friendship of such men as Salmon P. Chase, Thomas Ewing, Thomas Corwin, Moncure D. Conway and Stanley Matthews.

And here is found the first evidence of the greatest peculiarity of the man. During all the years he was in Cincinnati no one seems to have taken a deep interest in him, and when he became a subject of national inquiry Cincinnati could furnish no reminiscences of him. The general expression of the old citizen was, "Yes, he was city solicitor, and I knew him, but that's all." He was quiet, studious and rather reticent. He did not, says one who knew him, "talk about a matter and arrive at conclusions. When the company had talked for an hour he would suddenly break out with a statement, and that was his final judgment on the matter. If we had been asked to pick the future president out of all the young professionals of Cincinnati, no one of us would have named Mr. Hayes."

It may also be added that of all the stories told about the boyhood of great men and the prediction as to their future not one is told of the boy Hayes. He grew like a hardy apple of the far north, a genius or a russet, ripening with extreme deliberation.

His Marriage to Lucy Webb.

On Dec. 30, 1852, he married Miss Lucy Ware Webb, daughter of Dr. James Webb, a physician of high social standing in Cincinnati. Of their eight children four sons and one daughter reached maturity. Mrs. Hayes was noted for her devotion to sick and wounded soldiers during the war, and to temperance and public charities in peace. Her refusal to have wine served in the White House during her stay there gave her a world-wide fame, and for them active and efficient many testimonials of esteem both from Europe and America.

Under the first call for troops by President Lincoln Rutherford B. Hayes, of which Mr. Hayes was made captain, organized a company, and he was elected captain, and on the 7th of June following the governor of Ohio commissioned him major of the Twenty-third regiment Ohio infantry.

It is both amusing and instructive to go over the roll of this regiment and note how many future men were enrolled in it, under such modest titles as Colonels W.S. Rosecrans and James M. Comley, Lieutenant Colonel Stanley Matthews, Lieutenant William McKinley, and others. Here, too, we find evidence that though Major Hayes had been reticent in conversation he had acquired quite a reputation as a speaker, for it was largely on account of his ability as an orator in rousing popular patriotism that he received his commission.

At this late day, too, one can afford to smile at the wild confusion of the times—recruits pouring into Columbus ten times as fast as taste could be provided, the raw adjutant general "flying about like a distracted bird [see,]" says an eyewitness, vainly blaming Governor Dennison, who frankly confessed that he "did not know a field officer from a gruel marshal," and of hasty over all his military power to the suddenly created major general, George B. McClellan. Suffice it that Major Hayes' regiment got into West Virginia in July and did splendid service there.

His Military Career.

He was Judge advocate for a short time, was commissioned lieutenant colonel Oct. 24, 1861, and greatly distinguished himself at the battle of South Mountain, Oct. 14, 1862, where he was severely wounded. Soon after he became colonel of the regiment, and as such particularly distinguished himself in many movements and battles. He led a desperate charge on Cloyd mountain, and at the first battle of Winchester won the applause of the whole army. But it was at the second battle of Winchester, Sept. 19, 1864, that he won immortal honors.

There he led an assault across a morass, and his horse having mired he charged on foot, and though but forty or fifty men followed so close as to keep up with him this squad captured a battery which had been deemed impregnable. Again at Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek he performed prodigies of valor. His commission as brigadier general soon arrived, and on March 13, 1865, he was made brevet brigadier general "for gallant and distinguished services." In the meantime he had been elected to congress from a Cincinnati district.

It was on this occasion that he made his famous retort. A friend having written to him to come home in the fall of 1864 and canvass the district, he answered with a rather caustic refusal, ending with this sentence. "An officer fit for duty who at this crisis would abandon his post to electioneer for a seat in congress ought to be scalped."

He was re-elected in 1866, but his two terms in congress were uneventful. He voted with his party throughout, except on the currency resolutions on finance. In view of his subsequent prominence as a "prompt resumptionist," it is rather singular that these votes indicated an opposition to strong measures leading toward resumption.

In 1867 he was nominated by the Republicans for governor of Ohio and was elected. No election of that era excited more astonishment. The state had long been overwhelmingly Republican, the majorities ranging from 30,000 to 50,000 for some years, yet at the first election after the soldiers came home, with a phenomenally large vote, the highly honored general had less than 3,000 majority over Allen G. Thurman, and the legislature was carried by the Democrats. That body chose Judge Thurman for the United States senate.

General Hayes was re-elected in 1869, this time by over 7,000 majority. He had now become the exponent of advanced views on finance, and on the platform of prompt resumption he made his third campaign for governor in 1875, receiving about 5,500 majority after a campaign of almost unprecedented vigor on both sides. In the meantime he had run for congress in 1873 and been defeated by some 1,900 majority, and had in 1872 retired from public life and settled in Fremont, O. Soon after he came into possession of the large estate of his uncle, Sidna Birchard, which further confirmed him in his resolution to lead a private life, and he only yielded in 1875 to the most earnest solicitations of the Republicans.

As President of the United States.

His repeated success in Ohio indorsed the Republican administration in 1876 in the nominate him for the presidency after a deadlock between the two great forces in the party led respectively by Senator Roscoe Conkling and Speaker James G. Blaine.

When the election had taken place it seemed certain that of the 369 electoral votes 185 would be cast for Mr. Tilden, the Democratic candidate, being one less than a majority. The Republicans were confident in respect to whose election there were grave questions in dispute. In order to secure the election of Mr. Hayes all of these thirteen votes must be counted for him.

As the Republicans had a majority in the senate and the Democrats in the house, it was certain that the two branches of congress would not agree in the counting of the disputed votes.

To meet the emergency a proposition was made by the Democratic leaders to submit the entire question to an electoral commission composed of five senators, five representatives and five judges of the supreme court.

This commission, by a majority of one, decided that the disputed votes should all be counted for Mr. Hayes, giving him a majority of one vote, and he was duly elected.

In financial affairs his administration was an unqualified success. It was his good fortune to become president just at the time when panic and depression were giving way to "better times." Seven years of unexampled deficit in the crops of western Europe and equally unexampled good crops in the United States made the resumption of specie payments possible. The exported grain in one year of his administration exceeded the ten year average before the war, and one year's imports of gold were greater than all the previous gold imports since the administration of James K. Polk.

The exports of wheat alone for the ten years terminating with June, 1881 (only four months after President Hayes retired), exceeded all preceding wheat exports since the country was settled. Providence had indeed come to the aid of the secretary, and President Hayes and his able finance minister, John Sherman, had the nerve to seize the opportunity.

Mrs. Hayes died in Fremont in 1889. On the day or day before thousands of persons, many of them in the humbler walks of life, came from the surrounding country to pay the last tribute of respect to her who had been so universally beloved. From early morning until the hour set for the obsequies an unending stream of visitors poured in through the front door of the homestead to take a farewell look at the face of the benevolent but decided woman who had passed away.

The death of Mrs. Hayes was a sad blow to the ex-president. He, more than the average man, valued the advice and respected the judgment of his wife, but he accepted the fate which bereft him of the nobly resumed the even tenor of his life.

Mr. Hayes was a man of great benevolence, but he was so unostentatious in dispensing charity that few persons, except the beneficiaries, ever knew of his good deeds. His home on the outskirts of Fremont is known as Spiegel Grove, and here for many years there has been dispensed a hospitality which, while almost prodigal in its generosity, was never obtrusive or showy. Spiegel Grove was inherited from Mr. Hayes' wealthy uncle, Mr. Birchard, and was the typical home of a country gentleman.

There is a beautiful grove in the grounds, and the house is richly furnished, besides being supplied with one of the best civil war libraries in existence. The ex-president's daughter, Miss Fanny Hayes, presided over the affairs of the household after the death of her mother.

The last public act of ex-President Hayes was the delivery of the opening address of the national prison congress, of which he was president, at Washington in December last.

Mr. Hayes was president of the National Prison Reform association and of the Slater education fund for the negroes; was a member of the Peabody Education Fund and the Southern Society since 1867, of the military order of the Loyal League of the United States. The degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him by Kenyon college, Harvard university, Yale college and Johns Hopkins university.

Majorities Too Close in Colorado.

DENVER, Jan. 18.—The Colorado legislature is in a muddle over the appointment of clerks for the various committees. In the lower house the Republicans have a majority of one, but have lost their power because they would not give Member Funderberg the clerkship he claimed they had agreed to cancus. Funderberg and the Democratic-Populist combine will now make an attempt to oust the speaker and put one of their own men in his place. In the senate the Republicans have come up in arms and questions the right of the president pro tem. to appoint committees, and proposes to take the matter before the supreme court for a decision.

Both Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla

Catarrh, Kidney Complaint, Heart Failure, Liver Troubles.

"I think it my duty to voluntarily tell what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for myself and wife. Last spring my wife was in a very bad way with kidney complaint; felt and could hardly get around the house. She began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in one week she was improving. When she had taken three bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla she was cured of that dreadful disease. As for me, I was troubled with Catarrh, Heart Failure and Liver Complaint. Believed no longer that at night, nor get any rest through the day. As soon as I lay down, my heart would beat so hard that I would have to get up. I had very severe failure in the sides of my body, and I was all run down. I felt like a log of wood, and could do nothing at once. So you say I was cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla? Sounds from Hood's Sarsaparilla. I have improved rapidly and can eat and rest about as I used to. We praise

Miserable All the Time

I Could Not Sleep

NEWS AT WASHINGTON.

Congressional Matters Rather Inactive.

STREET RAILWAY POSTAL SERVICE

A St. Louis Innovation Which Will Work a Reformation in Towns That Have Electric Street Car Lines if Adopted by the Authorities.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The anticption bill, which has monopolized almost the whole time of the senate after the morning hour during the present session and which is expected to reach its final vote today, was debated yesterday for nearly three hours and went over without action. Sweeping denunciations of the measure were made by Senators Hoar, Vest and Platt as being in utter contravention of the constitution of the United States and in violation of the rights of the states.

The McGarrahan bill received its death blow in the senate, the affirmative vote falling eight short of the constitutional majority.

To Repeal the Silver Act.

A bill to repeal the silver bullion purchase provisions of the Sherman bill was reported from the committee on finance and went to the calendar.

The session of the house was an uninteresting one. Work was mapped out for the remainder of the week and for Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, but beyond this little was done.

A few private measures were passed, and the committee on the judiciary, having under a rule the right of way, called up some bills of secondary importance. The one of most public interest was that providing for the punishment of offenses by passengers on the high seas, which was passed.

A bill providing for a court of appeals in the District of Columbia went over without action.

Secretary of State and Mrs. John W. Foster gave a dinner party. The guests were Representative and Mrs. Hitt, Mr. and Mrs. Diaz Albertini, of Paris; Minister and Mme. Gutmans, Representative and Mrs. Bourke Cockran, ex-Speaker and Mrs. Reed and Mr. and Mrs. Lansing. Secretary and Mrs. Foster will leave Washington on the 27th inst. and will shortly thereafter go abroad.

The Woman's Suffrage Convention.

At the evening session of the National American Woman's Suffrage association papers were read by Mrs. Avery, of the women's council, and Mrs. Lockwood, of the board of lady managers, upon the work done by women at the World's fair; also by Miss Broderick upon the constitutional convention held in Kansas. Addresses were made by Mrs. Havens, of this city, and Rev. Annie Eastman, of New York. Much satisfaction is expressed over the present convention. Seventy five delegates from thirty-five states are here, including nine delegates from southern states. Last year Missouri was the only southern state represented.

To Improve Postal Facilities.

The postoffice department has received information that the two ships—the City of New York and the City of Paris—belonging to the Inman line, will be ready to make their first trips under the American flag about the middle of February. The postmaster general will designate the clerks who are to handle the ocean mail on route.

The report of Postmaster Harlow, of St. Louis, made after a two weeks' trial of his street railway postal car service, has been received at the postoffice department.

The St. Louis is a post route eighteen miles long, passes the shipping doors of the postoffice and has public stations located directly under it—the postoffice—at three blocks away and a number of postoffices upon the road beyond the city limits. During the two weeks covered by the report the number of pieces of local mail received and delivered at a saving of from four to five hours each has been from 800 to 850 daily. Postmaster Harlow regards the trial as eminently successful in every particular.

The National Board of Trade.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The national board of trade was called to order in the banquet hall of the Shoreham by its venerable president, Frederick Fraley, of Philadelphia, who has been president continuously since its organization twenty-five years ago. Dr. Fraley is now past ninety years of age. As he came in leaning on the arm of an attendant the delegates gave him a round of applause. Mr. Fraley's sense of sight is feeble, but otherwise his faculties are well preserved.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 18.—Samuel Monroe, aged sixty, was found dead in her room. The room was full of gas, and it is supposed she committed suicide by turning on the gas. Mrs. Monroe had been in poor circumstances for some time, but has persistently refused aid from persons charitably inclined.

The Homestead Trial.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 18.—At the trial of Hugh Dempsey Captain A. E. Hunt, chemist, testified that he found evidences of arsenic in the excrement of one of the dead Homesteaders.

READING, Pa., Jan. 18.—A week ago Benjamin Herber hung himself, and yesterday Mrs. Jacob Matthias, his daughter, who occupied the same room, committed suicide in a similar manner.

Sale of Government Property.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 18.—The old government property, corner of Fifth avenue and Smithfield street, was sold to Black & Baird for $400,000. The sale does not include the building.

Two Thousand Shots a Minute.

HARTFORD, Jan. 18.—Dr. Gatling claims to have a new electric gun which will discount all other rapid firing arms. The new gun will shoot 2,000 shots per minute.

Valliant Refuses Reading Overtures.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—George H. Valliant, second vice president of the Erie company, has declined an offer from the Reading management of $25,000 a year.

THE KANSAS LEGISLATURE.

All Efforts to Bring About a Compromise Fail.

TOPEKA, Jan. 18.—Once more have efforts to settle the difficulties in the house and bring about a satisfactory solution of the problems of legislation which are daily growing greater failed; and now the two factions are seemingly farther apart than ever. Whether there will be any further attempts made to bring about a settlement of the present complications in the house it is impossible to say, but the prospects are certainly not the brightest.

In the meantime the members are unable to draw any salaries, and as many of them, particularly the Populists, are not possessors of bank accounts, there is sure to be trouble with the landlords of the city before long. A legislative appropriation bill will soon be pushed through the senate and Populist house under suspension of the rules and sent to the governor for his signature. Anticipating this, the Republican lawyers are getting ready to bring it before the supreme court, which would bring the issue between the two houses squarely up for adjudication, and the more conservative Populists admit that its decision will bring one house or the other to a standstill.

THE LOUISIANA LOTTERY.

It Gets Valuable Concessions from the Government of Honduras.

TEGUCIGALPA, Jan. 18.—The Louisiana state lottery has been granted a charter from the republic of Honduras, and will remove its business to that country on the expiration of its present charter, which will be Jan. 1, 1894. The concession is a monopoly of the lottery business for the term of fifty years. The Honduranian government grants to the company the island of Guanaja, in the islands of the Bay of Honduras, which is to be used in such manner as the company may see fit for its purposes. The right to lay a cable line from the island of Guanaja or from any point on the coasts of Honduras to the United States, the Antilles or to Europe is conceded. There is also a concession for a steamship line from any ports on the Honduranian coasts to any part of the world. The Honduranian government, as a consideration for the granting of the charter, is to have the free use of the cable and of the steamship lines, and is to receive $1,000,000 in American gold coin and a graduated percentage of from 1 to 3 per cent. on the face value of all tickets sold by the company.

MR. BLAINE'S CONDITION.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—At 8:30 last evening everything appeared perfectly quiet at Mr. Blaine's residence. Dr. Johnston left the house at 9 p. m. He said the condition of Mr. Blaine was unchanged. His pulse, the physician said, was fairly good. Dr. Johnston will not return to the residence unless summoned by some unfavorable turn in the condition of the patient.

There was more than the usual number of lights burning in the Blaine mansion, which gave rise to reports that Mr. Blaine was not so well. These reports could not be confirmed or denied, as the mansion was closed for the night at 8 o'clock. The physician had not returned, which is evidence that no radical change for the worse had occurred.

$700,000 for the Albany Capitol.

ALBANY, Jan. 18.—The senate finance committee decided to report favorable the following bills: Senator Cogshall's, appropriating $65,000 for the Central New York Institution for Deaf Mutes; also appropriating $5,000 for the New York State Dairymen's association; Senator Cantor's, making the New York National school a state institution and appropriating $60,000 annually; Senator Plunkitt's, appropriating $18,000 annually for instruction at the American Museum of Natural History, New York city; Senator Parker's, appropriating $700,000 for work on the capitol, $75,000 at once and the rest April 10; Senator Erwin's, appropriating $5,000 for the St. Lawrence State hospital; Senator Emerson's, appropriating $25,000 for an armory at Glens Falls, and Senator Walker's, appropriating $5,000 for a fish hatchery at Cold Spring creek.

The Muncie Strike Gains.

MUNCIE, Ind., Jan. 18.—The Lake Erie and Western road switchmen's strike has so affected the steel and iron works that the last one banked its fires. The Thiel detective agency, of St. Louis, brought a carload of men today, but the strikers prevented them all from going to work. Superintendent Hill refuses to confer with the strikers or talk arbitration. If outsiders are put on here the entire system will go out, as all through trainmen refuse to do any switching here or haul cars handled by outsiders or officers.

Governor Werts Inaugurated.

TRENTON, Jan. 18.—Governor-elect George T. Werts took the oath of office in Taylor's Opera House, and was duly installed chief executive of the state. The inaugural ceremonies, as usual, were simple and occupied less than an hour. Governor Werts today appointed Judge Job H. Lippincott, of Hudson county, justice of the supreme court, to fill the vacancy caused by Werts' resignation to accept the governorship.

Worn Out Currency.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.—The United States treasurer's office is clogged with remittances of defaced and worn out small money from all over the country which was brought into use during the Christmas holidays and is now sent in for redemption.

Coal Famine Imminent.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.—New York and Brooklyn are consuming at least 20,000 tons of coal a day, and probably not more than half that quantity is coming in to replenish the stock.

TORTURED BY BOSSES.

Inhuman Treatment of Oyster Dredgers of Maryland.

SUMMER CLOTHING IN WINTER.

Not the First but a Repetition of Outrages That Have Heretofore Been Reported of the Inhuman Treatment of Laborers by Boat Captains.

EASTON, Jan. 18.—Notwithstanding the shipment to Baltimore by the county authorities of so many dredgers on Saturday last, there are now in the Easton jail forty-six more who have a night food and shelter. They arrive at all hours of the day and night. All tell the same tales of suffering and brutal treatment. The sheriff says that in no instance has he yet found upon them more than the thinnest clothing and not a complete pair of shoes.

The actual violence and inhuman beatings received by these helpless beings have aroused the people of the tidewater countries, and an effort will be made to have the captains punished.

A French subject, a native of Paris, worked on the Ercora, a Virginian vessel of Onancock, Accomac county. He shipped from New York city Oct. 20 last at fourteen dollars per month.

Put Ashore Without Food or Pay.

He was charged ten dollars for his trip from that city to Baltimore. The captain also charged him ten dollars for an oilskin suit. He worked on the boat from that date till Dec. 27 last, and was put ashore at Tilghman's island without pay or food. There is a cut three inches long on the back of his head, caused, he alleges, by a blow with a shovel by the captain. After being knocked down in like manner he was kicked in the face and on the body.

He avers that he was also beaten with a culling hammer by the captain whenever he was unable to turn the winders as fast as desired. He is an intelligent man, about thirty years of age.

James Crosby was put ashore at Tilghman's island in a helpless condition from brutal treatment and exposure, and reached here after dragging himself along in agony. He now has erysipelas in the face.

William Merchant, at Queen Anne county, a dredger for nine years past, met the fate of others, and after a walk arrived last night nearly frozen, penniless and half starved. He had icicles a foot long hanging from his whiskers.

Chancellor Sims Will Resign.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 18.—At a meeting of the trustees of Syracuse university Chancellor C. N. Sims, who has occupied the position of chancellor of the university for twelve years, presented a letter announcing his intention of retiring from the position at the close of the present collegiate year.

Firemen Freeze in Virginia.

RICHMOND, Jan. 18.—The cigarette factory of Allen & Ginter, a branch of the American Tobacco company, and Valentine's meat, adjoining, were destroyed by fire. Loss about $250,000; insured. Two firemen were badly frozen.

Agreed.

The Serenader.

Hexang beneath the window dark,
In a tenor voice intensely shrilly high,
In a tone that drove mad the watchdog's bark,
"Give me the girl with a bright black eye."

There arose before him a form immense;
There happened a thud and a sealeful swirl,
And he carried away, like a leaf from the fence,
A bright black eye, but nary a girl.

FACTS FOR THE HOME.

WHICH EVERY DUTIFUL HOUSEKEEPER WILL READ AND PROFIT THEREBY.

Our Homes Become More Beautiful and Comfortable—We Live Better and Happier Through Information Like the Following.

A hundred years back, it was customary for fussy people, old maids particularly, God bless them! to hang little bags at the head of their beds, and put away things they might want before morning. We have not seen anything of the kind for years, but now we discover that these bed pockets are being sold. They are arranged in fanciful shapes of brass, and hung by cords or ribbons from the head of the bedstead. That is a place for the pocket handkerchief, and a place for the watch. Likewise a place for the pocketbook and a sign to the burglar, "Step softly and don't disturb the sleeper." One can keep here his cough mixture or bottle of nightcaps and eye-openers. Some of these devices take the form of niches to hold holy water or saintly figures, for use in Roman Catholic countries. It's a big improvement over poking things under the pillow.—Philadelphia Upholsterer.

THE FRAGRANT ONION.

A Troublesome Vegetable That Suffers From Careless Cooking.

The art of frying an onion, so that it will be delicate and crisp, is not generally understood. The fried onions usually served in families where the cooking is left to very ill-instructed, and, are a brownish-black mass, so permeated with grease that they are neither wholesome to eat nor good to view; nor are they half cooked. There is but one way to fry this vegetable, which will give the right result—that is to cut it in slices, and soak it in milk for at least ten minutes. Then dip the slices in flour and immerse them in boiling fat, hot enough to brown instantly a bit of bread thrown in. You cannot keep the onion in the slices, so it is not worth while to try to do so. After they have fried for six or seven minutes they may be lifted up with a skimmer on to brown paper, and will be found firm and thoroughly delicious. Cooked in this way they may be served as a garnish to a delicately-broiled beefsteak, to a dish of fried chops or beef croquettes. There is no way of frying an onion in a pan, with a little butter, commonly recommended by cookbooks, which will produce a satisfactory result. The onion softens and absorbs the butter, because of the natural law of capillary attraction, and the result is that the onion and butter become a darkened and greasy mass.—N. Y. Tribune.

Economy is Wealth.

The economical housewife can, by chopping up the pieces of cold roast pork, putting the pieces in a bottle and pouring a little alcohol over them, get as good flavoring for the puddings as some could buy; and all cooks know, or should know, the value of every crumb of bread. Every scrap of cold vegetables may be used as salads or garnishes and every bone is valuable for stock, as well as every spoonful of gravy. Besides the delightful feeling that she is economizing in one of the most trying times the housekeeper has to endure. It

HOME EMBROIDERY.

Long and Short Stitch and Darned Background.

The cut admirably illustrates the effect which may be produced by outlining a design with fine cord, or soft, pliable, gold filling in the background with darning. Any simple floral design may be carried out in this manner. The original piece of work from which the little sketch has been taken, is a very beautiful design. The silk with which the chestnut blossoms are worked, one is of a very delicate shade of rose, whilst the green of the leaves has been carefully selected to harmonize well with the background thereof. The two shades of green silk, also blue, and the fringe of moss had small tassels of silk of the various colors used, finished the interior of the work. A very good fringe is a linen slipper bag might be made by ravelling out both the lower ends, and after sewing them together, fastening on the tassels, and perhaps it may be as well to suggest that the best effect would be obtained by embroidering the lower portion of the bag very with a narrow border at the top by way of a finish. The long and short stitch is by no means a difficult one to manage.

Prune Pie.

This pie is a great favorite with my family. Wash the prunes through several waters, then put into a preserving kettle in the proportion of one pound of fruit to one pound of sugar. Pour boiling water over them and let them boil at least two hours. When they are thoroughly done and the syrup thickens, take them from the fire and pour into pie plates lined with pastry and dot with a spoonful of butter. Cover with rich paste and bake.

Flowers Kept on Ice.

Ice is now used quite freely for the preservation of flowers, either for shipping or for keeping them for the table. In winter, and flowers so preserved cannot be distinguished even by an expert from freshly-gathered blooms.

Alcohol for Cleaning Glass.

Alcohol or benzine is a good thing to clean glass, and clean paper is better than dry cloth or even tow. Dry paper leaves no scratches to polish.

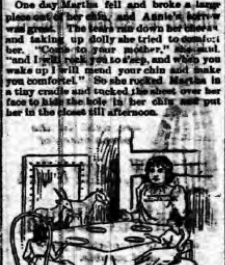
CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Annie's Unlucky Doll.

Little Annie was a very good mother to all her dolls, but not one of them did she think as much of as poor, unfortunate Mar'tha, who had passed through many trials and was sorely afflicted. She once had beautiful black eyes and long, golden curls, and could cry, and because she was so pretty Annie delighted to take care of her. She took a bobbin doll, but Annie was a little tired of her, and often either doll had been naughty the old doll was sure to get whipped more than she deserved.

One day Martha fell and broke a large piece out of her chin, and Annie's nurse said gravely, "The doll will die from that." So she rocked Martha in a tiny cradle and tucked the sheet over her face to hide the hole in her chin and put her in the closet till afternoon.



Then when Annie's tired mother bade she was brought out and the dreadful wound looked dead, but was not quite so much ill. So Annie went to work to mend it, and it actually grew over the skin and soon made her look as good as new. Annie jumped up and down with delight and took Molly in her arms and said she was not afraid of her, and she could not get cold through that hole in her chin any longer.

One day Annie had a tea party for her dolls. She had a table, with pretty toy dishes and tea things, a tablecloth, napkin rings at each plate, and chairs for the guests. And who do you think the guests were?

On presidents of the little table was a grown up rabbit, on which was standing in front of a wooden soldier, on each side of which was a wooden cat, a monkey and an old woman doll. On the next side was the "darling love of a doll" the Annie called her, with the needed chair. On the third side was the unhappy doll who got all the whipping, and on the next side was Mother Annie, nibbling the hole in the favorite's chin who was stopped up; for it would have been a beautiful place to poke in bread and cake, and the world seem so much like eating. Annie did all the eating also, and just as she was finishing the last mouthful of cake Mother happened to fumble up the chair. The new excitement made her head very weak, and it would keep turning round and round, so that nevertheless her eyes were toward her back and she would look very funny

A Lady Just Among Flowers.

The queen of Holland on her husband's last birthday presented him with an enormous bouquet of flowers, of the kind most in bloom at the time. The queen is in Italy, so heavy that it required several serving men to carry it. As it was brought close to the throne the king stooped forward to enjoy the fragrance of the flowers, the head of his little daughter popped out, to the surprise and amusement of the monarch and the whole court.—London Tit-Bits.

Why Lootie Was Punished.

Aunt Jessie was taking little Lootie to visit Aunt Hattie at a small place called Yonk. In the confusion of approaching each station Lootie did not notice the brakeman calling out the names, but just before reaching their destination the door opened and "Yonk" was shouted out, whereupon Lootie whispered to Aunt Jessie, "How did he know we were going there, auntie?"—Exchange.

A Morning Statement.

I like to dress, and I like to sew,
And I like to water the flowers,
I like to sing, and I like to hoe,
But, oh, how I hate to wash dishes!

I wish a dish had never been made!
But what's the good of wishing?
Mamma is calling, and I'm afraid
I won't do those dishes!
—Youth's Companion.

A Happy Family.

As Central park, in New York city, may be seen a happy family, the like of which, possibly, cannot be met anywhere else in the world. It consists of a white mouse, a young hound and the shrewd and most ancient looking of tortoises. Tortoises, however, are not so old as they appear. When grown to their full size they will weigh hundreds of pounds apiece and be quite able to carry men upon their backs. The tortoises are of a species lately brought from the Galapagos islands several years ago to the Natural History museum at Washington.

Although rather clumsy pets, the creatures are entirely harmless. The little saucy hares that share quarters with them at Central park play around, about and all over them in every way, so many guest rowlders, which indeed they somewhat resemble.—St. Nicholas.

OF THE AMERICAN LEAGUE OF AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS.

To Meet in this City To-night, as Guests of the Plainfield Camera Club—A Business Meeting to be Followed by a Banquet.

It is the custom of the New Jersey Division of the American League of Amateur Photographers to meet once a month with the different Camera Clubs throughout the State.

Following out this idea the division will meet in this city to-night as guests of the Plainfield Camera Club.

The members will reach this city by a special train from Newark. They will be met at the depot by members of the local club and escorted to the Republican Association rooms, on East Front street, where a business meeting will be held, after which all will adjourn to the Camera Club rooms on the opposite side of the street, where a collation will be spread.

The banquet will be in charge of the Entertainment Committee—Messrs. F. E. Stevens, H. H. Coward and J. Meeks.

BREVITIES.

—A sleighing party of about twenty Plainfielders visited Bound Brook last night.

—To-day has been the warmest in two weeks. The thermometer reached at noon was thirty-two degrees above zero.

—All friends of the Y. M. C. A., ladies as well as gentlemen, are invited to attend the twenty-fifth anniversary in the Crescent Avenue Church this evening.

—The cases of Ritter and Krausse, the North Plainfield parties who were indicted for stealing poultry, were put off until the April term of the Somerset county courts.

—At the meeting of the North Plainfield firemen Tuesday the plan of holding a fair to secure funds to furnish their parlors was discussed. Messrs. G. H. Fairchild, H. G. Adams, D. C. Allen, T. McCann, J. J. Stahl and C. Lippincott were appointed a committee to arrange the matter.

CORRESPONDENCE.

The Wonderful Experience of a Plainfield Sea Captain.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS.—Of late the public has been interested in the remarkable escape of Mr. Spencer Sprague and her deliverance from imminent peril in answer to prayer offered by Mr. Moody and Gen. Howard. As usual Col. Ingersoll is on deck again, and his voice is heard. He endeavors to throw discredit upon the Providential escape of the "Spragues" by quoting the subsequent case of the steamer "Roodland." It is alleged that on the latter instead of praying the passengers played cards in the saloon for amusement. It is claimed that the circumstances differ, therefore. Hence the inference that whether "poker or prayer" neither is effectual for or against. But hard experience has taught the writer that man at sea, in circumstances of great peril, do not play poker nor anything else in their leisure hours. Col. Ingersoll would do, simply because he could not; nor could any other seaman. The story is its own refutation.

By the request of a friend the writer has consented to give an experience which in some respects is more remarkable than Mr. Moody's most strongly corroborative story.

In 1875, while in command of the American ship "Priestfield," of Boston, bound from Marseilles, Bolivia, via Valparaiso to Hamburg, deeply laden with guano, a succession of heavy gales, mostly from southwest, had driven us out of our course, so that on July 24 we were on a lee shore, a little west of Cape Horn. The bar was low, 22.28 in. The journal is quoted from. "Various gales from S. S. E. and S. W. with squalls of snow and hail; mountainous seas running from South, ship lying lee side under water, having shifted the cargo during the heavy lurching. Weather very cold. Ship making a drift dead on Tower Rocks, but impossible to "wear ship" from the fury of the gale and the awful sea." (Journal, July 3, 1875.) At last p. m. the writer went below to look at the chart. His wife and two little children were there. It was judged that in a few hours the ship would be on the rocks. He and his wife knelt in prayer. It was no "black, bottomless eye-society" that they in that awful hour looked up into, but the face of an Intelligent Father, the God of our Lord Jesus Christ. We asked Him in simple language to help us. It was the cry of human weakness and extremity. It did not appear how we were to be helped. Zero seemed closed. We were shut up to God only. The writer then went on deck and told the Mate to get ready to "wear ship." However aboard the Mate may have thought the order, he obeyed and warned every man to be ready for the word. All had been done that could be done by human hands, and that was not much. The scene was awful. We stood waiting. Very soon after the breeze, which had been trailing overboard, were ready. The gale subsided. At last Boreas, Titan came comparitively smooth. We "wore ship" as quickly as possible without shipping a heavy sea, coming up handsomely to the wind on the port tack, heading S. W., so that the ship drifted along the shore instead of on it. We were not. "No sooner were we 'round and the weather braces hauled taut than the gale recommenced its former fury the seas rolling at great heights with short intermission." (Journal.)

Those who do not let the agnostic make of them what he can. A remark or two may not be out of place. Where the human element ends and the Divine intervention begins may be difficult to determine. But it appears certain that if we had not been ready and waiting to "wear ship" when the gale began to abate for a short time only, the ship would have been lost. Again, why was the writer led to use any means at all in the face of such impossibilities unless the means themselves were a part of a Divine whole? Even the most enlightened scientist in the "forces" about him are mysterious in their operations, and it becomes us to be modest and humble in their presence. M.

Not the "Land Improvement Co.," But the "Plainfield Improvement Co."

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS.—Will you kindly correct the false statement which is going the rounds of the press to the effect that the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company's charter has been forfeited? The fact is there is not a shadow of foundation in fact for the report. A list of the corporations whose charters have been declared forfeited may be seen at my office. Of course, to those familiar with the Company's standing, no refutation is necessary. The only reason for referring to the matter at all is that many small property owners have purchased properties from the Company and may be made apprehensive if the report remains uncontradicted.

CORNELIUS KUYK.

Judge Lippincott Promoted.

Judge Job H. Lippincott, who sent the Hudson county ballot box stuffers to prison, was nominated yesterday, at Trenton, by Gov. Werts as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. The Senate at once confirmed the appointment, and took similar action on the nomination of Robert S. Hudspeth as Law Judge of Hudson. Then Lippincott succeeds the Governor himself on the bench, and Hudspeth takes the place made vacant by Lippincott. The latter was formerly United States District Attorney, to which office he was appointed by President Cleveland in 1886. He has been a member of the New Jersey bar for twenty-five years.

GARWOOD GROWING.

THE NEW MANUFACTURING TOWN IN THIS COUNTY.

One Factory Erected and Another Under Way—Due to the Enterprise of a Plainfielder—One Man Has a Contract for the Erection of Eighty-Five Houses.

A new town has sprung up in Union county through the enterprise of a popular Plainfield gentleman, Major J. D. Paul of East Fifth street. It is named Garwood, and is located between Westfield and Cranford.

Mr. Paul, as president of the American Steel Wheel Company, of Boston, Mass., some months ago purchased three hundred acres at the place referred to, giving it the name Garwood, in honor of the treasurer of the company.

The contract for a large factory was given out last July by their company and the building has just been completed, at a cost of about $100,000. It is built principally of brick and is a model of neatness.

The wheels made by this company, which are of solid steel, manufactured by a new process, have been adopted by the Reading system, the elevated roads of New York, and a number of other railroads throughout the country, and find a ready market as rapidly as they can be turned out.

The Hall Signal Company also purchased a tract of land adjoining the Steel Company's land, and will expend about $60,000 for their plant, which is now being erected.

Both concerns will give employment to about 500 persons, and be a valuable addition to the industries of Union county.

The Pond Machine Tool Co. of this city are supplying some of the machinery to be used.

The company have reserved twenty-five acres for another manufacturing company, which will come along later, and help increase the importance of Garwood as a manufacturing town.

The Steel Company's works will have a capacity of fifty wheels per day, besides making other steel castings for railroads.

A building to be used as a grocery store has been erected and the work of erecting houses has been pushed vigorously up to the commencement of the present cold weather.

Mr. Wilcox of Westfield has a contract for the erection of eighty-five houses.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Neither Gleason or Sanford.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 18, (Special.)—Justice Bartlett, in the Supreme Court, Brooklyn, this morning, handed down a long decision, in which he denied the application of Horatio S. Sanford for a writ of mandamus to compel Patrick J. Gleason to hand over to Sanford the books and papers and the office of Mayor of Long Island City.

In his decision, Justice Bartlett says that Mr. Gleason is not the Mayor of Long Island City by reason of holding over after the expiration of his term, nor can he be regarded as Mayor by reason of the certificate issued to him by City Clerk Burke, upon election returns which were manifestly incorrect, as proven in the case of the people ex. rel. Sanford against Burke.

"On the other hand," the Justice says, "I am not satisfied that Mr. Sanford has become legally qualified to act as Mayor.

As City Clerk Burke has absconded and as there is a question as to the legality of Mr. Gleason holding the office, Michael F. Cleven, President of the Board of Aldermen, is designated by Justice Bartlett to act as Mayor pending a final settlement of the dispute.

A NEGRO'S COLD RIDE.

From Elizabeth to Philadelphia on a Cowcatcher.

William Hill, a colored man, rode from Elizabeth to Philadelphia on the cowcatcher of a Pennsylvania Railroad express train Tuesday night.

He is now thawing out in the Pennsylvania Hospital. He left on a coal, with his ears and forehead swathed in bandages, and told the story of his wild ride. He said he got on the engine at Elizabeth while it was rapidly moving.

"I was out of a job and I wanted to get to Philadelphia to look for work, and I jes' braced me feet on de bars of de cowcatcher and wrapped de blanket what de fireman gib me round me head and body, and jes' let 'er go. Was it cold? Well, I didn't know which was me and Mahlsberry, and de snow, it was whole outfit on—two undercoats, three shirts, two undershirts, one pair of overalls, two pair of trousers, a coat and vest, and a vest. Say, I'se use to ridin' on cowcatchers an' trucks, an' I'se done a heap of free ridin' but I'se got no such ride as dat on a cowcatcher through a Jersey blizzard.

"How, de wind, de wind went clean through me, and blew me up agin de pilot so tight that I couldn't or fell off if I was dead.

"When we got to Trenton me face was as smooth as if I'd had a clean shave. My head jes' kinder got whistled still, and I don't 'low I'll ever be cold as a nigger."

Hill would not attempt to work at Trenton for de frolicks, but I was so still I couldn't walk, so I jes' light on de pilot an' when I got here I felt as if I'd been sleepin' in an ice house for a week."

After he arrived there Hill managed to get to the Pennsylvania Hospital, and it was found that his ears, nose, forehead, hands and feet were frost bitten.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Gold Cure for Drunkenness.

"Does bichloride of gold cure drunkenness?" asks Mr. Henry Wood in The Arena. He asks the question in order that he may answer it himself. He produces on one hand the positive, united testimony of a number of the most prominent members of the medical profession in the world that no drug known to the faculty will cure either the alcohol, opium or chloral habit or any other kind of a drug using habit or appetite. Then, on the other hand, Mr. Wood marshals the army of ex-drunkards that are claimed to owe absolute reformation and [illegible] the gold cure. It is asserted for the gold cure that no less than 10,000 reformed drunkards stand today as evidence of its merits. From the best obtainable statistics only 5 per cent. of those treated by the Keeley method relapse. Mr. Wood tells us. The Chicago Bichloride of Gold club now numbers 400 members. Of these only six are said to have fallen into their former habits. The evidence seems to show in face of the positive statements of the doctors that it cannot be done that the gold cure certainly does reform a large number of the patients that take it. How does it happen?

Mr. Wood thinks it is a case of a sort of mind cure by perhaps unconscious cerebration. A great number of men are brought together best on the same idea—getting rid of the alcohol fetich. Contrary to the custom of inebriate asylums, they are put under no restraint, but allowed to come and go at will. The surroundings are agreeable. A powerful impression is made on the mind. The French professors of the school of Nancy cure drunkenness by hypnotism as effectually as Dr. Keeley is believed by many to cure it by his drug. Mr. Wood thinks the bichloride of gold is the fetich, so to speak, to which the attention of the patient is attracted while the beneficent unconscious psychological process goes on in his mind. The hypodermic injection of the drug takes the place of the bright disk on which the hypnotic subject is told to fix his attention. Mr. Wood's idea is ingenious anyhow.

A Beautiful Old Age.

A little time ago there died at Putnam, Conn., Mrs. Diana Dounty, aged almost 103. Other people have lived nearly or quite to her age in these closing years of the Nineteenth century often enough to indicate that the average of human life is lengthening as mankind grow cleanlier and kindlier

But the one fact that is remarkable in connection with this venerable woman is that she kept all her faculties unimpaired up to the time of her death. It was not, then disease that took her off. She seemed simply to go when her time came "as quietly and serenely as a flower closes its petals at the close of day." So every human life should close painlessly and without the decay of any of the mental powers. So it will close when mankind are fully civilized.

Mrs Dounty had remarkable physical health to begin She had never been ill until a year ago, when she had the grip. This physical constitution might have given her the great longevity. But there was another cause which kept her young as the years went by She was a woman of bright, cheerful disposition Her temper was very gentle and calm. An atmosphere of contest and good will emanated from her and drew toward her the kindly feeling of everybody who knew her She was helpful to all and beloved by all. The pure life means passion the shriveling society that burn away the souls of so many men and women seem to have had no hold upon Diana Dounty

The state that will hold the balance of power in 1893 is most likely Texas. This state has in her own borders every climate, shading off from north temperate to tropical. Its agricultural products of every other state can be grown in Texas, from wheat to bananas. Texas has fifty-seven counties that are each larger than Rhode Island. Her area is as great as that of all New England with New York New Jersey. Pennsylvania. Indiana and Ohio added. She has besides a long sweep of seaboard with cities and harbors to a hundred years all this vast region will be fully settled. Think of the congressmen that Texas will furnish then!

Let us think of our mobs, riots and lynchings and hang our heads. There is one thing the people of localities where such crimes against law and order are committed should fully understand. A region where mob instead of law reigns cannot become prosperous. The decent people who build railroads, churches and school houses and by their industry add to the prosperity of a community will shun the mob infested regions as they would a cholera hospital as a place of residence. Electric lights, waterworks, colleges and throngs of well to do, intelligent people will never be found in the same atmosphere with lynch law and moonshine whisky

If Columbus never realized what a great man he was before, he could find it out now if his spook were permitted to revisit the new continent and see his portrait in the midst of trailing red, white and blue, sailed up alongside those of Cleveland and Harrison through out the length and breadth of the greatest republic the sun ever shone upon

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD.

The Funeral of Ex-President Hayes Will Occur Friday.

HE WILL REST BESIDE HIS WIFE.

Distinguished Honors at Washington—The President Issues a Proclamation and Both Houses of Congress Adjourn—Messages of Condolence.

FREMONT, O., Jan. 18.—Nothing can be secured concerning the deathbed scene of ex-President Hayes. The family are closely guarded in their conversation and will not talk concerning it. The mansion has been kept very quiet, the members only occasionally coming down town and remaining but a short time. Birchard Hayes and family arrived on the early morning train from Toledo, while Scott came from Cincinnati. Telegrams of condolence still pour in upon the family from the high and low, prominent people of the United States.

The entire city is in mourning and flags are at half mast, testifying to the regard in which the ex-president was held.

The arrangements for the funeral have been placed temporarily in the hands of Colonel H. S. Buckland, of this city. The funeral services will be very simple at the mansion on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. They will be similar in nature to those on the occasion of the funeral of Mrs. Hayes. Rev. J. N. Beahford, president of the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware, will conduct the services, and it is probable that the local Grand Army will take part.

A large number of letters are pouring in upon the members of the Hayes family. Among them are messages of condolence from the president, Secretary Foster, the living members of the Hayes cabinet and the state officers of Ohio

The living members of the Hayes cabinet who sent messages are William M. Evarts, John Sherman, Alexander Ramsey, Nathan Goff, B. W. Thompson, D. M. Key and Carl Schurz.

A Distinguished Regiment.

A score of members of Grand Hayes' regiment—the Twenty-third Ohio—who live in Cleveland will be present at the funeral Friday. One company of the regiment was recruited in that city, and James P. McIlrath was the first captain. The Twenty-third was mustered into service on June 11, 1861, with W. S. Rosecrans as colonel; Stanley Matthews, lieutenant colonel, and Rutherford B. Hayes, major.

Colonel Rosecrans was made a brigadier general before they left camp, and E. P. Scammon, of Cincinnati, was made colonel. Later Matthews was made colonel of a new regiment and Hayes lieutenant colonel of the Twenty-third. In 1862 he was appointed colonel. He acted as brigade and division commander in 1863 and 1864 for years, and in 1865 he was made a general. The members of the regiment always held him in high esteem, and his death comes to them as a great loss.

From the President and President-elect.

President Benjamin Harrison wired the following:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18.

Webb C. Hayes:

Your favorable telegram of last evening left me unprepared for the sad news of your father's death, which came to me this morning. I very much regret that I cannot be present to show my high respect and personal affection for him and my profound sympathy with his family by attending the funeral.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Grover Cleveland also sent a message from Lakewood, N. J., as follows;

Webb C. Hayes:

I desire to express my heartfelt sympathy with you and those who united with you in the household made desolate by the death of your beloved and honored father.

—GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Ohio Legislature.

COLUMBUS, Jan. 19.—Immediately upon the assembling of the legislature Governor McKinley sent the following special message on the death of ex-President Hayes:

"It is my painful duty to announce the death at 9 p. m. last night at Fremont of Rutherford B. Hayes, who was a representative in congress, three times governor of his native state and president of the United States. He was also a soldier of exceptional distinction in the late war and during his retirement to private life occupied his time in good works and general benefactions. His death is an event of great public sorrow.

"Out of respect for the memory of the great citizen, soldier and statesman, I recommend that appropriate action be taken by the general assembly. The executive will be pleased to co-operate with you in a suitable expression of the sorrow of the people of Ohio over this sad event."

A joint resolution was adopted by a standing vote, providing for the appointment of a committee to take suitable action for attending the funeral.

By action of the legislature and state officers the statehouse is to be draped, and arrangements were concluded to secure transportation for these officials to the funeral. State troops, if desirable by the family, will be ordered out to participate in the obsequies.

His Address to His Neighbors.

It was well known that General Hayes did not favor life senatorships for ex-presidents. On retiring from public life and returning to his home President Hayes was welcomed at Fremont in the heartiest way. In his speech to the assemblage he said:

"This hearty welcome to my home is, I assure you, very gratifying. During the past five years I have been absent from it in the public service. My family and I have none but the friendliest words and sentiments for the cities of our late official residence, Columbus and Washington, but with local attachments perhaps unusually strong, it is quite safe to say that never for one moment have any of us wavered in our cherished purpose to return and make our permanent residence in the pleasant old place in Spiegel Grove in the good old town of Fremont."

The question is often heard, What is to become of the man who, having been chief magistrate of the republic, retires at the end of his official term to private life? It seems to me the reply is near at hand and sufficient. Let him, like any other good American citizen, be willing and prompt to bear his part in the very useful work that will promote the welfare and the happiness of his family, his town, his state and his country. With this disposition he will find work enough to do, and that work of work that yields more individual contentment and gratification than belong to the more conspicuous employment of the life from which he has retired."

Mr. Cleveland Will Attend the Funeral.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 19.—At a late hour Mr. Cleveland decided to attend the funeral of ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes at Fremont, O., on Friday. Although he had received no formal invitation to the funeral he telegraphed Private Secretary O'Brien, who was in New York, to secure a compartment on the western express leaving the Grand Central depot in New York at 10:30 this morning, and also to make the necessary preparations for the journey. Mr. Cleveland said he was well acquainted with the late ex-president and had often met him. Mr. Cleveland has sent a bouquet of rosebuds to the Hayes family. Mr. Harper, the coachman on Cleveland's piazza, as he will be forced to be away from home until Sunday night or possibly Monday morning.

The Executive Order.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—A special meeting of the cabinet was held, at which the following executive order was adopted:

To the People of the United States:

The death of Rutherford B. Hayes, who was president of the United States from March 4, 1877, to March 4, 1881, at his home in Fremont, O., at 9 p. m. today, is an event the announcement of which will be received with general and very sincere sorrow. His public service extended over many years and over a wide range of duties, civil and military. As citizen, a lover of the flag and of our free institutions, as soldier and conscientious civil officer, as governor of his native state, as president and statesman, a sympathetic and helpful neighbor and friend, a supporter and leader in Christian work. He has steadily grown in the public esteem, and the impartial historian will find few records of a life more worthy of study and emulation, a career more distinctly that of an honest man and a good citizen, a character more symmetrical and admirable, or a life more fruitful in the best results.

In token of the nation's sorrow, it is ordered that the executive mansion and the several executive departments at Washington shall be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days, and that all flags on the forts and other public places in the country be displayed at half staff for a period of thirty days. And in order that the funeral of the honored dead may take place with the military honors befitting his high station and character, it is ordered that suitable military and naval forces under the orders of the commanding officer of the military district of Washington, and a detachment from the marine corps, be detailed to attend the funeral.

—BENJAMIN HARRISON.

The president stated that his regret that he would not be able to attend the funeral in person, but expressed a wish that he should be represented by some of his official associates. It was thereupon determined that Secretary Foster, Secretary Elkins, Secretary Noble, Secretary Rusk and Postmaster General Wanamaker should proceed to Fremont as the representatives of the president.

THE PANAMA RAILROAD

Gets Into Trouble by Terminating Its Contract.

ANOTHER NAVIGATION COMPANY.

General John Newton Says the Courts Cannot Interfere with the Acts of the Company, as It Is Doing All Its Business Strictly According to Law.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—General John Newton, president of the Panama Railroad company, was interviewed concerning the new contract entered into between that company and the North American Navigation company for an exchange of freight business. General Newton said:

"Our present contract with the Pacific Mail company terminates on Feb. 1 of this year. The only legal obstruction to our new contract is the decree of the judge in the recent injunction suit, and that decree is not a bar to our present business, for it merely prohibits any interference with the rights of the Pacific Mail in the section of the Pacific coast lying between Panama and the boundary of Mexico. Business on that part of the coast has been excluded, of course, in express terms by the agreement we made with the North American Navigation company.

"Our agreement with them is for the direct trade between New York and San Francisco. We have also with the North American Navigation company with run between Panama and San Francisco, and may touch at other points on the Pacific coast if necessary, but that trade is entirely out of the excluded zone mentioned."

The New North American Company.

General Newton went on to say that the North American Navigation company would begin operations about Feb. 20 from San Francisco. Five ships only would ply between San Francisco and Panama for the present, and two only on the Atlantic waters. This will lengthen the distance on the Pacific coast to be sailed was 3,700, while that on the Atlantic was 1,900 miles.

The North American Navigation company would charter its vessels for the present, General Newton continued, but would own them as soon as possible. He said this agreement would make the Panama Railroad company free of all connection with the transcontinental railroads, and the Southern Pacific in particular. He thought the new line would develop enormous business which, he said, was waiting for transportation between New York and San Francisco, and which has been kept from coming to the Panama line by the long term of years by the collusion of the Pacific Mail company with the transcontinental roads.

With reference to the application to the attorney general to have suit begun to forfeit the charter of the Panama railroad General Newton said: "It is for actions committed by employees of the Panama company prior to April, 1888, when the present board came into existence, that this application is made to the receivers. They have been remedied by the present board, and I cannot see why any one has cause to complain. The Pacific Mail Steamship company is back of the whole scheme. We have treated it directly to them."

The Investigation Called For.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—The text of the Panama railroad investigating resolution introduced in the house by John H. Fellows, of New York, recites that the United States, under the treaty of 1846 with New Grenada, guaranteed the neutrality of the isthmus of Panama, and that the Panama Canal company, a French corporation, secured the interests of nearly the whole capital stock of the Panama Railroad company, which is now owned by a receiver appointed by the courts of France, and that the sum of $1,000,000 was raised by the canal company, through the instrumentality of the railroad company, for the purpose of preventing opposition in this country to the scheme of the canal company, and for the purpose of securing acquiescence to its plans, which contemplated the complete control of the isthmus by citizens of France.

MR. BLAINE GROWS WEAKER.

He Is Conscious and Converses with His Family and Attendants.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 19.—Mr. Blaine has passed an uneventful day and last night there was no apparent change in his condition. He is neither stronger nor weaker than he was yesterday or the day before, except a slight change to that results from the gradual inroads of the disease—so slight that they are hardly noticeable by those constantly with him.

He is entirely conscious and converses with the members of the family, attendants and physicians at will, though he is discouraged by his physicians from any excessive talk.

Dr. Johnston called at 8:30 o'clock last night and remained with the patient about twenty minutes. He stated when he left that neither he nor Dr. Hyatt would return unless sent for by the family on account of a change for the worse. There were no indications that such a change would occur, and he expected Mr. Blaine would pass an easy night.

He had slept considerable during the day, but this was no indication of unusual weakness and was incident to the disease from which he was suffering.

NO APPEAL IN DR. BRIGGS' CASE.

The Prosecuting Committee Will Probably Accept the Presbytery's Verdict.

NEW YORK, Jan. 19.—Drs. Charles A. McCook, Dr. George W. F. Birch, Dr. Joseph J. Lampe, Dr. Robert F. Sample and John J. Stevenson, composing the Briggs prosecuting committee, considered yesterday afternoon the question of an appeal from the recent vote of the New York presbytery acquitting Dr. Briggs of the charge of heresy. The committee was unable to make up its mind in four hours and will hold another meeting today.

The committee will have to decide today whether or not it will take an appeal, as the ten days allowed by church law for such action then expires. It is believed by many that the appeal will not be taken.

The French Settle Takers.

PARIS, Jan. 19.—Before the parliamentary commission of inquiry M. Stephane, a clerk in the service of Baron de Reinach's partner, M. Propper, said that Baron de Reinach had left him a list of the persons compromised in the distribution of Panama money. The list contained the names of more than 100 deputies who had been beneficiaries of the Panama fund. The sums paid to these men varied between 1,000 or 1,000 francs and 50,000 francs each. M. Stephane said that he gave the list to M. Clemenceau, who, he thought, could make the best use of it. M. Clemenceau replied emphatically that he had never received any list of compromised deputies nor had he ever heard of such a list from Baron de Reinach or anybody connected with him in business.

LONDON, Jan. 19.—Senator Jones and his family will start for Paris and after a brief visit to that city will sail for America on the Gascogne Saturday. He says that he is agreeably surprised at the professed friendliness manifested as to the value of bimetallism. He believes that the monetary conference will resume its sessions in May, and hopes to be able to return at that time. Owing to his position as senator he is unable to accept invitations to address meetings and commercial centers in Great Britain.

He was shot in the left side, and he has suffered untold agony ever since. The wound has refused to heal, and Dr. Wolf, at his physician, has abandoned hope for his recovery.

DEMPSEY'S TESTIMONY.

He Says He Knows Nothing About the Plot.

THE HOMESTEAD K. OF L. HONOR HIM

He Denies Gallagher's Story Entirely, but Shows Much Agitation Upon Cross Examination—The Trial Will Hinge Largely Upon the Veracity of Witnesses.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 19.—The defense in the Homestead poisoning case against Hugh Dempsey examined a large number of witnesses to prove that sickness in the mill was not unusual. Many workmen testified that previous to the strike they had suffered from illness, the symptoms of which were similar to those which killed some of the nonunion men.

The defendant, Hugh F. Dempsey, was called. He said:

"I am district master workman of District Assembly No. 3, Knights of Labor. The Knights of Labor had nothing to do with the Homestead strike. The Amalgamated association had charge of that. I first saw Gallagher in Gaffney's. He was brought there by Beatty. Mr. Davidson was there. They were introduced to me by Beatty.

"Beatty said they were men who were to go to Homestead, get work and report to me how things were going on in the mill. Nothing was said about putting powder in food; did not employ them for that purpose. I told them I had four men in the mill at the time, but that I wanted more reports, so that I could by statistics show that the Carnegie company was exceeding the nonunion men. Gallagher would come down two or three times a week. I promised them compensation, but told them to get work in the mill so that the company would have to pay them; never gave Gallagher any powder; did not say I wanted to give them any. Nothing to watch. Beatty did not talk to them about a strike in Chicago. I was in Homestead frequently and in the mill once; know nothing about any plot to poison."

Gross Examination Agitates Him.

Much stir was created in the courtroom during Mr. Dempsey's cross examination by his great agitation. He became much exhausted and tears were entertained that he would faint. When asked why he had hired men to spy for him in the Homestead mill he replied:

"Because I got a telegram from New York asking me to learn the condition of affairs in the mill, as they are trying to arrange a settlement with Andrew Carnegie."

At least three witnesses called by the defense gave testimony favorable to the prosecution. They were Dr. Osborne, Captain Ecker and William Worthington Dr. Osborne, when questioned by Mr. Porter, said that the majority of those whom he treated for diarrhea were men who were employed in Mill No. 1.

Captain Ecker said Gallagher had told him he was in the mill "for a good purpose," though the defense may claim this to mean that he was there merely to report to the strikers the goings on inside. Woolley, once a cook in the mill, said all food furnished the workmen was carefully inspected by him. He said that all decayed vegetables and fruits and spoiled meats were condemned, and that spoiled meat was never given to the men to eat.

A Fellow Prisoner of Gallagher.

E. W. Robertson was brought over from the jail to the witness stand. He said:

"My cell adjoins the one occupied by Gallagher. I have talked to him about his case. He told me he told Dempsey was entirely innocent of the poisoning charge."

During Mr. Burleigh's cross examination of Robertson, Mr. Marshall interposed with the question, "Did not Gallagher tell you he was on a chain gang in St. Louis?"

The prosecution objected, as Mr. Marshall produced no evidence to this effect.

Judge Stowe said, "Unless the question can be followed up by evidence it should bear grossly against the defense."

As the matter now stands it seems to hinge on a question of truth between Dempsey and Gallagher and Davidson.

The local Knights of Labor last night re-elected Hugh F. Dempsey as grand master and passed resolutions of confidence in him.

He Paid a Million Dollars.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 19.—Stephen V. Something for the Small Boy.

There is more pathos than poetry in the little boy's remark that folks didn't seem to want boys for anything only just to have 'em grow up and make men. Particularly is this lack of interest noticeable in the chronicle of fashions. Every woman delights in the pretty frills and furbelows she fashions for her little girl. She revels with avidity the latest modes for little maids; she stitches in dainty tucks and hems with the same delight she felt in fulling wardrobes for her fat Paris doll, but after her boy grows out of babyhood and past kilts the romance all goes out of his wearing apparel. She buys it at the tailor's and can't feel half the pleasure in paying the bill that she finds in fitting over her own pretty things for her little daughter. Still she loves to occasionally have a suggestion of something new.

The cut, shows a handsome suit in dark cloth for your young anarchist, as shown in the New York fashions. The coat, a modification of the sailor dress coat, has a waistcoat of figured pique white with a dot of blue, and is worn with a starched shirt and round linen collar tied with a soft silk scarf.

WITH OUR YOUNG FOLKS.

THIS COLUMN INTENDED FOR THE CHILDREN.

Some Reading That Little Ones Can Understand—Interesting Short Stories and Verses—Bright Sayings of Little Tots—A Half Hour's Entertainment.

Little Lucy Bean had by some trifling offence sprained an aunt's ankle, and grave were the strains which the family, relatives and friends were put to to keep the invalid amused. Resources were at the last stib, when a fresh acquaintance arrived and was joyfully hailed.

"Oh, Mr. Preston!" exclaimed the little sovereign from her armed and pillowed throne. "Please sit down there in front of me and play you was a Asadelion and let me blow the fuzz off the top of yo head to see if mother wants me."—Judy Washing-Day.

I'm busy, as you see,
For this is washing-day:
It's no use calling me,
I cannot come and play!
For I must rub and scrub, it's plain,
The clothing of Victoria Jane.

I've very little soap,
And soda I have none;
But yet I live in hope
That, when my task is done,
And when from work I sit and rest,
My dolly will be neatly dressed.

How oft to her I say—
"Where have you been?
Your frock's all over clay!
Now, can't you keep it clean?
It sometimes seems to me in vain
To wash your clothes, Victoria Jane!"

BRIGHT SAYINGS OF LITTLE TOTS

A REASON.

"Oh, Willie dear," said his mother, "why do you whine so?"

"'Cause I don't want to fordet how," answered Willie.

AN OPINION.

"What sort of a baby is your new brother, Abe?"

"Oh, he's just like my other new brother. Cou.dn't tell 'em apart, if it wasn't that his name is different."

AN UNBUILDER.

Willie had been watching the demolition of a house near his home with great interest. Then he said:

"Papa, I think I'll be an unbuilder when I grow up. Tearing down houses must be lots of fun."

TWO HALVES MAKE A HOLE.

"Why do you dig two holes, Jimmie?" asked his uncle, as he met his industrious nephew on the beach.

"Two only dug one hole. Those are only halfs," said Jimmie.

THE GREAT POINT.

"Are snails awful slow, papa?" asked Marjorie.

"Very, very slow," was the reply.

"Well, would they be any faster if we had to carry our house about with us wherever we went?"—Harper's Young People.

That Was Good Enough.

The boy was sitting lazily in the stern of the boat, dangling his feet in the water, when a man from the dock called sharply to him:

"What are you doing there?" he said.

"Nothin'," responded the boy.

"Do you get any pay for it?"

"Nope," and he drew one foot out of the water ready to run if need were.

"Why don't you go to work?"

"Will you give me a job?"

"Yes."

"Steady?"

"Yes."

"Pay anything?"

"Well, no," hesitated the man, "not the first week."

"How about the second?"

"Then I will."

"All right; I'll come around the second week. This is good enough for me now," and the boy shook the foot back in the water and winked at the man on the dock.—Detroit Free Press.

Fine Clothes.

As once a dainty butterfly,
That flaunted lily in the air,
Alighted on a flower to try
The stores of sweetness hidden there,
Deep in its cup the silkened to see
A plain, hard-working honey-bee.

"Away!" she cried, "you toiler base,
Away, you common drudge, away!
How can you dare to show your face
Where your better, chance to stay!
Do you not know me by my dress
To be a lady—nothing less?"

"Friend," said the bee, "your gay attire
May dazzle foolish eyes, 'tis true,
But even though mine your clothes admire,
They scorn such useless things as you;
Whilst all that know my worth agree
In giving honor to the flee."

A Fish Story.

Papa—Did you catch any fish?
Little Son—Only one, but it was a big one.

"Very big?"

"Oh, awful big."

"Did it get away?"

"No, but it 'most broke the pole pullin' it out."

"Well, well! Where is it?"

"In my pocket."—Good News.

The Happiest Child.

It is pleasant to laugh and have "lots of fun,"
To merrily frolic and play;
But that child is truly the happiest one
Who can add to all this a good deed done,
When the night shade cast the day.

AN ASTONISHED FOX.

How Mink Frightened Mice by Playing Mouse.

A gentleman in Montord, Ontario, told me that when a boy at home, he used to be greatly delighted with the humorous stories of an old man called Nehemiah, or "Mink, writes Marshall Saunders in Good News.

"Mink would come to the house, take up his station in the kitchen, then the children of the family would gather round him for a tale of the woods. "Mink was a great talker, and would accompany his stories with appropriate gestures. Upon one occasion, he told the story that he went into the woods, and had just settled himself for a nap, when he heard a light mouse on the ground, and he soon espied Mr. Fox coming down the road. Near by was an uprooted tree, the roots stuck up high in air. 'Mink crept (and he dropped down on the kitchen floor, and moved his body now to peak) behind the roots, and began to chirp and squeak like a mouse.

Now a wise, plump, young mouse is fatally misled by a fox, and by and by 'Mink and Mr. Fox are seated, back to back, 'Mink showed the children how the fox came, trotting stately along, then stopping to listen, turning his head wisely from side to side, and finally up one paw. The two 'Mink sat back and chuckled, and licked the kitchen, and smelling the air, always convulsed the children. He would be fox and mouse alternately. The mouse would squeak, the fox would advance. Finally, Mr. Fox crept lightly up to the tree where, he thought, the lively bite was, and was opening to receive the mouse, when 'Mink opened his mouth, and opening as wide a terrible yell. The astounded fox fell over and rose on the ground as if he were shot. 'Mink always vowed that it took the fox several seconds to recover himself enough to run away.

And I can believe it, for Simmons, A trick had been played on him! 'Mink sat on the ground and laughed and laughed. He always amused the children that he had them on needles, but he would have had, if he had taken his gun and shot the fox.

Slow Inconvenience.

Little Girl—What do you do when you see anything funny in church?

Homely Woman—Do?

"Yes'm, don't sad how you keep from laughin', I mean."

"You don't?"

"Why, no'm. Stuffin' your handkerchief in your mouf wouldn't do any good, 'cause your mouf is so big, you know."

Good as a Bell.

City Child—What is that queer thing in that field? It looks like a man only it isn't.

Country Child—That's a scare-crow, Father put it there, after planting the field, to frighten the crows away; but I think, from the way the crows act, they has a idee it's to let them know dinner is ready.

The Owl.

The owl with his saucer-like eyes
May appear exceedingly wise—
But I think he's a stup d thing.
He doesn't even know how to sing—
And a song is there's a ray of light,
Then wonders why he can't rest at nights

HIS ASTONISHMENT GREW.

They taught her both Latin and German; than Greek
And Science and Physics profound.
Why, the girl really knew, before she could speak
The world was most certainly round.

She sang like a bird, she could play like the wind;
She danced, she could ride, she could row,
'Twas rumored there was not a thing on the earth
Of which she was ignorant; so

When he wrote her a note saying, "I would be pleased
On Wednesday to call once again,"
His astonishment grew at this word he received
(It cost him the deepest of pain):

Miss Blank regrets her engagements is such she will be unable to receive Mr. Gray on Wednesday, but will be defied to have him call on the day following.—New York Sun.

His Definition.

A captain who was one of the school board in a New England resort-town was visiting the school one afternoon, and heard the class read from Webster's address at Plymouth.

"Who was Webster?" asked the captain.

"A statesman," said one boy. "An orator," said another.

"But what is a statesman?" asked the captain.

"A man who goes around making speeches," answered a small boy.

"That's not just exactly right," said the captain smiling. "Now I go around making speeches once in awhile, but I'm not a statesman at all."

"I know what a statesman is," spoke up a bright little fellow. "It's a man who goes around making good speeches."—Youth's Companion.

The Cause of His Trouble.

He had two plasters on his face, one on the back of his head; his arm was in a sling, and he limped.

"You look as if you had been run through a planing mill," was the remark he was greeted with.

"I feel so," he replied.

"Been sailing any one a liar?"

"No."

"Well, what is the matter?"

Registration Made Easy.

At a newly opened registration office in the Moabit district of Berlin there appeared an elderly master baker who hastened to register a birth. In reply to the registrar's inquiry as to the number of his children, the happy father said, in a tone of proud satisfaction: "This is the eighteenth so far," and he subsequently remarked, "I am very pleased that you have opened an office in this ward so that now and on future occasions one hasn't to walk all the way to the Alexanderstrasse."—Berliner Borsen-Courier.

Against His Principles.

Kindly Housewife—Here, my poor man, I'll get you a nice bit of steak if you'll wait a minute.

Hefty Hoosier (the tramp)—Very kind, mum, but it will be impossible for me to accept your offer. I'm a vegetarian, mum, and if you happen to have a little beer or red rye with you—both of which are purely vegetable products—I shall be glad to partake of your hospitality.—Chicago News-Record.

A Fool.

Bill Smith thinks more of fancy fowls than anything he owns.

While in a garden nicely tilled Jack Perkins takes some pride.

And best of neighbors they remained until one luckless day

Bill's coop got shaky and his fowls went straying o'er the way.

They wandered round until they came to Perkins' garden patch,
And here they all resolved to stop and have a jolly scratch.

When Perkins knew this shameful fact the feelings you can guess!
He went and told Bill that his fowls had made an awful mess.

Well, Bill thanked Perkins that he came and talked of it so plain,
And said he'd never let his fowls go bothering him again;

And Bill meant well, no doubt, but yet I am compelled to say
Jack found the poultry in his patch 'most every other day.

One noon Bill went as usual to view his feathered foes,
And found, with grief, one rooster was—an eight-pound "Plymouth Rock."

And for that fowl, both fat and sane, he made a present with an axe.

Then called and asked Jack if he'd seen his rooster anywhere.

"What's that?" said Jack. "Your rooster good for a present? Well, I declare!

Why, 'tain't as very long ago I saw it over here.
I'll help you find it, only, Bill, we're going to have a treat,
For dinner, and I said my wife I'd be on hand to eat.

"Say, Bill, you'd better take advice and go and
At once yourself and me your rooster's in the soup."

PHOTOGRAPHIC FEAST.

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE OF AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS.

The New Jersey Division Handsomely Entertained by the Plainfield Camera Club—Great Plans and Progress.

The New Jersey Division of the American League of Amateur Photographers held a business meeting in the Republican Headquarters, No. 13 East Front street, last evening.

The New Jersey Division is composed of eighteen clubs, of which the Plainfield Camera Club is one of the foremost.

This Division was formed last October, in Newark, and Mr. Oscar B. Teale, the popular and progressive President of our local club was unanimously and wisely chosen the President of the N. J. Division of the A. L. A. P.

The Division holds its regular monthly meetings with each of the club's represented. The first was held at Newark, the next at Orange, the third at Hoboken, and last evening the Division was the guest of the Plainfield Camera Club.

About thirty members, representing the Newark, Orange, Hoboken, New York and Brooklyn clubs were met at the depot and escorted to the Republican Headquarters where an interesting business meeting was held. Pres. Teale occupied the chair and E. H. Fulling of Cranford was elected secretary pro tem.

The meeting consisted of a general discussion of photographic details and plans for aggressive work in the future. An excellent suggestion of President Teale to systematically collect statistics of photography throughout the State together with data was favorably discussed and upon motion adopted. The clubs throughout the State will therefore be gathering records that will be valuable and instructive and beyond the mere boundary of pleasure.

There were about sixty persons, representing a fine class of men, and about a dozen ladies, present at the meeting and at the dinner, which was served later in the rooms of the Camera Club on the opposite side of the street, to which they adjourned.

The club room was brilliantly lighted with several chandeliers and bordered with rows of gas-lights. The place was made more cheerful by the blazing log fires and bountiful repast spread on a large table arranged in the form of a T.

The "spread" was arranged by a previously appointed committee consisting of Messrs. F. R. Stevens, H. H. Coward and J. Neagle, with assistance from many of the other members.

The following menu was arranged by Mr. Stevens and handsomely lettered by Mr. A. J. Gavett, and a handsome water scene placed in one corner. The whole was then photographed and blue prints given each person:

At the head of the table sat President Teale, who as toastmaster called upon members of the league for speeches, all of which were extemporaneous. Seated at toastmaster Teale's right was Mr. Paul L. V. Thiery, President of the National League and at his left was Mr. Wm. A. Halsey, First Vice President of the New Jersey Division.

Mr. Thiery gave a talk full of theory, after which toastmaster Teale wittily called for a "fuller" one from Secretary B. M. Fuller.

Mr. F. Dana Reed, one of the editors of the Brooklyn Eagle and of the new league paper The Developer, the first numbers of which were distributed last evening, complimented New Jersey on the possession of the Plainfield Camera Club. A short talk by Mr. Geo. H. Babcock was followed by a laughable song by Mr. Simons of Newark, entitled "To-morrow will be Friday." Then Mr. Munn of Newark, who is one of the funniest men in the League recited a Dutch version of "Some Other Time," and he can do it. Mr. Reed gave an extemporaneous and side-splitting imitation of the Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage. His first was "Jehovah as the 37th chapter of Jehoshphat, 14th to 16th Verses, "After the Outing Went down to New York City." He referred to the negative rolls as a "negative" city and his talk was filled with photographic love well applied. He said that the big bridge connecting the "composite" cities would some day be

EDITORIAL NOTES

Yet a new use has been found for electricity. It has been taken advantage of as a heating power for drying lumber on a large scale at Ottawa.

The Panama scandal disclosures that are now shaking the French republic to its very foundation are only one more proof that no iniquity can be hidden, but all must come to light and face the consequences. It was so with the whisky ring and the Tweed ring in the United States; it is the fate of every fraud great or small. There are living in Paris today in comparative exile persons who fled from New York when the bottom fell out of the Tweed ring. The Panama scandal must have set them to remembering.

One of the interesting incidents connected with the courtship of Prince Ferdinand of Roumania and Princess Marie of Edinburgh was the receiving once a week by the princess of one of Ferdinand's old love letters to Mlle. Helene Vacaresco, to whom he was formerly engaged. Helene was his first love, but for reasons of state he was not permitted by Russia and Germany to marry her. Therefore the spiteful Vacaresco got even with him in truly feminine fashion by sending his love letters, one by one, long drawn out, to his new betrothed. This must have had a soothing tendency upon Princess Marie's feelings, especially as she is said to have the true Russian temper. Now that she is married it will be her turn to get even with Ferdinand.

"The heaviest loads sat lightly upon him," says General O. O. Howard of General Benjamin Butler. The popular estimate of Butler is that he was a greater lawyer than military man, but General Howard, writing in the New York World, contradicts this judgment, declaring that few men who ever commanded armies have excelled him in administrative conception and execution. It was his unhappy combative disposition that involved him in troubles with prominent individuals constantly during his military career, and this prevented him from being appreciated at his full power, General Howard says. Perhaps when all else connected with his life fades out the phrase, "contraband of war," will be remembered as his invention. In the conception which gave rise to this phrase certainly the genius of the lawyer shines out transcendent. In the first days of the war Union generals were forbidden to free slaves or to give them refuge as runaways. General Butler took the slave at the south's own estimate. He is a chattel, he reasoned, property like any other live stock. The negro is capable of being used by the enemy to aid him in carrying on the war. Therefore he is as much contraband as arms or ammunition. Therefore I seize him and keep him by the rules of war. This was in 1861. Thereafter every runaway slave in Butler's camps found refuge.

A French Anniversary.

Exactly a hundred years ago this January the first republic of France was passing through a crisis no less exciting and dangerous than that of today and far more tragic. Sept. 21, 1792, the first republic was proclaimed by the national assembly, a body that had forced itself into existence and recognition, Jan. 15, 1793, this assembly tried Louis XVI for conspiring to overthrow the French constitution and found him guilty by unanimous vote. Jan. 20 came the final condemnation. Three of the men had hesitated to pronounce him guilty of conspiracy against the constitution stopped awhile at voting for his death sentence, and the debate was long and intensely exciting.

As fiercely as the French deputies debate about the Panama scandal this January the French deputies of January, 1793, debated the life or death of Louis XVI. At last, by only a few votes, the death sentence was carried, and the next day—Jan. 21—the king of France was guillotined. France remained a republic till Napoleon overthrew the directory in 1799. Possibly if Boulanger had not committed suicide last year he might now have done what Napoleon did in 1799.

But Louis XVI, the king who was guillotined a hundred years ago this January, was a better man than two out of three of the French deputies of today, tarred as they are with the stick of the black Panama briberies. Events hang upon such slender threads. The United States had a greater share in the downfall and death of Louis XVI than Americans generally think of. Louis XVI was the friend of the American colonies, which were then struggling for their independence. He recognized us as a nation Feb. 6, 1778. This brought on war with England, a war which cost France over $250,000,000. It plunged the nation into debt and caused distress among the people because of the taxation thereby made necessary.

Upon the heels of this debt came the extravagances of Queen Marie Antoinette that knew no bounds. The smoldering embers of discontent rose to a flame which burst in fury and consumed the throne. The example of America had made republicanism contagious, and the first French republic was proclaimed. But it is an interesting speculation that only for us and our revolution the Bourbon family might to this day have been upon the throne of France.

LAID QUIETLY TO REST.

Impressive Funeral of Ex-President Hayes at Fremont.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE ATTEND.

Distinguished Citizens Join Those of the Humble Walks in Honoring the Soldier, Statesman and Philanthropist—The City in Deep Mourning.

FREMONT, O., Jan. 20.—The remains of the dead ex-president were viewed last evening after 7 o'clock by such citizens of Fremont as could most conveniently come then than this morning. The body lay in General Hayes' own room. The school children, civic bodies of Fremont and the general public viewed the remains this forenoon at 9 o'clock. The services were simple and impressive. At 2 o'clock the family, personal friends and dignitaries from abroad assembled within the parlors. The twenty-third Psalm was read by the pastor of the M. E. church, immediately followed by a favorite hymn sung by Professor Alfred Arthur, of Cleveland, leader of the regimental band, and David H. Kimberly, of the Twenty-third Ohio, assisted by a quartet. Prayer was offered by Dr. James W. Bashford, president of the Ohio Wesleyan university. There was no sermon. The services closed with singing of the Lord's Prayer.

The Grand Army ritual, which is very simple, was used at the cemetery. The Ohio national guard and other military bodies were in the procession. Colonel Henry S. Corbin, assistant adjutant general, United States army, who had charge of the ceremonies, arrived from Washington last evening.

A Vast Concourse of People.

During the hour of services at the house the streets were packed with people and organizations, who had been pouring into the city by special trains since early morning. Fully 15,000 persons participated in and viewed the long procession of military and civic bodies that mournfully followed the funeral hearse of the honored dead to the cemetery. The business of the city was at a standstill and has been practically since the ex-president's death. Emblems of mourning were everywhere apparent. The citizen's committee handled the immense crowd with excellent judgment, and none of the painfully inappropriate scenes usual upon an occasion where multitudes congregate was apparent.

General Hayes' Character.

In speaking of Mr. Hayes an intimate friend said: "General Hayes was a very rare man. He was bright and sunny in disposition and never depressed, for he invariably looked upon the bright side of affairs. I never heard him say an unkind word. He never failed to say something in palliation of an offense. He possessed a very kindly nature, which was at once sympathetic and genial and which with so strong a character seemed an unusual combination. He took the greatest pride and comfort in his war experience, and I believe the period he spent in the war was the most satisfactory of his life. He never wearied of recounting the scenes and adventures he passed through during that time, and we have spent many happy evenings listening to his stories.

His Services to Benevolent Objects.

"He was trustee of the Western Reserve university, of the Garfield memorial and of the Historical society, and also of both the Ohio State university at Columbus and the Ohio Wesleyan university at Delaware. He presided over the exercises at the time of the dedication of the Garfield memorial and was at the banquet of the alumni of Kenyon college. He was elected president of the Kenyon college alumni on that occasion.

"In New York he was a trustee of the Peabody fund and president of the board of trustees of the John F. Slater fund. The latter has always been under his charge, and the original amount ($1,000,000) has been increased under his management.

"General Hayes was in Columbus Thursday last. He left on Saturday to return to Fremont, and was apparently in his usual health and the best of spirits. Almost his last words were in response to a question as to what he should do. His reply indicated that he intended to start for the south on Feb. 6 with Dr. Curry, who is secretary of the Slater fund. An extended trip through the southern states in the interest of the colored people, the beneficiaries of the fund, was contemplated. While at the depot he was buffeted by the crowd, all, although no such termination to his illness was apprehended at the time."

LOUISVILLE, Jan. 20.—John G. Carlisle has mailed his resignation as United States senator from Kentucky.

IN NATIONAL CONGRESS.

Little Doings at Washington—Mr. Edgerton on Disorganization.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The discussion of the anticanteen bill was continued in the senate until the time of adjournment, but no action was taken on the bill itself or on Mr. George's amendment to it. Notice was given, however, by Mr. Washburn that he would ask the senate to remain in session today until a final vote is reached.

Mr. Peffer, of Kansas, concluded his speech in favor of a single term of the presidential officers, a new McClernahan bill was introduced and referred to the judiciary committee, and an amendment was given notice of by Mr. Wolcott, of Colorado, to the bill suspending the purchase of silver bullion.

The greater part of the day in the house was consumed in filibustering. Mr. Kilgore, of Texas, was to the fore. By his dilatory tactics he encompassed his object of defeating action on the bill for the erection of a monument to the prison ship martyrs and on the measure for the construction of a revenue cutter for the Pacific coast. When in opposition a bill was passed to meet the requirement of the interstate commerce law relative to the testimony of witnesses. Another bill amending the interstate commerce act was called up and passed, but its main feature, which strikes out the pooling section of the original act, was defeated. A bill was passed for the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi river at New Orleans. The national quarantine bill was the next in order, but its opponents succeeded in staving it off until Saturday.

Legislation in Kansas.

TOPEKA, Jan. 20.—The situation is quiet and unchanged. The Populists seem to be timorous about carrying out their plan of repudiating the appropriation bill, and Republicans can do nothing until they do. In the Populist house the committee on elections reported favorably ousting Nick Klise, of Jackson county, and J. W. Dix, of Reno county, and seating the Populist contestants. The report was laid over under the rules for a day. At 4 o'clock a motion to take a recess to make a new legislative day was adopted by the Populist house, and when the third clerk began to call the roll of counties through all the Republican side and a rush made for the doors in order to escape the eye of Dunsmore, who stood ready to capture a quorum by counting those present. The Populists regard the action of the Republicans as a point gained by the Populist house.

For Suffrage Only.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The woman suffrage convention discussed the resolutions condemning the action of congress in legislating for closing the World's fair on Sunday. The weight of sentiment seemed to be against taking any action at all upon the question. It was contended that it was not such a question as should come before a suffrage convention, and whatever decision was reached or effect was to be given to many earnest friends of the suffrage movement.

APPEAL OF BRIGGS' CASE

The Prosecution Goes Direct to the General Assembly.

TECHNICALITIES PREPONDERATE.

It Would Be a Waste of Time to Take the Case to the New York Synod—The Trial the Most Important in the History of the Presbyterian Church.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Briggs case will be appealed direct to the general assembly, which meets in Washington in May. In furtherance of this action the prosecuting committee met last night with the Rev. Dr. Paul D. Alexander, the stated clerk of the presbytery, their notice of appeal. In its appeal to the general assembly the committee gives the following reason for carrying the case at once to the assembly: "Believing that the trial of Prof. Dr. Briggs is one of the most important in the history of the Presbyterian church by reason of the dangerous errors alleged to be contained in the address of the said Dr. Briggs at his inauguration as professor of biblical theology in Union Theological seminary; believing the distinct and definite condemnation of these alleged errors by the supreme judicatory of the Presbyterian church is necessary in order to preserve their synod and influence in the denomination, and while having the highest respect for the synod of New York; feeling that the grave responsibility rests upon the general assembly, which is charged with the duty of deciding all controversies respecting doctrine, of reproving, warning or bearing testimony against error in doctrine in any church, presbytery or synod, and in cases that affect or concern the promotion of truth and religion through all the churches under its care, and in view of the desirableness of the speediest settlement of this most important case, we do hereby appeal to and request your venerable body to take immediately upon the consideration and judicial investigation of the appeal here presented, to issue the case and to finally determine the important questions involved, so as to secure the purity and peace of the church at the earliest possible day."

Reasons for Ignoring the Synod.

If the appeal should go to the synod of New York and be passed upon by that judiciary, when the case reaches the general assembly by appeal from the decision of the synod all the presbyteries constituting that synod would be excluded from representation in the final determination of these important questions. The committee adds that if the action of the committee in taking this appeal does not commend itself to the court of last resort, it need not be entertained and can be dismissed without prejudice to any interest. Under ordinary conditions the prosecuting committee would have taken this appeal to the synod of New York, but it does not appear best to do so in this exceptional case.

The five grounds of the appeal are as follows:

First—Irregularity in the proceedings of said presbytery of New York (Sec. 95, book of Discipline). Under this appeal are twelve specifications.

Second—Receiving improper testimony; three specifications.

Third—Declining to receive important testimony; two specifications.

Fourth—Manifestation of prejudice in the conduct of the case; six specifications, including extracts from the speeches of Drs. George Alexander, Henry M. Field, Thomas S. Hastings, Henry Vandyke and the Rev. Antonio Arcoglu.

Fifth—Mistake or injustice in the decision.

CANADA'S ANNEXATION.

A Coming Message of the President May Be Indicative.

OPINION OF A DOMINION SOLDIER.

A Stunted Judiciary, but Poor Populace. Rent Cheaper Than Taxes — Canada's Best Blood Comes to the United States from Choice.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—President Harrison will send to congress within a few days a special message which may have an important bearing upon the possible annexation of Canada to the United States. The message, while dealing with a detail of commerce across the border, involves such vast commercial interests that it cannot fail to make an immediate impression upon the rapidly growing sentiment in British America in favor of extending the northern boundary of the United States to the frozen limits of the continent. President Harrison will point out clearly a plan by which the discrimination in favor of the Canadian Pacific railroad against railroads of the United States may be effectively prevented without violating the treaty of Washington.

Opinion of a British Subject.

BUFFALO, Jan. 20.—Two men who have within the past two days visited Buffalo make an interesting comparison—the Hon. Peter de Villeneuve, of Quebec, and E. A. McDonald, of Toronto—the former a Frenchman who has won fortune and distinction by shooting for British connection and displaying ultra loyalty to England. The latter now looks upon a wrecked fortune of $200,000; stripped of his regimentals, which as an officer in her majesty's militia he wore; deprived of his seat in the Toronto council; defeated in his contest for a seat in the provincial parliament, and finally forced to sell his furs and diamonds to make ends meet.

M. de Villeneuve sees obstacles high as Olympus in the path which leads to annexation, while Mr. McDonald sees in annexation vital benefits.

To a reporter who interviewed him at the Tift House Mr. McDonald said: "Those who say that the annexation sentiment is not popular in Canada say that which is not so, and give expression to untruths which in their own minds and hearts they know to be untrue. It is easy to be seen why the timid advocates of annexation dare not wear the badge of their principles on their breast and speak their views in public. It means ostracism by the churches, injustice in the courts and a general snub from life appointed officials for the man who comes out squarely for annexation.

"He is called a traitor and other vile names. But let every fair minded American look at our condition, and then at the principle which the annexationist in Canada advocates.

Cheaper to Rent Than Pay Taxes.

"Real estate has become a liability. It is cheaper to pay rent than taxes. All our best blood is going to the United States. Our court at Ottawa is bloated, but the people are poor. The taxpayers are groaning under the weight of a government as expensive as that which rules the 70,000,000 people of the United Kingdom, besides paying tribute to England in the way of paying a governor general $50,000 a year and supporting his expensive suite at Rideau hall.

"The country is impoverished, bankrupt and is now experiencing difficulties in floating loans in the mother country, for even England is now doubting the value of Canadian securities. Sloth exists in all the markets, and the colony is beggared to support its magnificence a few."

DE LESSEPS EULOGIZED.

Opening of the Defense in the Panama Trials by M. Barboux.

PARIS, Jan. 20.—Public interest in the Panama trials is evidently increasing as the case draws to a close. Speculation is rife regarding the sentences that will be passed upon the defendants in the event of their conviction. The defense opened and the courtroom was packed.

Maitre Barboux in a few words complimented the court and then dashed into an exposition of his line of defense.

His eulogized M. Ferdinand de Lesseps as a man of the highest character. So keen were his senses of honor that after appearing before Magistrate Prinet at the opening of the inquiry he was overwhelmed. Had the great Frenchman been able to appear to court the whole audience would have risen to salute the glory of his fame.

M. Barboux was complimented by his legal colleagues. M. Charles de Lasserre was much overcome by the tribute paid him and his father by the advocate, and warmly thanked him for his eloquent defense.

MR. BLAINE GAINS STRENGTH.

The Doctors Remained Away from the Patient Last Night.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The doctors, after their 3:30 o'clock visit, reported that Mr. Blaine had been gaining strength all day and was bright and cheerful.

The physicians, who visited him soon after 9 o'clock last evening, reported no material change in Mr. Blaine's condition. He was then, the doctors said, resting easily and had passed a comparatively comfortable day. There seemed to be some improvement so far as his physical strength is concerned.

The Homestead Case with the Jury.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 20.—The defense in the Homestead poisoning case closed yesterday. The judge delivered his charge this morning and the case is now with the jury. At yesterday's session the defense produced several witnesses who testified that the reputation of Gallagher, the principal witness for the prosecution, was bad. A number of witnesses were also called to testify to Dempsey's good character. The defense offered in evidence the receipt given by Gallagher to Dempsey for the twenty-five dollars which the former claimed had been given to him in payment for placing poison in the food of the nonunion workmen. The receipt reads as follows, "Received of Hugh F. Dempsey twenty-five dollars, which I will pay sixty days after date."

As the Place Rouppe seven gendarmes tried to stop the mob, but they were thrown down and beaten before they could draw their swords.

WOMAN AND HOME.

THE PREFERENCES OF CHILDREN SHOULD BE CONSIDERED.

Cold Water Treatment—Are Women Extremists?—Burns' Highland Mary—Mothers and the Kindergarten System—The Liberty of English Girls.

There was once a little girl, dark eyed and intense, who, now that she is a white haired woman, remembers how unhappy she was made during a whole winter by being compelled to wear a certain odd looking coat to school. The cloak was warm and comfortable; it was also quaintly pretty, but it was not in the fashion. A thrifty mother, in anticipation of a mode that actually came into vogue twenty years later, manufactured the little maid's cloak out of a gay tartan shawl, matching the brilliant plaids with pockets, and trimming sleeves and collar and the garment's hem with long knotted fringe. It was really a very striking garment.

The cloak was wadded and lined and quilted. It was a marvel of comfort.

But the child who wore it was wretched, feeling herself a target for every eye, knowing that whole squares of people would say: "There comes Gertrude. She has that odd plaid woolen cloak on made out of a shawl, Fancy!" She fretted and fumed and cried over her cloak; rubbed it against walls to tear it and against paint to spot it, with only one hateful wish like fire in her veins—that some fortunate fate would separate her and her torment. The cloak gave the child a miserable winter.

All this was forty years ago, when parents' fiats were "unfailing" and "to be maintained." Secretly the mother lamented the hour when she had invested her little one in the clothing which had proved so great a trial, but she felt that it would be weak and silly to indulge Gertrude by the purchase of another cloak. She feared, too, to encourage vanity. The cloak was not laid aside till the snows melted and the spring came. Over the gulf of twoscore years the child, herself the mother of girls, keenly recalls the experience of that winter, and in her own practice always consults her children's preferences in choosing their clothing. They are allowed to exercise their own taste as to colors and shapes, the mother wisely recognizing the fact that, once arrayed to their liking, they will think little more about the matter.

So also children's preferences have the same respect shown them which we courteously accord to the wishes and sentiments—even to the random suggestions of those who are mature in years and judgment! A child's vanity is far more sedulously cultivated, his self consciousness and consequent awkwardness far more certainly instilled, by exalting clothing into a concern of great importance and by ignoring a child's expressed fancies, than by treating the whole thing as of comparatively small account.—Harper's Bazar.

Cold Water Treatment.

In case of diphtheria, first, strips of linen or cotton fabric, about eight inches wide, folded several times to be thick enough to reach from ear to ear, should be wrung out of ice water if in winter, and if in summer put directly upon ice, and then applied externally to the throat. Next, as fast as one cloth gets warm another should be ready to take its place. If the child complains of being cold, its feet and hands should be bathed in as hot water as it can stand. When the child is very young, it may be readily ascertained if it be cold or not by feeling its hands and head. Under no circumstances should hot applications be used to the throat. If the child is old enough, it may be given broken ice to suck constantly, even if the water is spit out. The cold applications inhibit the growth of the membrane. The patient's hands should be washed frequently—and here let me say so should those of the attendants—and the vessel used for the purpose should not be used by any one else.

The patient's clothing needs protection in front. This may be done by pinning a piece of the neck, a large piece of linen or cotton fabric, which will cover the whole front of the child and reach as far as the knees. A material should be used which can easily be boiled or burned when soiled. The little patient, if old enough, will want to spit, and for a spittoon a small wooden box with an inch of sawdust on the bottom is capital. Fresh sawdust should be supplied at least once a day—three times a day would be better—and that which has been used should be emptied upon a good, hot fire, and thus burned at the time the change is made. If there are any flies about the box should be kept covered.—C. G. B. Klophel, M. D., in Ladies' Home Journal.

Are Women Extremists?

Women are born extremists. They cannot enter into any scheme or fad without doing it to death or making a complete failure of it. If it be athletics, they lose themselves to a shadow in their zeal over the cause of their adoption. If it be charity there is no discrimination in their almsgiving. Their hearts are and all the time being, are treated with lavish generosity until the tide turns, a new fad looms up and charity takes a back seat, when they rush to the other extreme and lend no helping hand to any human being no matter how worthy.

A woman is either wildly extravagant or absolutely mean, though strange as it may seem these extremes sometimes meet in the same person. On one point she may be ridiculously lavish, while in some another particular she is as close as a miser. There is nothing that, however, detracts from a woman's charm of manner so greatly as to be extreme in her views and opinions of people and things.

Such a one pronounces judgment that is most severe on the most trivial matters. The exaggeration of thought magnifies a small wrong into a great evil, and such extremists become gossips and scandal mongers whose very breath is poison.

Be enthusiastic, but don't gush; preserve a happy dignity and moral balance that prevent the thoughts or the physical powers from running to extremes, and tend only to wear out the delicate mechanism as well as being like a timepiece that runs too fast, of no value as regards the truthfulness or grace of either the steel or any of the pursuits promulgated with such exaggerated enthusiasm.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Burns' Highland Mary.

The supreme love passage in the life of Burns is related in his song to Highland Mary, whose memory has been consecrated by untold thousands of lovers, whose spirit fills this world, glorifies their dreams, drapes them like a mist, who look up as to a saint at the mention of the name of Highland Mary. She was the daughter of a shipmaster, and Burns saw her first one Sunday at the kirk of Tarbolton, and instantly his heart of tinder glowed with a consuming fire. She was, as Sir George Douglas says, the most spiritual of all his loves, and how different might have been his fortune had he met her earlier and wooed her his own. She was a type of Highland beauty, and female beauty always appealed to Burns with irresistible force. So it does to every genuine man. So the poet found her breathed who was not touched at the sight of a beautiful woman, for here is the distinction of all forms of beauty.

The question man may, under the stress of years, care naught for wealth, for praise of his triumphs, for influence or command, but so long as the years spare him his heart it will respond to the beauty of woman. Burns' susceptibility to it is discovered in almost every line of his poetry. He was thrilled at the first presence of Mary, so modest, so attentive to the service, so forgetful of herself amid the worshipers. "Her figure was graceful, her features delicate, her complexion fair. She had large, lustrous, dark blue eyes and hair of a reddish tint. Her knowledge of English was imperfect, and she conversed but little, accustomed to the Gaelic, slight notes and garble the more guttural language with a bewitching effect."—Chicago Tribune.

Mothers and the Kindergarten.

Compared with like movements to secure the education of a class or the adoption of a new system of teaching, the kindergarten movement is fairly to be considered universaled in the history of national education. The good lord could not be everywhere; therefore he made mothers," said the Jewish rabbi, familiar with that type of Jewish motherhood which in its supreme manifestation at Nazareth has transfigured the world. The influence of Christian womanhood throughout the civilized world. The cause of these schools, rounding out the work and supplementing the responsibility of mothers, rich or poor, has appealed to the maternal instinct of women wherever it has been presented. The movement has been essentially theirs. They have led it, supported the schools, officered the associations and urged its agitation. The same work remains to be done throughout the land.

"There is not a city, a village or a hamlet which will not be the better for a kindergarten association. Experience has amply proved that these schools may be established or established, save by self sacrificing pressure. Difficulties have vanished. Teachers have multiplied. Expenses have been met, and the result, not only in the personal effort indispensable for general success and universal adoption."—Talcott Williams in Century.

Liberty of English Girls.

The independence of action characteristic of the day as regards the feminine world appears to be checked only upon the saddest taken up by young girls belonging to the so called upper classes.

Formerly they were lodged round by many rules, either they were not allowed to go here or there without being guarded by one of their own sex, either by mother or maid. Did they go shopping, a maid must go, too, and sit in the shop side by side with them. Did they go out to afternoon tea, or to make a call the maid must go, too, and wait in the hall.

All is now considered quite permissible and quite conventional for a young girl to walk by herself through the streets of London. She may walk alone when shopping, when visiting, when attending classes or lectures, to early and late church services, to study art at South Kensington and other museums, to travel by train on district, main or suburban lines, or wherever engagements lead.

The time is certainly drawn as waiting in Hyde park alone, although some few independent maidens consider their pet dogs quite sufficient protection even there, but there is no restriction as to the length of time a young lady may look in at shop windows.—London Queen.

The Duty of the Mistress.

"My life is made perfectly miserable," says a correspondent. "Cannot you write something about the servant girl question?"

Certainly, my dear madam. It is as easy to write it as to breathe. All that is wanted is a suggestion, and this is the one you furnish. The maidservant is what you make her. If you and the other housekeepers in the city are perfectly unable to answer your application for a cook or parlor maid, one who can roast and broil and fry to perfection, and make side dishes to definitely out of the scraps, or one who can serve your table with the quietness and regularity of a well oiled machine, and be an ornament to your house, you certainly are expecting more than this world yields, unless some self sacrificing woman has been forcordained to train such a servant for your benefit.

The young girls go into service with a fund of good nature and willingness. It is for the mistress to develop this and put her stamp on their work. It takes patience and a sacrifice of time, but in your position at least this much is required of you. We cannot hope to enjoy the good things of life and shirk its responsibilities.—Newport News.

Don't Throw Newspapers Away.

What shall be done with the old newspapers? is a question that puzzles many no doubt. Don't throw them away or burn them to get rid of them. Every Friday morning the girl comes for her weekly supply. She wants papers to cover the stands of flowers in the bay windows when she sets them out in the yard. She wants papers to cover the floor of the big sheet over the flower stands and thus keeps the fresh green leaves of the plants free from dust. She fastens up the curtains and portieres and pins round the mirrored doors.

If you have not tried this method, you do not know how much longer hangings so protected from the dust will keep fresh and clean. Finally she dampens several papers and lays them on the carpet, and as she sweeps the dust settles on the papers instead of flying all over the room. The sweeping and dusting are made much easier and more effectual.

Next papers are in requisition for cleaning windows, or rather for wiping them after they are washed. Windows and mirrors so dried are much cleaner and brighter than when only cloth is used; and lamp chimneys can be beautifully polished by the same means.—Philadelphia Times.

A Week or Love.

Mrs. Everett, the wife of a master draymen of New Orleans, is said to be one of the best veterinary surgeons in that city. She began by treating her husband's horses during a severe illness of his. She had long been a skillful nurse, and noticing that mules and horses suffered just as people do she decided to doctor them in the same way. Warm blankets and hot applications, both external and internal, proved remarkably effective, and finally the appreciative animals would open their mouths to take her remedies.

After the horses had all recovered Mrs. Everett, encouraged by her success, studied every book on the subject of diseases of horses and mules and their surgical treatment until she could set a broken leg, extract a nail from the hoof and treat indigestion and kidney, for which last disease she is said to have an unfailing cure. She

The Way to Be Helpful.

Miss Dodge, of New York, said in her speech at Mechanics' that in the first days of her leadership of New York working girls she used to try to have and carry resources, but the girls very soon put her in the right place as an associate, not a leader. The only possible way of arriving at definite human friendly relations is to be friendly, and it is harder for a girl who has had superior advantages not to "act uppish" with working girls than it is for these girls not to act uppish with their would be friends. Very much sooner among women generally has plenty of sense and simplicity, and a lively sense of humor. And nothing makes her laugh more quickly than the spectacle of another woman who wishes to "do good" to her. The independent American girl is not to be "done good" to by another girl with a silly. But she is hearty, happy creature to associate with when met on the simple footing of friendliness, and is certain to teach as much as she learns in many ways.—Boston Transcript.

Engaged Couples in France.

After a girl has passed her eighteenth birthday she is thought to be one demoiselle a marier, but it is considered not taste for the parents themselves to make any effort to achieve a daughter's marriage. Young people of the higher classes have so far greater liberty is allowed, are seldom asked to visit a family where there are grownup daughters, and, unless under rare circumstances, are never asked to come to lunch or dinner. On no account would a French mother allow her daughter to speak to a man of known bad character or obviously unfit to become her husband.

Marriage is an ever present possibility in France where young people are concerned, and, as may be easily imagined, this has its effect upon the social arrangements. None of these rules apply to near relations. A broad families see a great deal of one another and cousins hardly ever develop into lovers, probably because they are allowed to see so much of their young cousins.—Philadelphia Times.

Fine Robes at Auction.

Some enterprising western women of the best social circles have originated an excellent scheme for disposing of undesirable articles of apparel. It appears that nearly every woman has some special bane in her wardrobe—a purchase which constantly reminds her of a freak of extravagance or lack of discrimination which she would be glad to dispose of for a consideration, but considers too good to give away. These women promise to appear at a day's notice at the house of one of their number and disposing of these various mistakes or misselections by public auction. Each one has the chance to dispose of her own property, not for a monetary consideration, but for some other article which her neighbor considers a fair exchange; and thus the despised possession of one becomes the treasure of another and many go home happy.—New York Ledger.

Wholesome Pastry.

The only really wholesome pastry is that made from beef fat. The following instructions will be found useful for preparing this ingredient ready for handling when pastries are to be the sweet course for meals. The small pieces of fat trimmed from off the piece of beef that forms the more substantial part of the daily dinner are placed in an iron pan and allowed to simmer for four or five hours; the fluid fat that then strains into a small cask at the end set within the refrigerator when sufficiently cooled; here it will keep indefinitely. For those who do not possess a refrigerator the coolest place must suffice; the only difference being the fact of it not keeping so long, of course. When beef is not part of the menu for dinner it is easy to procure a few pounds of beef fat from a butcher.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Made the Paper a Success.

Mrs. Ellen J. E. B. Wilson is editor of The Public Spirit, of Cocoa, Fla. The whole responsibility and work of the paper devolves upon her. She sets all her own type, corrects proofs, writes copy, makes up forms, does her own reporting and sometimes runs the press. At the same time she takes care of her three-year-old baby girl. Mrs. Wilson took hold of the paper in December, 1892, when it had been suspended for about two months. It was a four page sheet with about half a column of ads. It now has seven columns. When the place was too small and there was too little going on to get locals. Mrs. Wilson has not found it so, and her paper is fairly bristling with interest.—Woman's Tribune.

Education of a Viennese Girl.

The education of a Viennese girl includes the regular school work until her fifteenth year, after which she goes through a course of training in the household under the instruction of some member of the family or a trained cook lasting from one to two years. As a result of this training Austrian women are said to make most efficient wives and mothers. They are as accomplished and capable as English women, as well-trained as Parisian, and are noted for their beauty among European women.—New York Sun.

A German woman, Frau Dr. von Weitstein Adels, spent three months as a common factory hand at Chemnitz and in the neighborhood, working in five different factories, gathered material for a work on the subject of women textile workers.

There is a woman in Brockton, Mass., who can boast of having lived under the administration of every president of the United States. She was born the day preceding Washington's retirement from office.

"The last word" is the most dangerous of all to a modiste, and the hundreds of words would not serve right to get it than they would struggle for the possession of a lighted boutonhall.—Douglas Jerrold.

Leonard and Gilbert.

They tell a good story of P. C. Burnand, editor of Punch and the writer of "Happy Thoughts," and W. S. Gilbert, of Gilbert and Sullivan fame. Each loves the other as rival with equanimity. At a recent dinner party the hostess, with commendable tact, placed them at opposite ends of the table. Presently Burnand became conscious of the unctuous drawl of Gilbert, with his deadliest sneering, "I'm sure I don't know why such funny things as Punch has of late found room for. I suppose you never get a day of them."—Boston Transcript.

Pretty Hard Water.

Miss Delaville Barrington was once playing Maud in "The Green Bushes" and toward the end of the play was supposed to commit suicide by jumping into the river.

When, however, she reached the usual entrance of rock she found to her dismay that no mattress had been placed in the "river" for her to jump on, so down she came on the unyielding stage. Was not equal to the dinner table and sat opposite each other one said to the other, "This is——pretty weak, is it not, my dear?"

"No. What is your line?"

"Bicycles. What's yours?"

"Soda fountains."—Chicago News-Record.

TOOL THIEVES AGAIN.

THIS TIME CARPENTERS WHITLOCK AND JOHNSON ARE THE LOSERS.

Their Tools Taken from a Building on Broadway—An Entrance to the Office Gained by a Rear Window.—No Clue to the Robbers.

Some time ago a number of mechanics of this city complained to the police that their tools were being stolen. They would leave them at the buildings, in which they were working, after their day's work was over and in the morning the tools would be missing. The police kept a close watch for the thieves and the robberies ceased.

Thursday night the robberies began again. This time Carpenters George W. Whitlock and Charles Johnson were the victims. They were employed on the building being erected by Mr. Hand on Broadway. There is a small office in one end of the building where the men store their tools for the night. On the night in question Policeman Frederickson, whose beat takes in that district, says he saw the chest of tools on the counter inside at three o'clock in the morning. At seven o'clock it was gone.

The thief or thieves gained an entrance by prying open a window in the back part of the office.

Mr. Whitlock had, a collection of mechanical implements which he prized very highly and he feels his loss greatly, while those taken belonging to Mr. Johnston were equally as valuable. No doubt, there was not so many of them.

The police were notified, but have been unable to find any clue.

From an Old Sea Captain.

A retired sea captain residing in Plainfield, gives the following as an old saw among sailors:

"When the weather's foggy, your horn blow;
Short on wind and let her go slow.
So if a horn you should hear near,
You'll have time to keep her clear."

AMONG THE BOWLERS.

TWO LEAGUE GAMES ROLLED IN THIS CITY LAST NIGHT.

Plainfield Victorious in Both Instances—One Game on the Crescent League Alleys and the Other at the C. Y. M. I. Club House.

Anyone of the opinion that the Crescent League is dying, should have been present at last night's bowling match between that club's team and a team from Roselle. The two outside alleys were well filled with members during the entire game, who presented quite the reverse of a dying appearance.

The bowling team proved themselves to be very much alive by rolling one of the best games of the season, and defeating their opponents by forty-four pins.

The Crescent League team bowled a good game throughout. No exceedingly high scores were made, but every man rolled an exceptionally even and steady game. The following is the score:

CRESCENTS.		ROSELLES.
Van Emburgh.	180	Mulford	191

About two hundred persons were present last evening at the club house of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum to witness the bowling game between the club's team and the Pioneer club team.

It was a good game and was watched with interest by those present. The members of the C. Y. M. L. believe in treating their visitors royally and last night was no exception. When the games was over all partook of a bountiful collation. The following is the score:

Mr. Thompson Thinks Different.

In the report of the last meeting of the Plainfield Board of Education occurred the following paragraph:

Prof. Mazson said there was a scholar ill with diphtheria in the Grant street school. He said the children in that family should be prohibited from attending school. Probably the whole family of children could attend school, as the mumps were epidemic but not contagious.

Acting on the information Mr. William Thompson allowed his children to resume going to school. They got the mumps, and it is believed that they contracted it from other children at the school; and that this would not have occurred but for his being misled by the information referred to, the result of which has caused him considerable trouble.

The following statistics are taken from the annual report of State Comptroller Heppenheimer.

"The school tax of 1893, was, like the preceding year, levied at the rate of $5 for each child of lawful school age. The number of such children, as shown by the school census, was 530,380, and the amount of tax was $2,151,700. The amount of taxable property upon which this tax was levied was $701,200,029.25, and the following statement shows the amount of tax which each county will be required to pay:

Dunavan asked for a hearing, and as Officer Kiely was not present to testify, trial was set down for Monday at nine o'clock.

Music Hall Notes.

At Music Hall, Monday evening, John T. Kelly and his company of comedians will appear in the comedy of "McFee of Dublin," written by Charles T. Vincent and Mr. Kelly. As McFee the happy lord, Kelly is said to have the best chance of his professional career to display to advantage his abilities as a fun-maker. Unlike most comedies of the present day, "McFee of Dublin" has an interesting and well-told story running through out, the complications and situations are funny and original, and the specialties introduced are a part of the action of the play. The scenery and costumes are all new and very elaborate, one scene showing the Palisades on the Hudson river.

Who Is Responsible?

Concerning the recent runaway accident in New Brunswick, in which Mr. Compton's team of this city took a prominent part, the New Brunswick Times says: "Mr. Addis, the owner of the property on Neilson street at the foot of Bayard street, occupied by A. L. Wells, is having the window which was knocked out by Compton's wagon of Plainfield last Saturday, during the runaway accident, replaced with a new one.

"It will probably require a law suit to connect Mr. Compton's pay for the repairs, as he has disclaimed any responsibility in the matter."

A Political "Bluffer" Put Out.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 21, (Special.)—At 11.15 this morning the political situation in Long Island City reached a climax. Mayor Sanford, with half a hundred of his followers trailing out behind him, advanced on the Mayor's office, where Gleason was.

Sanford demanded from Gleason the books and papers of the office. Gleason sprang to his feet.

"You will not take possession of this office," he cried, "unless you do so over my dead body. I am the lawful custodian of the people's rights and I do not propose to surrender this office without an order from the Supreme Court."

Gleason waved his fists at the crowd and the crowd became angry. It assumed a threatening attitude and shouted. "Put him out! put him out! He's a big bluffer!"

The police, with Chief Woods at the head, swooped down on the crowd at this point and drove it back.

The chief made a grab at Gleason and caught him by the collar. "I will not commit any violation of the public peace here," the chief said.

Gleason cried, "I yield to force," and amid the wildest uproar, Gleason left the office.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Cold Weather Clothing.

The thermometer shows that in most parts of the country it is the coldest winter in some years. What then? Do not therefore swathe yourself up like a mummy in layer after layer of heavy woolens till you weigh a ton more or less and the air has no more chance to get at your skin than a hypocrite has of getting a look into heaven. Do you not know that the surest way to take cold in the head is to wear a heavy, unpleasant fur cap? Or is this the north pole, and are we Eskimos?

Do give nature a little chance to take care of you. Where her own fine, mothsely power is untampered with she in a measure tempers the skin and nerves to weather changes. There is considerable power in the human system itself to resist changes and rise to the occasion when the winds blow and the thermometer falls. Make friends with the wind and the snow; they will fill you with a fine electric life that will warm and thrill you through and through. The surest way to get a sore throat and bald head is to swaddle your neck and head all up in yards of fur or woolens. Let the fresh, bracing air harden your throat to the cold. Let your hair cover your head and keep it warm. Let your head covering be as light as possible.

The most monstrous guys of all, however, are those who swathe their heads up in woolens at night. The looks of the thing would keep anyone with the aesthetic sense from allowing himself to appear such a fright even in his sleep. An average individual is ordinary health can harden himself completely against drafts. Wear warm clothing, to be sure, but let it be as light in weight and small in quantity as possible. Give the vital power within you a chance to react against the weather.

What Dr. Briggs Was Acquitted Of.

An event of great interest in Protestant theological circles is the acquittal of Rev. Dr. Charles A. Briggs, of New York, on the charges of heresy, after full investigation by the New York presbytery. The charges brought against him were five. The committee making the specifications charged that Dr. Briggs had been guilty of promulgating from his professorial chair in the theological seminary teachings contrary to Scripture and the Westminster confession, as follows:

In teaching that the reason and the church are both fountains of divine authority apart from the Scripture.

That the Scripture is not free from all errors, even in the original documents.

That Moses is not the author of the Pentateuch.

That Isaiah is not the author of the latter half of the book which bears his name.

That sanctification is not complete at death, and that processes of redemption may extend to the world to come by the case of many who die in sin.

On every one of these charges Dr. Briggs was acquitted of teaching heresy, though he does absolutely teach exactly what is specified. The majorities were different—larger on some—in favor of the different charges. Most of the ministers put themselves practically on record as believing that the latter half of the book of Isaiah was not written by that prophet. The smallest majority cleared him of the charge that the Scripture is not free from all error. Large or small, however, the New York presbytery has decided that it is not heresy to teach the doctrines set forth in the above five specifications. Until the general assembly of the Presbyterian church has still to decide finally on the question.

Happy Though in Sheol.

St. George Mivart, the naturalist, professor of biology in the Roman Catholic University college at Kensington, London, has come out in rather a startling paper in The Nineteenth Century. He qualifies it as in the true Catholic doctrine that souls even in hell are not so very unhappy; that, on the contrary, the banished to the regions of the damned are happier even in their direst suffering than people on this earth are.

Hell, according to Catholic doctrine, he tells us, is simply a state in which men are deprived of the beatific vision. That vision makes them so full of unspeakable bliss that to be without it is ever after torture of the keenest. But those who never had it do not miss it. The moderately good, respectable people who die unbaptized, if they are free from deliberate mortal sin, will be very happy and content even though they are in hell—that is, shut out from the beatific vision. Never having known it, however, they won't miss it. They will have the things they most desire.

Even when mortals have been guilty of deliberate mortal sin there is so much excuse to be made for them in the way of heredity, environment, ignorance, etc., that we are to believe they, too, the "positively damned," will meet with souls like themselves and enjoy a certain harmony on their own low plane. At any rate nobody in sheol will ever be to so much torture that he longs to kill himself to get out of it. So often happens to persons on this earth; and at its very awfulest sheol will be a much pleasanter place of residence that this world is.

"We are Jews, not Hebrews or Israelites," says the editor of Jewish Tidings. "There is an impression that it is courtesy to call us Hebrews, thus implying that there is some stigma attached to the name of Jew. The Tidings is constantly seeking to remove this impression."

FINAL HONORS TO HAYES

The Eulogistic Prayer of the Rev. Dr. Bashford.

A GATHERING OF NOTABLE MEN.

President-elect Cleveland's Kindly Acts of Sympathy and Respect Touch a Responsive Chord in the Hearts of the People of Fremont.

FREMONT, O., Jan. 21.—Taps have been sounded, the bugles have blown the beautiful good night reveille, the last salute is fired, and all that is mortal of Rutherford B. Hayes sleeps beneath a mantle of snow by the side of the devoted companion of his life. The ceremonies of the day were such as befitted the typical American citizen, soldier and statesman. The simplicity of the republic shone forth in his life and was marked in his obsequies. No eulogy was said above him—that was left for the future to pronounce—and all who knew the man, the father and the statesman unite in saying that it has been wisely so. The pure, upright life and generous, good deeds which ever so suddenly to close Tuesday night have nothing to fear from the verdict of oncoming time. In some respects the occasion was one of the most notable in American history. The only remaining ex-president, soon to again become a private citizen, stood beside the bier of his dead friend and wept in sorrow for him.

The two men had some notable qualities in common, and of all public men few were more sincere mourners than Grover Cleveland, who came and went without ostentation. A great crowd had gathered at the depot waiting his arrival, but the word wisely passed around by the citizens' committee prevented any cheering or display there, and he left as quietly as he came. Only the serious threat of personal illness kept President Harrison away, and his regrets were as keen at enforced absence as were those expressed on every hand by the family, friends and public.

The Prayer.

As was announced, the funeral services consisted simply of the reading of the twenty-third Psalm, a prayer and singing by the quartet. The prayer of Dr. Bashford, which was in the nature of an eulogy to the distinguished dead, was as follows:

"We thank thee, our Heavenly Father, for our invitation to come to thee in our time of need. Thou hast bidden us to pray. Thou hast taught us to call thee our Father and to look forward to heaven as our home. A sense of unworthiness comes over us as we stand in thy presence. But thou hast promised forgiveness unto all who with sincere sorrow turn away from their sins and look unto thee for help. We stand today upon the borders of two worlds. Give us clear vision and keen hearing, so that we may catch the melody of the angels and see the forms of loved ones gone before. We thank thee for the life and services and character of the departed. His vitality was so abounding, his sympathies were so broad, his helpfulness so great that we cannot think of him as dead.

"We look through a mist of tears and see him not dead, living—living into an immortality of life, with a breadth of sympathy, with a vision of God such as he never could have had on earth; living in rich fellowship with saints of all the ages, in sweet companionship with her whom he loved so well on earth. We thank thee for his simple manners, for his manliness, for his characteristics recognized in others, not in himself. We rejoice that he was a man of prayer and of faith in the eternal verities. We thank thee for his services which he rendered the people as a soldier, as a statesman, as a philanthropist and most of all as a plain American citizen. We thank thee that thou hast helped him to realize his highest aims in life and to leave the world a little better than he found it.

"We ask thy blessing upon those who are left more lonely by his absence. Comfort thou these children and grandchildren and other relatives. May they often lift up their eyes unto thee from whence cometh their help. Make them plain to each the path of duty, and may each one find in union with Christ the peace of God which passeth understanding and strength of God for daily tasks in life. Thus may each one be able to say at the end of toil, as we trust their parents have already said, 'Father, I have finished the work thou gavest me to do.' Bless, we pray thee, the persons with whom and causes with which our fellow citizen was identified. Remember the old soldiers whose ranks are growing thin, whose hairs are growing gray. May they fight a good fight against all selfishness and sin, and may each one at last find his name on the muster roll of angels. Bless, we pray thee, the city which gave him birth and this city, which mourns the loss of a friend and benefactor.

"Bless our negro and Indian fellow citizens, for whose struggles for a nobler life he gladly joined. Bless the prisoners and the sinful whom our brother strove to help as he himself desired help from the great Brother of us all. Bless the schools and colleges with whose young lives he fully sympathized, and whose ideals of culture and manliness he unconsciously helped to inspire. Bless this state and nation, which he honored by his services, and which he loved with unabated confidence, and which also loved him well, and bless all the nations of the earth for whose higher life he prayed. Preserve the health of these statesmen servants of the people, of these soldiers and reporters, of these citizens and children who have gathered here to pay their tender tribute to their dead friend.

"Grant that we may all live with growing union with them, and at last that we, too, may find our winter of earth bursting into the bloom of the eternal spring and earthly sorrows swallowed up in heavenly blessedness, and our earthly loneliness comforted by the final reunion with friends now gone before. We ask these favors of thee, O Father, through Jesus Christ, our Lord."

A Notable Procession.

The order in which the funeral procession moved was as follows: Honorary pallbearers, Hon. Charles Foster, Governor William McKinley, Hon. J. H. D. Curry, Major E. C. Dawes, General Wager Swayne, General M. F. Force and Hon. W. E. Haynes; members of the family; ex-President Grover Cleveland, accompanied by Hon. William Henry Smith, the nearest friend of the illustrious dead; members of the cabinet, Attorney General W. H. H. Miller, Secretary Stephen B. Elkins, Postmaster General John Wanamaker and Secretaries Noble and Rusk; representatives of the United States senate.

Ross, of General Schofield's staff; members of the United States navy, Captain Howell, Commander Dickens and Hoskins; representatives of the several companionships of the Loyal Legion, officers and ex-officers of the Ohio commandery association of the Twenty-third O. R. of Ohio, Governor William McKinley and staff, members of the general assembly of Ohio, and all the civil officers of the state in the order of precedence; mayors and common councils of Fremont, Cleveland, Toledo and Sandusky.

The military escort consisted of the Cleveland City troop; the Sixteenth regiment, O. N. G., and Battery D, of Toledo, members of the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans. The post of honor was held by the First troop of cavalry of Cleveland, of which Mr. Webb C. Hayes is a member. The body bearers were stark veterans of General Hayes' old Twenty-third regiment. The Ohio commandery of the Loyal Legion was represented by General R. P. Kennedy, General M. F. Force, General B. R. Cowen, General M. D. Leggett, General James Barnett, General John M. Lemmer, General Colonel R. L. Ny, Major J. L. Botsford, Major W. R. Thrall, Major T. M. Tarner, General W. H. Knotts, Lieutenants Colonel H. C. Corbin, United States army; General John C. Mitchell, General J. S. Casement, General J. Warren Keifer, General C. C. Walcott, General W. H. Rayner, General C. S. Yorke, General E. P. Salomon, Lieutenant Colonel F. D. Wilson, Major W. D. Hickbass, Lieutenant Colonel W. R. Nesbitt, General A. V. Rice, Major W. N. Cushing, Lieutenant Colonel W. R. Warnock and General H. S. Buckland.

GUILTY OF POISONING.

Verdict of the Jury in the Trial of Master Workman Dempsey.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 21.—Judge Stowe, in charging the jury in the Dempsey case, reviewed very carefully and impartially all points of the testimony brought out during the trial. It was for the jury, he said, to determine whether or not poison was put in coffee or tea or the food in the mill. "This question depends solely upon the testimony of Gallagher and Davidson. If they tell the truth then Dempsey was the originator and principal in the business and is responsible for the acts of Gallagher and Davidson or either, and accountable for whatever they did in pursuance of his instructions.

"Now, just here comes the great question so far as the defendant in this case is concerned. Can you unequivocally believe what Gallagher and Davidson say in regard to the purpose for which he employed them. He is a competent but interested witness. They are also competent, but suspicious and tainted witnesses. But the jury may, if they believe their testimony, convict from it alone.

The jury after being out three hours returned with a verdict of guilty as indicted.

The courtroom was crowded with friends of the defendant at the time, and the verdict occasioned no surprise, but there was no outward demonstration. The defendant turned pale at the announcement and at once left the courtroom in company with his counsel.

Nothing Like an American Divorce.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Jan. 21.—Miss. Maude Alexandrine Lloyd Lopez has begun an action here for a divorce from General Enrique Lopez, of Buenos Ayres, Argentine Republic. The ground is desertion to fight the case. The defendant is the son of General Lopez, who eighteen or twenty years ago was president of the Argentine Republic. Six years ago the son began to imitate the father. He sacrified his interest in his father's estate for $100,000, went to Europe and Buenos Ayres, got a commission and was just preparing to incite a rebellion when his plans were frustrated. He became dissipated and his family was thrown upon their friends. It is said the defendant's attorney is General B. Parreira, who served in the rebellion led by Lopez's father twenty years ago. Judge C. B. Palmer, who is the reputation as being one of the attorney for Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., represents the interests of Mme. Lopez.

The Columbia Bank Clerk Gives Up.

COLUMBIA, Pa., Jan. 21.—John F. Miller, the clerk in the First National bank, of this place, who absconded just one year ago with about $6,000 of the bank's funds, arrived here, accompanied by Cashier Detwiler, of the bank who met him by arrangement in Philadelphia. Miller, who absconded he went to New York, thence to San Francisco. From there he sailed to Sydney, thence to Auckland, New Zealand, Chino and Sydney, where he wrote to Cashier Detweiler that he would come home, having tired of dodging the detectives. Miller was one of the most prominent persons in Columbia, and his flight and embezzlement created a big sensation.

Awaiting Their Chief.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Several distinguished persons are awaiting the return of President-elect Cleveland. Among them is Wilson D. Bissel, his old Buffalo law partner, who is being pushed by Erie county Democrats for the attorney generalship. Among others who came to the city during the inauguration they would find the president-elect here were Senator M. C. Butler, of South Carolina, and Congressman Warren Pinckney Shell, of New Hampshire. Senator Butler, on hearing that Mr. Cleveland had gone to Fremont, O., returned to Washington. Congressman Daniell remained in the city.

The Bridgeport agents refused. The clause would affect insurance business here to the extent of $6,000,000.

THE SWEATING SYSTEM

Ready Made Clothing Is Its Principal Product.

DISEASE AND POVERTY RESULT

A Terrible Condition Existing in the Large Cities, from Which the Purchasing Public of the Entire Country Is Liable to Suffer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 21.—The congressional investigating committee upon the sweating system has filed its report, which is a voluminous document.

The committee held sessions in Washington, New York, Chicago and Boston, examining wholesale clothing manufacturers, the representatives of the custom clothing trade, leaders of labor organizations interested in the clothing business and a number of middlemen or "sweaters" and their employees.

The committee says that in value of product the manufacture of clothing is probably the first in the country. Its returns from the last census year from cities of over 20,000 population aggregated $500,000,000.

The number of those directly employed in this manufacture is greater in proportion to the value of the product than in any other cause, while its intimate bearing upon the health and comfort of our people is even more prominent.

Under the present system the materials for garments are cut by manufacturers, bunched together and distributed in large lots to "sweaters," who employ many of whom has his own shop or factory. A typical example of these subcontractors' establishments is the so called tenement sweat shop, where the main workroom is made to accommodate from six to fifteen or even more "sweaters' families—men, women and children—while in the other large room of the flat is the domestic headquarters of the "sweater," with his living, sleeping and cooking arrangements overflowing into the workroom. These so called shops are, generally speaking, in the most squalid and densely populated parts of the city.

Contagion of the Sweat Shops.

Contagious diseases, which are especially prevalent among these people, thrive along with their work, and even death may distract from their occupation was the cause or the fear necessary to dispose of the body.

From the very nature of the business and the lack of facilities or wish to trace the destination of each garment, it is obvious that no considerable number of cases could be expected to be definitely established. The committee does not, however, deem ar-guments necessary to establish the serious danger involved, and in its very matter has had a personal experience which will not be forgotten. At Chicago a scarlet fever sign in the very poor tenement neighborhood in which they were inspecting sweat shops hinted at common conditions.

In Boston this impression was deepened by meeting a similar sign in the hallway of a house where clothing manufacture was then going on, while at New York the assurance that the committee's night inspection of the premises in the infected typhus patients had been taken from rooms where clothing was made, and that three cases of scarlet fever developed in the neighborhood within the past three weeks, became a startling one when, ten days later, scores of cases thereabout became recognized as scarlet fever and scarlet typhus at which New York city stood aghast.

The examination developed the fact that some considered the question of the finishing process or pre sing with a hot iron sufficient to eradicate germs of disease in clothing." Testimony of physicians, however, proved that this method was wholly inadequate. Dr. Daniels, of New York, stated that the temperature of the iron is not sufficiently high to destroy the germs.

Not a Divorce Mill.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Jan. 21.—In the divorce case of Therese Quetly against Dr. James A. Mears for desertion, both parties being formerly residents of New York, the judge elicited from the plaintiff that she came to this state for no other purpose than to obtain a divorce. He thereupon cut the motion short following: "I do not think the law contemplates making Fairfield county a place for wealthy New York people to come for the sole purpose of procuring a divorce. The decree is denied."

The Albany Legislature.

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—There were but fourteen senators present when the senate was called to order. After being in session six minutes the senate adjourned to Monday at 8 p. m. for want of a quorum. The assembly had a slim attendance, and after the introduction of a number of bills the house adjourned to Monday evening.

Labor Riots in Amsterdam.

AMSTERDAM, Jan. 21.—The unemployed workingmen of this city held a procession to impress upon the authorities and citizens the dire poverty which is afflicting the working classes. They became so disorderly that a body of 300 police attempted to disperse them. The mob resisted and a desperate melee occurred.

Fell from the Train.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 21.—The body of a well dressed man was found beside the Pennsylvania railroad track at Metuchen station. A pass saving on them the name of John H. Cole, Cleanfield, Pa., were found in his clothing. There were $130 and three promissory notes for $200 in his purse.

Careless Use of Powder.

OGDEN, U. T., Jan. 21.—Workmen were killed while thawing powder at a gravel bank. The explosion was terrific, one Kerr having his arms blown off and his head crushed into an unrecognizable mass. All the men were frightfully burned and lacerated.

A Scaffold Falls.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—By the breaking of a scaffold eight laborers at work on a building being erected were thrown to the ground, a distance of thirty feet. Frank Ward and Julius Emery were so badly hurt that they are not likely to recover.

Students Indulge in Fare.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—In the Columbia college gymnasium a fence fare has been established within the building for the past two weeks a gambling den. Roulette was the popular game.

ONE SURE CABINET MEMBER.

Carlisle's Formal Resignation to Accept the Treasury Portfolio.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 21.—Governor Brown received the following letter in yesterday's mail from Senator Carlisle: "I hereby resign the office of Senator from the state of Kentucky in the congress of the United States, to take effect on Feb. 4." The resignation of Senator Carlisle was transmitted by the governor to the state senate. The decision of Governor Brown not to be a senatorial candidate is final. Lindsay men claim a large share of the Brown following. McCreary no less certainly secures another large or perhaps larger share, and Stone will come up minus in the readjustment. Last night the figures, while not pretended to be accurate, averaged about thus: Lindsay, 44; McCreary, 34; Stone, 23.

J. G. CARLISLE.

POPULISTS UNSEAT REPUBLICANS.

The Kansas Legislative Turmoil Apparently Just Begun.

TOPEKA, Jan. 21.—The Populist house committee on elections in the morning made a record unseating Herman, of Pawnee; Campbell, of Doniphan; Bowers, of Grant, and Elling, of Ness, the four Republican postmaster members. While the Republican house took a recess several of their members remained in their seats. Counting the Republicans, the Populist house had a quorum of certified members present, and it proceeded in one, two, three order to unseat seven Republicans and seat as many Populists. Having got this start, the Populists proceeded to pour in bills and resolutions by the bushel.

The senate elections committee will decide the contests in favor of the Populist contestants, and the Republicans, led by Baker and O'Brien, have decided to adopt filibustering tactics in order to prevent them from being unseated until after the United States senator is elected.

The Populists, however, propose to adopt extreme measures if necessary. J. W. Breidenthal, the Populist chairman, said in the morning: "If the supreme court decides the laws passed by our house to be unconstitutional, our fellows will disband their organization and go with the Republican house. All this talk I read in the papers that we will undertake to impeach the supreme court is nonsense."

The secretary of state refused to honor the requisition of the Republican house for stationery, and a demand was made on State Printer Snow, who has addressed a letter to the Republican speaker, announcing that he will supply all stationery needed and also print the Republican house journal at his own expense. It is believed that Snow does this with the consent of the Populists, and it is a straw indicating that the Populists will surrender should the supreme court declare the Populist house unconstitutional.

THE NEW JERSEY COLLISION.

Thieves Ride the Pockets of the Victim Blewitt.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The fixing of the responsibility for the accident on the Pennsylvania railroad Thursday night, just outside of Jersey City, by which one life was lost and many injured, rests entirely on the word of two men who tell different stories. A startling fact developed when Blewitt's body was examined by daylight by the morgue attaches. Every pocket in the man's clothing save one had been turned inside out and everything taken.

At the Pennsylvania offices it was reported that all of the injured are doing well. Engineer Martingale, of the Newark local, who was pinned under his engine, was said to be improving slowly.

A Train Goes Through a Bridge.

PERU, Ind., Jan. 21.—One of the most disastrous wrecks ever recorded in the history of the Lake Erie and Western railway occurred at the Wabash river bridge. The fast north bound express reached the abutment of the second span when the whole thing collapsed, taking the entire train down into the bed of the frozen river thirty feet below. The train immediately took fire and was consumed. Only one person was killed. Another serious wreck was averted by the coolness of Brakeman Koff, who, despite his injuries, ran back and signaled a freight, which was following, and which was stopped almost at the edge of the bridge.

Politics in Wyoming.

CHEYENNE, Jan. 21.—The Democrats and Populists have gained complete control of the Wyoming house of representatives. The elections committee seated Pickett (Dem.), which gives the Democrats sixteen, Republicans twelve and the Populists five. The Populists have made a full and complete coalition with the Democrats. The senatorial fight waxes warm. Governor Baxter is Wesley in the lead, but New, with Beck and Corn, are close behind.

Republican Leaders Confer.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—Chairman Thomas H. Carter, of the Republican national committee, arrived in town and had an interview with General James S. Clarkson. Before his departure it will probably be determined when the coming meeting of the committee shall be held.

An Embezzler Returns.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Charles G. Sinclair, of New York, who embezzled $60,000 from Armour, was arrested here and taken to New York. He spent $40,000 of the missing $60,000 of the plunder, besides turning over his promising race horse, Blizzard.

The Umbria to Sail with Patched Shaft.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The Umbria will go back to England on Jan. 28. She will carry no passengers on her return. The engineers will run at half their full power, so as not to strain the mended shaft too much.

Smith and Pritchard Matched.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—The following cable has been received here from London: Jem Smith and Ted Pritchard agreed to fight at catchweights with gloves for £200 (open to £500) a side and the championship.

New York's Finances.

ALBANY, Jan. 21.—State comptroller Campbell in his annual report says, "There is now practically no state debt, and the state's finances are in a satisfactory and sound condition."

Brookdale Sold.

RED BANK, N. J., Jan. 21.—Brookdale, the famous old stock farm of the late D. D. Withers, has been sold to William P. Thompson, head of the Lead trust.

CAUSES CONSTERNATION

The Arrest of Dr. Herz Stirs Up the Legislators.

HE HOLDS GRAVE PANAMA SECRETS.

The Wily Doctor, Though Sick in London, Will Fight Extradition—Before Arrest He Had Expressed a Willingness to Surrender to the Authorities.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—The prospect of Cornelius Herz's return to France and the possibility that he will reveal the evidence which he holds against conspicuous politicians and financiers have excited general apprehension. The gravest fears exist on account of the senate, whose members are believed to be threatened more seriously than all others through Dr. Herz's return. Everybody feels that the worst will come out as soon as Herz shall come before the examining committee.

The Clerk's Disclosures.

After Deputy Gerville-Reache had informed the parliamentary commission of inquiry that he would introduce in the chamber a bill forbidding recipients of Panama money to alienate their estates, M. Andrieux was called upon to throw more light upon the bribery of 104 deputies, concerning whom he testified on Dec. 23. The same rule out of the list, he said, was that of a high political dignitary. He had promised on his honor not to reveal this name, and he must persist in this refusal.

M. Andrieux refused also to give other names on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence against the men named, and that he did not wish to blacken reputations rashly.

Reinach Tried to Poison the Doctor.

M. Andrieux said that Herz, after quarreling with Reinach, had sent to M. Constans, then minister of the interior, documents showing that Reinach had tried to poison him. Subsequently, however, Reinach and Herz had been reconciled.

Herz's Physical Condition.

LONDON, Jan. 21.—The police have seized all of Cornelius Herz's money and effects. The medical certificate given by the doctor to the detectives who arrested Herz says that he is suffering from "affection of the heart, diabetes, great prostration and functional derangement."

There are three counts in the indictment against Cornelius Herz. The first concerns the 600,000 francs received by him from Charles de Lesseps; the second, the 8,000,000 francs received by him from Baron de Reinach; the third, the menacing letters written by him with the intention of blackmailing Baron de Reinach.

ROOSEVELT APPEARS.

After a Period of Political Quiet He Speaks at a Republican Banquet.

CHICAGO, Jan. 21.—Distinguished Republicans from all parts of the country participated in the third annual banquet of the Hamilton club at the Auditorium last evening. Among those who sat at the speakers' table were the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt, First Assistant Postmaster General H. Clay Evans, General Russell A. Alger, Albert B. Shaw, editor of The Review of Reviews, and numerous prominent Chicagoans. One of the hits of the evening was the response of Mr. Roosevelt to the toast, "Americanism and Immigration." Mr. Roosevelt denounced both knownothingism and Cahensylism, and paid a high tribute to the Americanism of Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Ireland and their followers in the priesthood. His remedy for the evils of immigration was the strict regulation of steamship companies and the imposition of a heavy head tax on all the immigrants.

A Bad Day for Autographs.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A sale of autograph letters and signatures of various notables was held at Bang's auction rooms. George Washington's letters sold for less than half what they usually bring. One written by Washington to Richard Henry Lee went for thirty-seven dollars. Another to Thomas Jefferson concerning his continuing in office brought but thirty-four dollars. Signers of the Declaration of Independence fared hardly better. An autograph of Thomas Lynch, the parent of all the signers, went for twenty-four dollars, while the signatures of modern men of prominence in the literary and artistic line went for a few cents each.

A Holdover Legislature for Michigan.

LANSING, Jan. 21.—In the senate a joint resolution was presented for the submission to the people of an amendment providing for the election of a holdover legislature at the first election, one-half to be elected for two years and one-half for four years, and one-half for two years at each election thereafter.

Fifteen Thousand Dollars for an Arm.

NEW YORK, Jan. 21.—A jury brought in a verdict of $15,000 damages against the Forty second street and Grand Street railroad in favor of Charles Frothenky for the loss of an arm.

The Bancroft's Trials.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 21.—The naval academy practice ship Bancroft arrived here early last evening and is making her speed trials today.

How to Transform a Lamp Chimney Into an Effective Electric Machine.

By means of the simple arrangement here illustrated one can repeat on a small scale many of the experiments usually performed in a fully equipped laboratory. To make this little electric machine one should take a lamp chimney and fasten round its center with a little gum or paste, a ring of thin tinfoil, familiar to us being used to wrap round cakes of chocolate, etc. Paste also a narrow slip of similar foil along the glass from one of its ends to within about one third of an inch of the ring above mentioned. This done, grasp a silk handkerchief round one of these cylindrical bradawls which are used for cleaning lamp chimneys, and with it rub smartly the interior of the tube, taking care that your fingers do not touch any part of the tinfoil. If you try the experiment in a darkened room, each time you draw the brush completely out of the glass cylinder you will see a brilliant spark flash between the two strips of foil, affording an excellent example of the electrification of glass by friction.

For another experiment attach to the glass tube, passing it around the ring of tinfoil, a bit of brass or iron wire, to the lower end of which you have suspended strips of thin paper, obtained by cutting a sheet of common paper lengthwise into three portions. Rub the inside of the tube as before, but inserting the brush, still wrapped in the handkerchief, at the opposite end—i. e., that remote from the straight strip of foil. The metallic ring becomes charged with electricity, which passes down the wire to the little strips of paper, and from all are there observed immediately repelling each other. By these experiments you will have demonstrated—

First—That substances which are bad conductors, such as glass, may be electrified by friction.

Second—That substances which are good conductors, as metal, are transmit the electric fluid from the body which is electrified the glass to one which is not so (the paper).

Third lastly, that substances charged with electricity of the same kind—i. e., positive or negative, as the case may be—repel each other.

How Are Young Spiders Fed?

Scientific books teach that young spiders derive their food from the atmosphere. A correspondent of Nature, however, records an incident which does not agree with this theory. He discovered in a plowed field an enormous spider of the lycosidæ species, which each day, suddenly disappeared in a very curious appearance, being covered with scores of tiny spiders from one end of her body to the other. When she was touched with a reed even the young spiders scampered off at a lively rate, only to return when left to themselves. The spinnarets and abdomen of the mother spider were greatly distended. Suddenly there was a complete flow of white liquid, which the young crept lily devoured. Examining the fluid under the microscope, the observer was fully convinced that this was veritable milk, and that the spider had at least nursed her young instead of bringing them up on atmospheric moisture.

Carbonic Acid to Remove Scale.

At a recent meeting of a German philosophical society it was recommended to remove boiler scale by the use of a tank filled with carbonic acid, connecting with the boiler previously filled with cold water. It is said to act as follows: The water is soon saturated with carbonic acid, and this carbonic acid water dissolves the carbonate of lime, the principal component of boiler scale, forming acid carbonate of lime. The apparatus combined with it is precipitated, and on the water being drawn off the boiler is found to be free from scale.

Vaporized Petroleum for Fuel.

For fuel in the new hot blast heating furnace in the shrinking pit at the Washington ordnance shops it is said vaporized petroleum has been very successful. The officers in charge of the shops have under consideration a plan for using it in the furnace of the boilers used in the shops, thus doing away with coal entirely. It is proposed to have the fuel oil tanks sunk in the ground at a safe distance from all build ings and carry it by a pipe to the boiler house, where it will be vaporized and blown into the furnace.—Power.

Scientific Brevities.

The resurrection of the growth of plants and trees under the influence of the electric light has not yet been fully determined, but one or two attempts will enable any one to achieve the feat without the slightest trouble.

A new notion in distress signals for a ship at sea, noted by a contemporary, is a short iron kite carrying incandescent lights. The current from the ship's dynamo is conveyed along the kite string.

A scientific society in Germany purposes to devote about $10,000 to the construction of a huge balloon fifty-six feet in diameter, with a capacity of 2,500 cubic meters of gas. It is to be made of Chinese cotton stuff and will be coated with vulcanized gum. A special valve of a new kind will be used. In the interests of aerial navigation it is proposed to make within a year something like fifty journeys with this balloon and to ascend to as high an altitude as possible.

India rubber curtains that can be decorated in any manner desired are being produced by a firm in Germany.

Hard black glass is a new form of pavement and building blocks.

A Hint for the Sickroom.

The problem of replenishing a coal fire in absolute silence in a sickroom or in the rooms adjoining is solved by filling the coal into small paper bags, such as grocers use, or bags may be made for the purpose instead of the coal scuttle, and placing both bag and coal on the fire. This may be done even where the stove is a self feeder by watching the fire and adding the little bags as needed through the stove door instead of the top.

The Best Washcloth.

Dr. Erasmus Wilson, the famous skin specialist, has declared in favor of using the flannels for the friction of the skin when bathing. He says: "The hand is endowed with mind and knows much better than can a lifeless sponge or a coarse piece of towelling the needs of each portion with which it comes in contact."

Good Health

A TYPHOID FEVER THEORY.

It Is Miasmatic or Earth Born and Occurs Chiefly on Gravel Than Clay Soil.

Speaking of typhoid fever in Dublin, Sir Charles Cameron has said he had come to the conclusion that there and perhaps elsewhere it was miasmatic or earth born. In Dublin during the last decade one person in 141 living on clay soils had typhoid fever and one in every ninety-two living on gravels. The dissemination of the microorganisms of the disease took place when the soils became dry, and this occurred more frequently with gravel than with clay. When all the organic debris produced in towns was quickly removed and when the dangerous subterranean atmospheres were prevented from entering dwellings, or even streets, when sewage flowed steadily day and night through well constructed main sewers, and when wells were thoroughly drained and kept free from filth, then a substantial reduction in the mortality caused by typhoid fever, and indeed by other diseases, might be expected.

To Remove a Cinder from the Eye.

A simple plan for removing cinders, bits of sand or road dust from the eyes is described by a writer in Good Housekeeping, on the authority of a railroad man, who has never known it to fail. As soon as the presence of a foreign substance in the eye is indicated draw the upper eyelid away from the eyeball somewhat and pass the under lid up beneath it, holding them gently in place with the first finger of each hand. Then give one or two vigorous blasts through the nostril of that side, firmly closing the other, when it will be found that the intruder is gone. Where or how the exit took place is not easy to explain, but the fact of relief is the principal consideration in the case. The tapping of the eyelids as often as first be found slightly difficult, but one or two attempts will enable any one to achieve the feat without the slightest trouble.

A Spur for the Digestion.

The taste for olives is an acquired one. On first acquaintance the taste is decidedly disagreeable to most people, but the palate soon gets over the squeamishness, and in a little time the fruit is eaten almost as a matter of course. Another acquired taste, which is by no means singular. As a proof of their splendid digestive qualities, in the south of England, where olives are extensively used as an article of food, indigestion is scarcely ever heard of; in fact, so little known, that the word itself has no comprehensible meaning.

For Corns and Callosities.

Popular Science News notes the following treatment recommended by a German authority: Moisten the callosities with a weak antiseptic solution and cover it with a layer of pure, crystallized salicylic acid. Upon this place a disk of cotton wool soaked in a benzoic acid solution and cover it with a leaf of gutta percha. Attach the whole with a bandage. If the callosity is not very thick the dressing may be left for five days, when the indentation will be found detached from the adjacent tissues. When the callosity is excessively thick, as on the sole of the foot, the dressing may be left for ten days or removed after five days.

WHERE TO TAKE LEAVE.

Say Goodby and Give the Parting Hand Close to Drawing Room.

It was once thought kind and friendly to accompany a guest to the outer door of the house and to take leave of her there, lingering often for last fragments of gossip and last confidences. A gentlewoman of the old school confessed the other day that the sensible custom now in vogue, which gives the parting hand deep and says the parting word of good will in the drawing room, seemed so her cold and formal.

It has its basis in common sense, notwithstanding its appearance of ceremony, says Harper's Bazar. Halls through which a current of cold from the street is seen drifting keenly as often as the outer doors are opened are usually a little, sometimes a great deal, lower in temperature than are the living and entertaining rooms of a house. Portieres, curtains, screens, shut out the chill of the world, into which one goes with wraps and overcoats. The indoor dress is thin; often, in a warm house, of summer material and fabrication.

Many a cold, many an attack of pneumonia, had in the old time had its origin in the mistaken hospitality which to speed the parting guest detained him on the threshold. Taking leave in the drawing room. Say goodby there. Good form and good sense will be alike satisfied with this.

Chrysanthemums.

When a child is born it is proper to send letters of congratulation and suitable presents. A child is usually christened between three and four months after birth. Invitations for christening are engraved on cards. If a reception or tea follows after the christening the mother receives her guests seated by a silver or gold bowl filled with cut flowers. Guests usually appear in street costumes, but the mother and friends receiving may appear in demitoilet or in full dress, according to the number of guests invited and the importance of the reception. The godmothers are nowadays often quite young, and are expected to retain a life interest in their goddchild and give substantial proof of remembrance on birthdays and holidays.

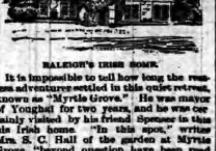
SIR WALTER RALEIGH'S HOUSE.

Where Tobacco Was First Smoked and Potatoes First Planted in Ireland.

The house here illustrated enjoys the distinction of having been the Irish residence of Sir Walter Raleigh. It is a fine old Elizabethan structure, built by the great navigator in 1588, and is situated at Youghal, in the county of Cork.



RALEIGH'S IRISH HOME.

It is impossible to tell how long the romantic adventures related in this quaint retreat, known as "Myrtle Grove." He was mayor of Youghal for two years, and he was certainly visited by his friend Spenser in this his Irish home. "In this spot," writes Mrs. S. C. Hall of the garden at Myrtle Grove, "beyond question have been read portions of the 'Faerie Queene' long before the world became familiar with the divine conception.

"At whose approach the soul of Petrarch wept. For here certainly the immortal bard had communion with his 'dear friend' and brother poet, whom he described as 'the somer nightingale.'

"His poets as skilful in that art as any.

"In the garden there is a group of four aged yew trees, which tradition states to have been planted by Raleigh, and where it requires no stretch of fancy to believe that he has many a time sat, head and talked as jolled in the summer time, dreaming of El Dorado, in the vain search of which he sacrificed his fortune and ultimately his life."

The grounds appear to be remarkable for the luxurious growth of myrtles, bays, arbutus and other exotics. Some of the myrtles, from which the place received its name, are of considerable size. Of the latter, it is said, have happened during any night, hail, sleet and ice shall be so strewn with ashes, saw-dust or sand within four hours after cessation of the storm by which such snow, hail, sleet or ice was deposited, and in all cases mentioned in this section, the snow, hail, sleet and ice which shall have been so congealed, shall be so removed from the sidewalks and gutters aforesaid to the respective widths aforesaid, within four hours after the same shall have been so strewn with ashes, saw-dust or sand as to render such removal practicable without injury to such sidewalks or gutters, save and except that in case of the fall of snow on the forenoon of any day, in all which last mentioned case the same shall be removed within the hours of the forenoon of the next following morning.

SEC. 2. For each violation of this ordinance every person violating the same shall be subject to a penalty of five dollars, recoverable before the police justice of the city.

THE PUMPKIN PYE.

The barth of the Hudson may sing of the melon,
Its smooth jetty seeds and its ripe, ruddy core,
And the feast of the reaper with ecstasy dwell on,
Reclining at noon on the cool, breezy shore,
For me, the rich soil of New England produces
An offering more dear to the taste and the eye
The bright yellow pumpkin—how mellow its juices,
When tempered with ginger, and bak'd into pye!

Let others with dainties their appetite pamper,
And gone with delight on the splendors of plate;
Be stunned with a bustle, and bid pages scamper,
Such pleasures as these I resign to the great;
But give me the feast when no knives and forks clatter,
Where such to the nest cheery table draws nigh,
And carves for himself from the broad earthen platter
A slice of the sweet, yellow, smooth pumpkin pye.

There are those who delight in the fig and the date,
In quaffing the milk from the cocoanut's shell;
Some dote on olive and pomegranate lavish their praise on,
The orange's glow and the pineapple's smell.
I leave them the products of both of the Indies,
And all the rich fruits of a tropical sky;
Their sample gone soon, and leaves and tissues,
And ask no dessert save the sweet pumpkin pye.

Then hail to the mass of the pumpkin and melon!
The Frenchman may laugh and the Englishman sneer,
At the land of the Bible and psalm book and Bunyan;
Still, still to my bosom her green hills are dearer,
Her daughters are pure as her bright crystal fountains,
And Hymen, if ever thy blessings I try,
Oh, give me the girl of my own native mountains
Who knows how to temper the sweet pumpkin pye.

SCIENTIFIC RECREATION.

How to Transform a Lamp Chimney into an Electric Static Machine.

By means of the simple arrangement here illustrated one can repeat on a small scale many of the experiments usually performed in a fully equipped laboratory. To make this little electric machine one should take a lamp chimney and fasten round its center with a little gum or paste, a ring of thin tinfoil familiar as being used to wrap round cakes of chocolate, etc. Paste also a narrow slip of similar foil along the glass from one of its ends to within about one third of an inch of the ring above mentioned. This done, wrap a silk handkerchief round one of those cylindrical brushes which are used for cleaning lamp chimneys, and with it rub smartly the interior of the tube taking care that your fingers do not touch any part of the tinfoil. If you try the experiment in a darkened room, each time you draw the brush completely out of the glass cylinder you will see a brilliant spark flash between the two strips of foil, affording an excellent example of the electrification of glass by friction.

For another experiment attach to the glass tube passing it around the ring of tinfoil, a bit of brass or iron wire, to the lower end of which you have suspended a strip of thin paper, obtained by cutting a couple of evenly-sized papers lengthwise into three portions. Rub the inside of the tube as before, but inserting the brush, still wrapped in the handkerchief, at the opposite end—i. e. that remote from the straight strip of foil. The metallic ring becomes charged with electricity, which passes down the wire to the little strips of paper, and you will see them diverge, mutually repelling each other. By these experiments you will have demonstrated—

First—That substances which are bad conductors, such as glass, may be electrified by friction.

Second—That substances which are good conductors, as metal wire transmit the electric fluid from a body which is electrified (the glass) to one which is not so (the paper).

Third—Lastly, that substances charged with electricity of the same kind—i. e., good conductors—as the case may be—repel each other.

Moisture is the chief cause of failure in electrical experiments. You should therefore choose the driest of weather for your operations and thoroughly dry before the fire both handkerchief and lamp chimney.

How Are Young Spiders Fed?

Recent life history touch that young spiders derive their food from the atmosphere. A correspondent of Science, however, records an incident which does not agree with this theory. He discovered in a plowed field an enormous spider of the tarantula species, which was 1½ inches long. She presented a very curious appearance, being covered with scores of tiny spiders from one end of her body to the other. When she was touched with a weed stem the young spiders scampered off as a lively rate, only to return when left to themselves. The epimacute and abdomen of the mother spider were greatly distended. Suddenly there was a copious flow of white liquid, which the young greedily devoured. Examining the fluid under the microscope, the observer was fully convinced that this was veritable milk, and that the spider had at least nursed her young instead of bringing them up on atmospheric moisture.

Carbonic Acid to Remove Scale.

At a recent meeting of a German philosophical society it was recommended to remove boiler scale by the use of a tank filled with carbonic acid, connecting with the boiler previously filled with cold water. It is said to act as follows: The water is soon saturated with carbonic acid, and this carbonic acid water dissolves the carbonate of lime, the principal component of boiler scale, forming acid carbonate of lime. The gypsum combined with it is precipitated, and on the water being drawn off the boiler is found to be free from scale.

Vaporized Petroleum for Fuel.

For fuel in the new hot blast heating furnace in the shrinking pit at the Wedding ton ordnance shops it is said vaporized petroleum has been very successful. The officers in charge of the shops have under consideration a plan for using it in the furnaces of the boilers used in the shops, thus doing away with coal entirely. It is proposed to store the oil in tanks sunk in the ground at a safe distance from all build ings and carry it by a pipe to the boiler house, where it will be vaporized and blown into the furnaces.—Power.

The electric motor fan has been applied to chimney flues to create drafts where very high buildings are built adjoining low ones.

A scientific society in Germany purposes to devote about $10,000 to the construction of a huge balloon fifty-six feet in diameter, with a capacity of 3,000 cubic meters of gas. It is to be made of Egyptian cotton stuff and will be coated with vulcanized gum. A special valve of a new kind will be used. In the interests of aerial navigation it is proposed to make within a year something like fifty journeys with this balloon and to ascend to as high an altitude as possible.

GOOD HEALTH

A TYPHOID FEVER THEORY.

It Is Miasmatic or Earth Born and Occurs Oftener on Gravel Than Clay Soil.

Sir Charles Cameron has said he had come to the conclusion that there and perhaps elsewhere it was miasmatic or earth born. In Dublin during the last decade one person in 144 living on clay soils had typhoid fever and one in every ninety-two living on gravels. The disengagements of the micro organisms of the disease took place when the soils became dry, and this occurred more frequently with gravel than with clay. When all the organic debris produced in towns was quickly removed and when the dangerous subterranean atmosphere was prevented from entering dwellings, or even streets, where sewage flowed steadily day and night through well constructed main sewers, and when soils were thoroughly drained and kept free from filth, then a substantial reduction in the mortality caused by typhoid fever, and indeed by other diseases, might be expected.

To Remove a Cinder from the Eye.

A simple plan for removing cinders, bits of sand or road dust from the eyes is described by a writer in Good Housekeeping, on the authority of a railroad man, who has never known it to fail. As soon as the presence of a foreign substance in the eye is indicated draw the upper eyelid away from the eyeball somewhat and pass the under lid up beneath it, holding them gently in that position with the fingers of one hand. Then grip one or two vigorous blasts through the nostril of that side, firmly closing the other, when it will be found that the cinder is gone. Where or how the exit took place is not easy to explain, but the fact of relief is the principal consideration in the case. The lapping of the eyelids may at first be found slightly difficult, but one or two attempts will enable any one to achieve the feat without the slightest trouble.

A Spur for the Digestive.

The taste for olives is an acquired one. On first acquaintance the taste is decidedly disagreeable to most people, but the palate soon gets over the squeamishness, and in a little time and with little trouble learns to take them with intense relish, says The Confectioners' Journal. It is an undoubted fact that olives are uncommonly wholesome eaten entirely by themselves, as they materially help to spur the digestive machinery whenever it is inclined to be anywise sluggish. As a proof of their splendid digestive qualities, the results of Peruvian guano is extensively used as an article of food, indigestion is scarcely ever heard of; in fact, so little known, that the word itself has no comprehensible meaning.

For Corns and Callosities.

Popular Science News notes the following treatment recommended by a German authority: Moisten the excrescences with, as antiseptic solution and cover it with a layer of pure, crystallized salicylic acid. Upon this place a disk of cotton wool soaked in a boracic acid solution and cover it with a leaf of gutta percha. Attach the whole with a bandage. If the callosity is not very thick the softening may be left for five days, when the induration will be found detached from the adjacent tissues. When the callosity is

WHERE TO TAKE LEAVE.

Say Goodby and Give the Parting Hand Clasp in the Drawing Room.

It was once thought kind and friendly to accompany a guest to the outer door of the house and to take leave of her there, lingering often for last fragments of gossip and last affectionate adieu. A gentler custom of the old school confirmed the other day that the best manners now in vogue, which gives the parting hand clasp and says the parting word of good will in the drawing room, seemed to her cold and formal.

It has its basis in good sense, notwithstanding its apparent air of ceremony, says Harper's Bazar. Halls through which a current of cold from the street is sent drifting keenly are often at the very time doors are opened are usually a little, sometimes a great deal, lower in temperature than are the living and entertaining rooms of a house. For these, carrying, serious, shut out the chill of the world, into which one goes with wraps and overcoats. The indoor dress is thin; often, in a warm house, of summer material and fashioning.

Many a cold, many an attack of pneumonia, had to the old time its origin in the splashed, muddy whirl to spend the parting guest detained him on the threshold. Take leave in the drawing room. Say good by there. Good form and good sense will be alike satisfied with this.

Christenings.

When a child is born it is proper to send letters of congratulation and suitable presents. A child is usually christened between the ages of three and six months. Invitations for christening are issued on cards. If a reception or tea follows after the christening the mother receives her guests assisted by a sister or other relative or very near friend. Gloves usually appear in street costumes, but the mother and friends receiving may appear in demitoilet or in full dress, according to the number of guests invited and the importance of the reception. The godmothers are nowadays often quite young, and are expected to retain a life interest in their godchild and give substantial proof of remembrance on birthdays and holidays.

RALEIGH'S IRISH HOME.

SIR WALTER RALEIGH'S HOUSE.

Where Tobacco Was First Smoked and Potatoes First Planted in Ireland.

The house here illustrated enjoys the distinction of having been the Irish residence of Sir Walter Raleigh. It is a fine old Elizabethan structure, built by the great navigator in 1585, and is situated at Youghal, in the county of Cork.

It is impossible to tell how long the romantic adventure-settled in this quiet retreat, known as "Myrtle Grove." He was mayor of Youghal for two years, and he was certainly visited by his friend Spenser in this his Irish home. "In this spot," writes Mrs. S. C. Hall of the garden at Myrtle Grove, "beyond question have been read portions of the 'Faerie Queene' long before the world became familiar with the divine conception

"At whose approach the soul of Petrarch wept.'

For here certainly the immortal bard held communion with 'those friend' and brother poet, whom he described as 'the somer nightingale.'

"Himselfe as stiffest in that art as any.

"In the garden there is a group of four aged yew trees, which tradition states to have been planted by Raleigh, and where it requires no stretch of fancy to believe that he has many a time sat, read and talked and lolled in the summer time, dreaming of El Dorado, in the vain search of which he sacrificed his fortune and ultimately his life."

The grounds appear to be admirably suited for the luxurious growth of myrtles, bays, arbutus and other exotics. Some of the myrtles from which the place received its name are trained twenty feet in height. Here also the first potatoes ever planted in Ireland were grown, and also the first tobacco plant imported by Raleigh. Every one knows the story of the servant maid who emptied a pail of water over her master, thinking him to be on fire. Whatever truth there may be in this tradition, it is generally reported that the first pipe of tobacco lit in Ireland was smoked here. The house will thus be seen to be of unique interest.

The Use of the Loving Cup.

Every prosperous woman's club has its loving cup, but how many of the guests who see it gracing the banquet know the origin or the graceful ceremonial which should be observed in drinking from its sides? The Cup Circulus. The loving cup should have two or three handles and a cover and is handed to the prin cipal guest as the toasts begin. The guest takes it by the handles, and standing turns to the person nearest, who also stands, and both bow. Then while the second guest removes the lid the first one drinks and with another bow passes the cup to his neighbor, who replaces the lid and presents it in turn to the next guest, and so the ceremony is repeated.

In the old days of chivalry and of trench ery, as a man while drinking from the cup was practically defenseless, his companion was required to remove the cover with his sword hand that he might not take advantage of the other.

Every One for Himself.

"Every one for himself, and the devil catch the hindmost." This proverb, which is widely diffused over Europe, some suppose had its origin in an ancient Spanish legend concerning the devil, who had a school for magic at Toledo. At the close of the term the graduating class were made to run through a subterranean hall, the venerable president being entitled to the hindmost if he could catch him. It was added that as the hindmost had the benefit of a post grad uate course he returned out the last magician, but his soul was hopelessly forfeit. In Cervantes, however, and in Heywood, the proverb appears, "Every man for himself, and God for us all." The earliest appearance in English literature of the now common form seems to be, says Walsh in his handbook of literary curiosities, in Burton's "Anatomy of Melancholy," "Every man for himself, his own ends, the devil for all."

He That Was Born to Be Hanged.

"He that was born to be hanged will never be drowned," is an old English proverb which has its equivalent in other languages. Thus the Danes say, "He that is hanged will never be drowned," and the Swedes "He goes over the gallows." The Italians have it, "He that is to die by the gallows may dance on the river," and the Dutch say "What belongs to the rasher does not drown."

Shakespeare alludes to this proverb in "The Tempest" when he makes Gonzago say of the boatswain: "I have great comfort from this fellow; methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him. His complexion is perfect gallows. Stand fast, good fate, to his hanging! Make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage. If he be not born to be hanged our case is miserable."

How the Worm Gets Into the Chestnut.

A scientific person explains this point as follows: When the nut is still green an insect comes along, and hunting up a place in which to have its eggs hatched lights upon the green chestnut and stings it. At the time of deposition some of its eggs are hatching. The insect pierces the nut as well as the shell, and in depositing the eggs to be hatched adapted place by instinct. The floury matter in the nut turns to sugar, and sugar contains carbon, which produces heat.

Great Men Always Blue Eyed.

"Among the great men of the world blue eyes have always predominated," affirms somebody who looks like a scientific man, as follows: Socrates, Shakespeare, Locke, Bacon, Milton, Goethe, Franklin, Napoleon and Bonaparte all had blue eyes. The eyes of Bismarck, Gladstone, Humboldt, Virchow and Buchner are also of this color, and all the presidents of the United States, from General Harrison to Washington, have the same cerulean color as to their optics.

In view of Utah's struggle for statehood, and the general earnestly just granted to Mormons by President Harrison, this article possesses a timely interest; and the numerous beautiful illustrations, reproduced from photographs, admirably supplement the text.

—The Columbian cycling calendar for '93 is an artistic one. It consists of a circular piece of cardboard, 47 inches in circumference, the calendar picture being framed with a reproduction of the pneumatic rubber tire. The picture is in fifteen water colors, and represents a country scene with a bicycling couple in the foreground, resting in a cosey nook after a delightful ride. The original picture is by a celebrated American artist, and the reproduction is so close to the painting that one hardly realizes that the delightful tones and shades are not the true bush marks. This calendar, issued by the Pope Mfg. Co., of Boston, is adapted for the library, dining-room, parlor, or business office.

AN OLD MAN INJURED.

While Picking Coal on the Railroad Track.

Mr. Christopher Becker of East Fourth street was injured on the railroad, near the gas house, Saturday. He was picking coal on the track, and, being deaf, did not hear an approaching engine until it was close upon him. He attempted to get out of the way, but it was too late, and the wheels of the locomotive passed over his leg, crushing his ankle bone. He was carried by friends to his home, where he remained until this morning, when he was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Mr. Becker is over seventy years of age. He was in the habit of going on the tracks to pick coal nearly every day, and while so doing was struck by an engine some time ago. The engine was running very slow at the time and the old man escaped injury.

A FIRE AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

Mr. Marsh's Barn and Contents Destroyed.

A barn belonging to Mr. John Marsh of Scotch Plains was entirely destroyed by fire early yesterday morning.

The fire broke out about twelve o'clock, and was first seen by Mr. Ilsley, a neighbor, who hastily gave the alarm.

The flames had gained such headway by the time they were discovered that it was impossible to quench them, and the Scotch Plains firemen formed a bucket brigade, as the old hand engine was frozen up, and turned attention to the saving of adjoining buildings. They worked hard and succeeded in keeping the fire confined to the building in which it started.

Two horses, one cow, two pigs and all of Mr. Marsh's poultry were burned up. He saved his wagons.

It is supposed that the fire was of incendiary origin as a quantity of matches, some of them half burned, were found near the burning building.

The reflection from the blazing barn was so bright that some one sent in an alarm from box 18 in this city. The engine companies responded, but returned after going as far as Leland avenue.

PERSONAL.

Mr. T. K. Keller of East Front street has gone West on an extended business trip.

Justice Crossley of North Plainfield is confined to his home with an attack of the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harmon of Bridgeport, Conn., are visiting Mr. Harmon's parents on Harmony street, North Plainfield.

George Henry, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry of West Third street, died this morning with convulsions.

Mrs. Augustus Bolmer, of Somerville, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Jonathan W. Dodge, of East Front street has returned home.

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the Scotch Plains Public Library the following officers were elected: President, Mrs. Charles L. Sykes; Vice President, John Robinson; Recording Secretary, William B. Noble; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr.; Treasurer, Dr. Frank W. Westcott.

Mr. J. F. Pearson, a resident of Harrison street, North Plainfield, feels very indignant over the treatment he says his boys received yesterday afternoon at the depot. He says the boys, who had missed one train for Bound Brook, and were sitting quietly in the waiting room until the next train should arrive, were ordered out by a policeman. He says the boys were not disorderly in any way and that they showed their tickets to the policeman, but he told them to "clear out." They obeyed. If, as stated, the boys were not noisy, the policeman exceeded his authority.

Very impressive funeral services were held by the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein Society, at their hall on Somerset street yesterday afternoon, over the remains of their late brother, Mr. Edward Mau. Mr. M. Reubner made an address and the Rev. Mr. Schnellendorssell had charge of the religious services. The singing section of the society sang their ode to the dead. About one hundred and twenty-five members of the two organizations were present and marched to the grave. Interment was made at Evergreen Cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Robert Skinner, John Kelley, and Jacob Coude, of the Pond Machine Tool Company Association; and Messrs. Henry Haurand, Rudolph Kerstinge and C. C. Koegel of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein Society.

NEW JERSEY Y. M. C. A.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE STATE CONVENTION AT CAMDEN.

President W. H. Murray of the Plainfield Association Will Deliver an Address on "State Work"—A Large Attendance Promised.

The Twenty-fourth Annual Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations in New Jersey promises to be more interesting, and will be a larger gathering than any of its predecessors. The Committee on Programme, of which Edward P. Holden, of Madison, is chairman, has worked hard and successfully. Mr. Drake, State chairman, who knows the Association in New Jersey from the beginning, says that the programme for Camden is better than any heretofore offered. All the music of the series of meetings has been put under the control of a choir director and organist of long experience, who is in love with association work, who is full of "go," and who can play and sing effectively himself, as well as tell others how to do it. Live music will be a feature of the convention. At the opening meeting, Thursday evening, February 9, several grand choruses will be given by St. Paul's Philharmonic Society, a fine organization of one hundred voices.

The following will be some of the leading features of the convention:

Rev. R. J. McIlvaine, D.D., of Lexington, Va., Rector of Robert E. Lee Memorial Church, (Episcopal), so well-known as the author of the admirable address on "The Relation of the Association to the Church," will deliver the opening address Thursday evening.

Rev. A. H. Bradford, D. D., of Montclair, one of the foremost American Congregationalists, will speak on Friday, on "Sins Specially Prevalent Among Young Men." Dr. Bradford is so much in demand that he has engagements for every day or evening for the next four months.

International Railroad Secretary, C. J. Hicks, whose headquarters are in Chicago, will present Railroad Association work on Friday evening. His address will be illustrated by a mammoth map, showing all the railroad departments in this country.

L. D. Wishard, former college secretary of the International Committee, and now Foreign Secretary of the World's Committee, who has recently spent four years among Associations abroad, will speak on Saturday evening and again on Sunday evening.

State Secretary, R. M. Armstrong, of Massachusetts, will speak on "Voluntary Work, Its Importance and Necessity."

General Secretary, Geo. A. Sanford, of Newburgh, N. Y., who has had ten years of experience in district work, will present "The District Convention."

R. A. McFadden, Secretary of the Educational Department, of Brooklyn Association, will present "Educational Work."

A. H. Siegfried, President of the Montclair Association, and representative of the Chicago Daily News, a journalist from boyhood, will speak on "The Association and the Newspapers."

Hon. John Wanamaker, while unwilling to make a positive engagement will, if at all possible, be present and speak on on Saturday evening.

State Chairman, Hon. Ebenezah Drake, of Newark, will speak on Friday afternoon, on "Weak Spots."

Sumner F. Dudley, will present "Boys' Work," and Wm. D. Murray, of this city, will give interesting facts regarding "State Work."

W. E. Biederwolf, General Secretary of Princeton College Association, will lead the Sunday morning consecration meeting, and Hon. T. C. T. Crain, Chamberlain of New York City, and an eloquent speaker, will address the men's meeting Sunday afternoon.

A GAY ASSEMBLAGE.

At Mr. Edward Randolph's "House-warming."

A gay party assembled at the "house-warming" at Mr. Edward Randolph's on Park avenue, last Thursday night. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. David Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Westley Wheaton, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Van Court, Mr. and Mrs. John Freeman, Mrs. A. Noe, Miss Bartholomew, Miss Kate Van Court, Miss Minnie Noe, the Misses Randolph, Mr. Whitcraft and Mr. H. Randolph.

Dancing was the feature of the evening's enjoyment, and the merry tripped the "light fantastic" until early morning. Refreshments were served by Mr. William Van Court of Marcouinier.

A Jolly Nice Lot of Fellows.

The Elizabeth Journal speaking of the efforts being made to rejuvenate the Crescent League, and to have it reopened by the spring the League will be free from debt and on its feet again, says:

"This is a piece of good news which every true lover of sports will be glad to hear. The Crescents boys are a jolly nice lot of fellows and will be welcomed and admired upon their good fortune in escaping the calamity which seared them in the face."

His Fingers and Toes to be Amputated.

Andrew Mantz, who was found lying in a barn on the mountain with his hands and feet badly frozen, as told in Friday's News, is to-day still in his helpless and the seats of his toes amputated.

LADIES MEET AGAIN.

And Discuss Matters Pertaining to the Columbian Exposition.

The ladies of Union county who have interested themselves in securing exhibits for the Woman's Department at the Columbian Exhibition held a meeting Saturday at the residence of Miss Brittin, on Washington street, Elizabeth.

There was a large attendance than at their last meeting and a considerable interest was displayed by the members of the committee. The object of the increased gathering was to hear Mrs. Chase, Mr. Yardley, member of the State Board, who gave the ladies an interesting address regarding their work.

The committees on the several divisions of work have sub-divided and are hard at work securing their data and materials for Union county's exhibit. They are to have their completed reports in readiness to be presented to Miss Kean on February 20.

Among those present at the meeting were eight ladies from Plainfield.

ACTED AS "STOOL PIGEON."

This May Account for Some of the Late Robberies.

William Clark of Elizabeth was arrested Saturday night by Policeman Lynch.

Clark was annoying residents of Fifth street by continually walking to and fro in front of their houses.

The prisoner was given a hearing this morning and the fact was brought out that he had been acting as a "stool pigeon" in this city, for out of town robbers. It was stated that Clark located places in this vicinity, for thieves who came here on coal trains, and after committing a robbery made their escape by the same means.

The police, for some time, suspected that something of the kind was going on but could get no evidence, until the arrest of Clark. He plead guilty and was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail.

Discussing Sewerage Matters.

A meeting was held in Mr. M. M. Dunham's office, Friday evening, at which Mayor Alexander Gilbert and the Board of Health of this city were met by Mayor W. L. Saunders, Rev. W. E. Honeyman, Hon. President, and Dr. Caruss, the Secretary of the Board of Health of North Plainfield.

The meeting was held to discuss the needs of the two municipalities in the matter of sewerage. Various methods of disposing of the refuse were discussed, but no decided action was taken.

Another Sleighing Accident.

About five o'clock Saturday afternoon Miss Della Yoehl, accompanied by her brother, was driving along West Front street. In crossing the tracks of the street railway, the sleigh was upset. When falling, Miss Yoehl, with great presence of mind, firmly held the reins. The horse started to run away and was passed but they were dragged a distance of a hundred feet before the animal was stopped. Fortunately neither she nor her little brothers were injured. The sleigh was only slightly damaged.

Threw the Constable Over the Fence.

A warrant was issued this morning for the arrest of William Dowd. Last evening he was creating a disturbance, so the complaint says, on West Second street. Constable Rockfellow attempted to take him into custody, when he was thrown over a fence by Dowd, who then escaped.

Fast Between the Wheels.

Mr. Giddis left his horse standing on East Front street late Saturday afternoon. When he returned he found the horse lying down, with his head and one foot fast between the wheels of some one else's wagon. It took about half an hour to get the beast out of its predicament.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

Bishop Brooks Dead.

New York, Jan. 23, 1893, (Special.)—Bishop Phillips Brooks died this morning in Boston, of pneumonia.

[Bishop Brooks was very well known in Plainfield. He was a remarkably talented man. A good story is told of him. He was six feet four inches in height and well proportioned.

Once, while in Europe, with three friends almost his equal in height, all four attended a lecture. The lecturer's topic was "America and Americans," and he described Americans to be a puny, undersized race, defying anyone to disapprove his statement.

Rather antipathizing something of this sort the four friends were in different parts of the house, and when the lecturer called for doubters, one of the four, the smallest of the quartette, only six feet high, arose and said he thought the lecturer was in error about the size of Americans and asked if there was not one more American in that large audience who would join them in their endeavor to uphold the dignity of Americans, as regards size. The audience broke into a titter as the third American arose. He was a little man also, only six feet two inches in height. Then the three called for one more and amidst wild roars of laughter the giant Bishop Brooks slowly and gradually arose. When he was finally erect, seeming to dwarf every one near by his magnificent physique, the audience fairly hooted the lecturer off the stage.—Ed.]

A Jolly Sleighing Party.

The Middlesex Democrat says: One of the jolliest sleighing parties that have left the city this Winter, started Saturday night, when Miss Amy Cornell took a party of her friends to Plainfield. The merry makers had a large box sleigh and four horses, which took the load along at a lively gait. They left this city about half past seven, and did not return until the early hours of the morn.

Among those who participated were: Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Popham, the Misses Amy Cornell, Mary Hall, Agnes Hall, Annie Parker, P. Parker, Miss Basche of Philadelphia, Miss Doughty, Messrs. John Watson, Dr. Ramsey, Jack Watson, Mr. Arden, Edward Popham and Master P. Cornell.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Are there not clean men in France enough to form a cabinet?

Early in the evening of Jan. 23 a beautiful sight will be visible in the sky if the night be clear. It will be the close conjunction of the moon and the splendid planet Jupiter.

The accuracy of machine work has been reached in the United States internal revenue department. The committee appointed, to take account of the stamps there reported that over a billion revenue stamps were handled by the clerks in the department during 1892, and not one stamp was miscounted or lost.

The Michigan idea of choosing presidential electors as congressmen are chosen, one being elected by vote in each district, with, in addition, two at large, to be balloted for by all the voters of the state, is spreading. A bill providing for selecting the presidential electors in this way is now before the Minnesota legislature.

When the northwestern states were first settled some croakers predicted that want of fuel would hinder their development for many years. But now it is found that, like every other part of this happy country the northwestern states can supply their wants on the spot. Besides the gold and silver that many of them possess underground, it is being discovered that nearly every one of them has abundant coal strata. In Colorado the amount of coal mined in 1892 was 3,770,000 tons.

"Crowd Poison."

This is a new name given by physicians to the temporary illness caused by remaining for some hours in a closely crowded room. Everybody has observed the nausea, headache and generally disgruntled condition that follows an evening at the theater, or at a large social reception, or at any crowded gathering of human beings. Another fact familiar in human experience is that it is not outdoor exposure that gives one severe and dangerous colds, but "exposure to crowded rooms," as it has been called. General Butler probably took the cold which was the immediate cause of his death in the crowded, ill ventilated courtroom at Washington.

Medical chemists who have analyzed the air which causes "crowd poison" report that it is loaded down with carbonic acid gas, and this is the source of the illness. If present in sufficient quantity it would speedily cause death by suffocation. But there is just enough oxygen in crowded meeting rooms for humanity to live on miserably. The whole tone of the system is weakened and benumbed, however; the blood cannot nourish and react when cold air strikes the skin; hence the person "takes cold." Often it is as much as one's life is worth to go to a meeting of any kind in cold weather. Why will not architects and people who build houses provide for fresh air?

British Party Organization

Mr. James Bryce contributes to The North American Review an elaborate comparison between political party organization in Great Britain and the United States. It is in the United States among all the nations, he says, that party organization has reached its greatest strength and completeness. Other nations who want to have well drilled and marshaled political parties, organized on a regular system, must look to the United States and learn of us.

The American politician will feel to pity with all his soul the poor Briton who has no primaries or even a nominating convention. The only elections there which elicit any great interest are the parliamentary ones, and these do not come oftener than on an average of four years. The Briton has no state election, for there are no states, and the only legislature is the parliament of the nation. How much fun the poor Briton misses, to be sure! Suffrage has been so limited in England that only since 1870 have school boards been elected, and the governing boards called county councils only since 1888, in which year the right of suffrage was still further distributed among British freemen. Members of municipal councils, county councils, school boards and parliament are all the officers voted for at popular election in Great Britain.

The parliamentary constituencies are small. In some cases less than 8,000 voters elect the member of parliament. Moreover, the member does not even have to live in the district which he represents in parliament, which, from the American point of view, is certainly unfortunate. Often the candidate is sent to a district from the party headquarters in London; again he simply announces that he will be a candidate, hires a room for his headquarters and gets a committee to work for him—no nominating convention, no shrewd dickering and bartering, no fuss and feathers, no nothing.

Only recently have the local political organizations in a district had much influence in the choosing of a parliamentary candidate. Moreover, the American politician will consider most lamentable of all Mr. Bryce's statement that even when there is a complete political revolution, as when Salisbury went out and Gladstone went in, there are not more than "thirty or forty places which change hands with the ministry of the day." This is quite too bad, really.

DEATH AND DISASTER.

Fifteen Persons Fatally Injured by an Explosion.

AS MANY MORE WILL PROBABLY DIE.

People at Alton Gather to See a Railroad Wreck, When an Oil Tank Car Explodes, Covering Crowds With Blazing Fluid. Terrifying Experiences of the Victims.

ALTON, Ills., Jan. 23.—The southwestern limited ran through an open switch into a freight train standing on the siding, and Engineer Webb Ross of the limited was instantly killed.

The wreck took fire, and while a great crowd was watching the spectacle an oil tank car exploded with terrific force, enveloping the spectators in a sheet of burning oil. Fifteen are dead and as many more cannot recover from their frightful injuries.

Of the fatally injured all are more or less seriously burned about the limbs and body, but the worst injuries sustained are internal. Many inhaled the flames, and are also injured internally from inhaling the burning flames, that scorched and parched their throats to such an extent that their escape from instant death is almost miraculous.

The scenes in the wards of the hospitals occupied by the injured are heartrending. Lying on cots, wrapped and swathed in cotton and bandages until they almost lost semblance to human beings and surrounded by weeping relatives and sorrowing friends, they formed a picture that brought tears to the eyes of even the physicians.

An Explosion That Shook the Earth.

As eye witness says that the shock of the collision was such as to split two loaded tanks wide open, and the oil immediately caught fire, the flames shooting 50 feet into the air.

The locomotive and baggage cars were totally wrecked, but the remainder of the passenger train was removed beyond the reach of the flames. In an incredibly short time the freight train was a mass of flames.

Traffic on the two roads was entirely suspended, and a special train was made up on the Chicago and Alton to carry belated passengers through to St. Louis. Hearing of the wreck, hundreds of people from this city and vicinity were attracted by curiosity to the scene. Then occurred one of the most awful disasters on record. There was a deafening report that shook the earth for half a minute and spread one sheet of seething, burning oil in all directions.

Panic Reigned Supreme.

For those within the circle of 100 yards there was no escape. Their clothing was burned and literally fell from their bodies. In a moment those who were not disabled began running hither and thither, waving their hands and screaming for help.

Some went to the nearest water and others ran into the fields and are missing yet. The scene for a short time was such as the uninjured recovered their presence of mind to care for the afflicted.

Two barrels of linseed oil were taken from a grocery store and applied to the wounded by several physicians who happened to be on the ground. Every house in the little village was turned into a temporary hospital, and every doctor in Alton and its vicinity was summoned.

As soon as possible a train was made up, and 30 of the sufferers were brought here to St. Joseph's hospital.

The loss was total and will reach at least $100,000.

Mgr. Satolli Counsels Peace.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 23.—Mgr. Satolli has exercised his powers as papal ablegate in a controversy between Father Kopytkiwicz and the congregation of the Polish church of St. Stanislaus. The members of the congregation entered numerous complaints against their pastor to Archbishop Ryan. The archbishop declined to remove the priest, as I about two weeks ago a committee from the congregation called upon Mgr. Satolli. A letter was received from Mgr. Satolli's secretary by the committee advising them in the name of his excellency to accept the decision of their archbishop.

The Nuncio Strike Develops.

MUNCIE, Ind., Jan. 23.—Great excitement prevails in this city. The Lake Erie switching yards, which have been closed for the past ten days, were opened with 12 switchmen from Chicago. Last night a crowd of 1,000 men and boys followed the new switchmen to the new Southern hotel, threatening the Chicagoans' lives if they did not leave the town. The men say they will not go, and the company says it will yet get a force which will not be intimidated.

Wreck on the Pennsylvania.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 23.—A bad wreck occurred on the Pennsylvania railroad at Dockdow. The fast train was stopped on the only legislature is the parliament of the nation. How much fun the poor Briton misses, to be sure! Suffrage has been so limited in England that only since 1870 have school boards been elected, and the governing boards called county councils only since 1888, in which year the right of suffrage was still further distributed among British freemen. Members of municipal councils, county councils, school boards and parliament are all the officers voted for at popular election in Great Britain.

ANOTHER FOLLOWER OF DR. BRIGGS.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke Makes a Statement From His Pulpit.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—The Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, pastor of the brick Presbyterian church at Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, told his congregation that if the theory of the action of Scriptures was to be set up as a standard, his methodacy, he would be driven from the Presbyterian church.

Dr. Van Dyke's note of warning was uttered in unmistakable language, and he pointed out the dangers ahead if the Briggs' case was to be pushed on to the end.

He said in substance: "The whole controversy is not a question about the Bible as it is and has nothing to do with the infallibility of the Scriptures. It is simply a question as to the difference between the Bible as it is and the Bible as it was in the original manuscripts.

"This is the theory of the inerrancy of the original manuscripts and of the only Scriptures now in use. This particular theory proposes to divide the church.

"We are all agreed that no living man has seen the original manuscripts, and there is no authentic description of them. We ought not to allow this theory to become a test of our orthodoxy. It is unscriptural and was never enforced as a condition for our entrance into the church and ministry. To enforce it now would be illegal.

"For these reasons I will have nothing to do with the theory of the inerrancy of the original Bible manuscripts. I neither affirm nor deny it. The theory is untrue or it may be purely imaginary. I am perfectly content in my ignorance on the subject and propose to maintain it. The Bible as it is good enough for me. I for one mean to hold fast to the book as it is, and if I am driven from the Presbyterian church because I know nothing of the original manuscripts, it will be my comfort and will help me in preaching the Gospel in the wide field of Christian work.

"It is our duty not to withdraw from the presbytery. It would be like abandoning a ship in stormy weather. Let us mildly but firmly oppose every attempt to enforce the theory of inerrancy as the new test of our orthodoxy or to disturb the liberties we now enjoy."

Kansas Legislators Will Fight It Out.

TOPEKA, Jan. 23.—Only senatorial candidates and their workers remained on the field of the legislative battle. Most of the members of the legislature spent Sunday at their homes. The senatorial situation is the only interesting thing in view, now that the time for the joint session to nominate a Republican or a Democrat, and the five Democrats who hold the balance of power on joint ballot do not know whether to vote with a stalwart Democrat or a fusionist. Today all three parties will hold caucuses. The Democrats now hold the key to the situation. They will probably vote, probably join with the Republicans in the election of a stalwart Democrat—either A. A. Harris of Fort Scott or Bailey Waggoner of Atchison.

Applause in Plymouth Church.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 23.—The Rev. Dr. Abbott took his new applause at Plymouth church Sunday. He said that the Catholics acknowledge spiritual loyalty to the state, and that Christianity was the mother of bigotry, intolerance and narrowness in the Catholic church, but who that has read the reports of recent trials going on in other denominations does not, or say that the Catholic church has a monopoly of bigotry? We cannot afford to disregard any power which is strongly and justly on the side of law and order. The Catholic church is steadily getting nearer to the common people, and Pope Leo possesses the character and qualifications of a statesman."

Famous Mrs. Fiskefred Dying.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Arthur Padelford, the divorced wife of a Baltimore millionaire and the daughter of General Albert Ordway, is said to be suffering from a cancer. It is believed in the town as an who let a young diplomat drink champagne from her pink silk slipper at White Sulphur Springs and horsewhipped her manager, Mr. Rosecrantz, is dying. He failed in 1893 she married John J. Raffael, a tenor singer of the Conreid Opera company. Since then she has sung in "King Carnival," Duff company in "Gondoliers" and in Duff's "Seven Ages."

Everybody is Pleased.

BELGRADE, Jan. 23.—From the Servian Radicals have joined in the national rejoicing over the reconciliation of Milan and Natalie. The correspondence having been exchanged opinions in congratulations and good wishes. Young King Alexander has telegraphed to his parents that the announcement of the reconciliation gave him pleasantest news ever received by him, and has afforded him the happiest days of his life. Many letters and telegrams of congratulation have been received by the king and his parents from foreign courts.

Vermont Central to Lease.

BELLOWS FALLS, Jan. 23.—A meeting of the stockholders of the Central Vermont railroad is called for Wednesday, Feb. 22, in St. Albans, Vt., to see if the stockholders will vote to take the lease of the Malone and St. Lawrence railroad and guarantee the bonds thereof, as proposed by the directors.

Engineer's New Map Room.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—It is learned in official naval circles that England proposes, in the event of the Prince of Wales visiting the Columbian exposition, having her channel squadron in the naval review. If this is done there will be present the most powerful fleet assembled today under one flag.

Jackson Plays Uncle Tom.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23.—Manager Peter Jackson has signed a contract with Manager Stockwell of Tacoma to appear as Uncle Tom. Upon service, on behalf of Jackson, will deposit $2,500 to bind a match with Corbett for $10,000 a side and the largest purse offered.

WASHINGTON'S SOCIETY

Congressional Forecast For the Coming Week.

DR. McGLYNN DINES WITH SATOLLI.

The Republicans Will Not Make the Merged part of the Silver Bill a Party Issue—A Quorum Fails to Respond to the Census Call.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The backward state of the annual appropriation bills has impressed itself upon congress. The senate is chargeable with the greater delay in this respect. Not one of the bills has yet passed that body, although the house has sent over three which are ready for action. It is the general expectation that the antioption bill will come to a final vote before the middle of this week and that the appropriations committee will probably take the lead. There may be a suspension of the order in this respect long enough to allow debate and action upon the Cherokee outlet bill, some of the interstate commerce bills and one or two other measures which the committee on order of business may decide to call up.

Party feeling will probably manifest itself in the executive sessions during the week in connection with the McComas nomination, whi h is the unfinished business when the senate closes its doors.

The silver repeal bill is the unknown quantity in all calculations as to the business of the senate, and it may become the live issue at any time upon motion of a senator to proceed to its consideration, but for the time no such purpose is openly expressed.

The probabilities are that the house during the coming week will also occupy itself largely with the delayed appropriation bills, and will make an effort to catch up with the record of previous short sessions of congress on those supply bills.

Monday is district day under the rules, but Mr. Holman intends to call up the sundry civil bill and ask the district to give way.

The Torrey bankruptcy bill is the special order for Tuesday and Wednesday, but the order gives appropriation bills precedence, and therefore the bankruptcy bill will have to yield the floor to appropriations, Mr. Blount purposing to call up the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill on Tuesday unless the sundry civil bill is in the way. The general deficiency bill is last on the calendar and will be called up as the first opportunity and the Military academy bill is ready to be reported to the house at any time.

Social Life at the Capital.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—This is the sea of the little dinner, followed by either a musicale, with additional invited guests, or a massing of the diners at one or the other of the hosts' to enjoy a dance. They are about equally popular and they are wholly enjoyable. The former programme is followed every Wednesday night at the Brice mansion after their weekly dinners, and the entertainments afforded are original ones.

After a brief absence from Washington, Prince Leopold von Isenberg Berstein of Austria returned. He was lunched by Mrs. John R. McLean at a dinner given in honor of the diplomat at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Barbour.

Another prince honored Washington with his presence in the past week—His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore. He came to confirm Miss Voorhees, daughter of the senator from Indiana, upon her entrance into the Catholic church.

The cardinal was presented to the large circle of the senator's and Miss Voorhees' acquaintance in the parlors. He wore his scarlet mantle and berretta. As the members of the church approached he extended his left hand to kiss the ring.

It was a radical and striking innovation upon the routine of the ordinary tea.

Bishop H. C. Potter of New York was in the city over Sunday and was a guest to dinner as the vice president's home. Among Mr. and Mrs. Morton's other guests were Sir Julian and Lady Pauncefote, Hon. Mr. Russell, M. P., and wife; General and Mrs. Anson McCook, Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller, Senator and Mrs. Sherman, Colonel and Mrs. Bonaparte, Admiral Upshur and Mr. Gardiner Hubbard.

Secretary of State and Mrs. Foster gave their last dinner Tuesday.

Miss Grace Campbell, daughter of ex-Governor Campbell of Ohio, is visiting the family of Secretary Elkins and has been introduced to capital society in a round of entertainments.

Dr. McGlynn Meets Mgr. Satolli.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Bishop Keane, rector of the Catholic university, gave a special dinner in honor of the designation of Mgr. Satolli as permanent apostolic delegate of the United States. The guests included Dr. McGlynn and his friend, Bishop Moore of St. Augustine, Fla., and the faculty of the university. Dr. McGlynn was the first to respond to the invitation addressed to him by Mgr. Satolli two days after his reinstatement to the priesthood. The speeches at the dinner were all delivered in the Latin tongue. Bishop Keane, speaking of the apostolic delegate's mission to the United States, said in substance: "Thus for the church in the United States has been in the territorial category governed by the holy father through the bureau of the propaganda. Now it approaches the dignity of a regular governmental organization and has established in its midst a branch of the holy father's supreme power. Thus we can take an honest pride in the event of which we honor." Mgr. Satolli, in reply, referred to the pope's love for the American people, in evidence of which he said he came appointment as permanent apostolic delegate to this country. He also thanked Bishop Keane for having afforded him the facilities to make his residence in the university, and spoke in high praise of that institution and of the great good it would accomplish.

The Republican Senatorial Caucus.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—The Republican senatorial caucus, which met at the residence of Senator Sherman this evening, somewhat disappointed because it failed to secure the attendance of a quorum. The silver repeal speedily disappeared when, after a brief expression of individual views on the subject, it became evident that no agreement could be reached. The question will not be made a party issue during this congress. It was decided that the bills from appropriations bills, one of the first matters to be brought to the front should be the bill opening the Cherokee strip to settlement and reinvesting the Indians for the lands taken—a measure involving the expenditure of about $8,000,000. Next in order will be some of the measures that have been or will be reported by the committee on interstate commerce to correct defects in the law made manifest by recent judicial decisions.

Deaf for a Year
Caused by
Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read:

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for nearly a year. I had catarrh in the worst form, and had several physicians attend me, but no relief was obtained. I was finally induced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had taken one bottle my hearing was restored. I kept on till I had taken three bottles, and my hearing was perfect again. I also found that my catarrh was entirely cured. I consider Hood's Sarsaparilla the best medicine I ever used." HERMAN HICKS, 30 Carter street, Rochester, N. Y.

PITTSBURG FEARS A FLOOD.

Merchants and Occupants of the River Front Seek High Ground.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 23.—The warmer weather and threatening rain here and at up river points furnishes good ground for the gravest anxiety among people with property interests in or along the rivers, particularly the Monongahela. A pilot here states that the conditions for 70 miles were such that only the most gradual thawing weather would avert a great disaster. He said that what will be literally moving mountains of ice would come down with any considerable rise, getting a good start in weight and volume of ice with the opening of the big gorge at Morgantown, where the ice is piled up in the river from 2 to 15 feet deep for miles.

River enough to lift and detach the immense accumulations from their moorings, and at the same time furnish water to carry the moving masses, is what he says the rivermen have to fear at this time.

Every one here is apprehensive of a great flood when the thaw comes. Many merchants and others doing business along the river fronts have taken time by the forelock and have removed their goods from the cellars to the upper floors of their buildings.

MR. BLAINE GROWS WEAKER.

The Doctors Did Not Visit Him During the Night.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—That Mr. Blaine is weaker is the only knowledge his physicians gained of any change in his condition. He is apparently about the same as he has been for several days past. He retains consciousness and does not appear to be better or worse, but the doctors have noted a slight loss of strength each day.

Dr. Hyatt called in the morning, and Dr. Johnston paid a visit to the patient in the afternoon. The doctors visited Mr. Blaine at 9:30 and reported that there was no material change in his condition. If anything, however, he was slightly weaker. The house was closed for the night at 11 o'clock.

At 9 o'clock there had been no change reported in Mr. Blaine's condition.

President Compers on Homestead Trials.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 23.—President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor was in Pittsburg conferring with officers of the Amalgamated association, members of Homestead's advisory committee and Attorney W. W. Erwin, the St. Paul lawyer, who is defending the Homestead men charged with murder, in reference to those cases. Mr. Gompers declined to state what points were discussed further than to say that it had to do with the defense of Homestead men. Speaking for himself, he said, "The Federation stands ready to co-operate warmly and steadfastly with the Amalgamated association in defense of those who have been so falsely accused of murder and other crimes." Mr. Gompers left for New York.

Mrs. Harris Defends Her Son.

NEW YORK, Jan. 23.—Mrs. F. McCready Harris, mother of Carlyle Harris, found guilty of murdering his young wife, published a letter in defense of her son. Mrs. Harris reviews Carlyle's life and gives her reasons why the death penalty should not be inflicted upon him. "We have new and important evidence to present which clearly proves that Helen Potts was addicted to the use of morphine." She says in conclusion, "I demand another trial for my boy, and I ask every lawyer, every doctor, every clergyman, every man and woman who cares for justice to be administered to demand this new trial."

Death in a Sleighing Party.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 23.—Last evening a sleighing party returning from Horseheads to this city was struck on a grade crossing a mile outside the city limits by an express train on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western road. The evening men were on the front seat of the sleigh and three young ladies on the rear seat. All were thrown a considerable distance, alighting in the snow. One of the girls, Bertha Munson, was instantly killed, and another, Vira Wheeler, so badly injured that recovery seems impossible. The others escaped unhurt.

Denver Citizens Stone a Rector's House.

DENVER, Jan. 23.—All places of amusements were closed yesterday by the order of the police board, and the proprietors were arrested and placed in jail. Rev. H. M. Hart, dean of the Episcopal church, inaugurated the crusade. Immense crowds moved on Dean Hart's house, and in a short time stones were thrown, smashing several windows. An arbitrary alarm was rung in, and the police soon arrived on the scene and dispersed the crowd without making any arrests.

HEALTH OF GLADSTONE

Interesting Political Situations Engross Europe.

THE KHEDIVE NOT SUBMISSIVE.

Egan's Parlor—The Cabinet Considers Home Rule—French Suspects Profess to Be Glad of Herz's Arrest—Explosions at Rome—From the Vatican.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—At a prolonged cabinet meeting the ministers discussed the legal aspects of the home rule bill. Sir Charles Russell, attorney general, and Lord Herschell, lord high chancellor, who previously had not attended the cabinet meetings, were present and gave their opinions at length.

The Right Hon. James Lowther has been selected to move the amendment of the address. He will ask that immediate steps be taken to legislate against pauper aliens. Legal restrictions of pauper immigration have been advocated by Unionist newspapers for many months, especially since the expulsion of anarchists from France last spring swelled the anarchist colony with hundreds of the indolent and penniless.

England Patterns After America.

A new department devoted to the interest of labor is to be formed on the lines suggested by Professor Gould, who recently was before the royal labor commission. These lines conform generally with those followed by the labor bureau in Washington. Rather unexpectedly the treasury has allowed a handsome sum for the organization of the bureau.

Mr. Gladstone has received hundreds of letters in the last few days and scores of cablegrams making inquiries as to the state of his health. The reports that he is failing have caused great solicitude and some alarm among his personal friends and the advocates of home rule.

There is general apprehension among Liberal Englishmen that their prime minister is not so well as he and his friends would make the world believe. Mr. Gladstone is very closely guarded by his family and nearest friends, and only personal and political intimates are able to gain access to him.

They Want Dr. Herz.

PARIS, Jan. 23.—A number of politicians are anxious to have Herz extradited, not for political motives, but because of a desire to see out of the way a man who apparently knows too many secrets. Any Judge or jury would make it a patriotic point to deal with him with the utmost rigor of the law.

General Ferron in an interview confirmed M. Andrieux's statement that in 1887 he handed M. Rouvier 100,000 francs out of the secret service fund of the war department.

"We had to fight Boulangism," said General Ferron, "as it was becoming a great danger. M. Rouvier had no secret fund, so he was compelled to apply to his colleagues.

"I gave him the sum, which he afterward refunded. It was to be devoted to defending the government's line of policy. Every government's duty is to defend itself when attacked."

The warrant for the arrest of Arton, the Panama lobbyist supposed to have bribed 104 deputies with 1,250,000 francs, has been issued. Arton was supposed to be in London in communication with Herz and possibly Andrieux a short time ago. In England he would have been arrested at the instance of the French government, and considerable surprise is expressed that M. Bourgeois should have held back with his warrant until Arton found time to place himself on less dangerous ground.

Dynamite in Rome.

ROME, Jan. 23.—Dynamite bombs exploded almost simultaneously before the Hotel d'Angleterre and in the garden of the proprietor's house in the Via San Claudio. The hotel was partly wrecked. Nobody was injured, although the hotel had more than 100 lodgers at the hour of the explosion. Not a whole piece of furniture was left in the building. Walls of houses near the hotel were cracked, and all the windows were broken.

The proprietor of the Hotel d'Angleterre says he is convinced that both explosions were caused by a man whom he discharged recently from his service.

Czar Aspires to Be Emperor of Asia.

VIENNA, Jan. 23.—Professor Arminius Vambery, the well known Oriental traveler, is of the opinion that the visit to St. Petersburg of the ameer of Bokhara and the khan of Khiva is a prelude to the czar's accepting the title of emperor of Asia, in an effort to Queen Victoria's title of empress of India. It is said that a new coat of arms for the czar has just been completed, the design consisting of a double eagle flying over the sun's disc.

Protests Egan Goes Free.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—James Francis Egan, convicted of participation at Birmingham in 1886 in an Irish dynamite plot and sentenced to 20 years' penal servitude, has been released from Portland prison.

The Daily News says Egan was not released as a political prisoner or in pursuance of any general policy by the present government, but solely on account of doubts as to his guilt.

Corrigan to Be Admonished.

LONDON, Jan. 23.—The Rome correspondent of The Chronicle says: "It is expected that Archbishop Corrigan of New York will receive a severe admonition from the pope in regard to his opposition to Archbishop Satolli and Archbishop Ireland. It has been decided that the new papal delegate shall reside in Washington."

At Boston Mrs. Charles H. Hoyt, known on the stage as Flora Walsh, died. She was taken ill less than a week ago.

Warren G. Abbott's brewery, Brooklyn, was destroyed by fire.

A block owned by Nelson Burdick, Watertown, N. Y., and located on the public square was burned.

Moody and Sankey at Wilmington.

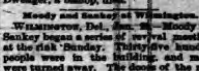
WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 23.—Moody and Sankey began a series of revival meetings at the rink Sunday. Thirty-five hundred people were in the building, and many were turned away. The doors of the rink were closed at 6:30. It is estimated that 10,000 persons applied for admission.

The Bancroft a Success.

NEWPORT, R. I., Jan. 23.—The practice ship Bancroft was given her preparatory speed trials over the mile course. Tuesday she will start on her speed trial proper, a four hours' run, probably down the sound, and then continue to Etizabeth for completion.

Detroit Stovemakers Strike.

DETROIT, Jan. 23.—About 60 stove mounters at the Detroit Stove works are striking for a change in the scale of wages. Unless it is settled in the near future a like interes to the number of about 600 will be thrown out of employment.



THE NEWEST GOWNS.

The Perfect Empire Gown—Stylish English Walking Costume.

Of all the styles upon which fashion has been pleased to smile of late the empire seems to retain her favor the longest. An absolutely perfect empire gown, as defined by high English authority, is made of white satin, and the fabric of bodice is almost indescribable. It fits absolutely tightly without seams, as if some fairy fingers had sewn it together and left no trace of their handiwork. The yoke in front is is draped very full over the bust, and at the top, both back and front, are two pointed revers turning back to the most becoming fashion and embroidered with white and gold and red beads.

A NEW WALKING COSTUME.

It is to the revival of 1830 styles that we are indebted for the full skirts and poke bonnets that are talked about among forthcoming fashions. They are said to have been introduced this season by English dressmakers, but have been modified and improved by the artistic touch of the French modistes.

Our cut shows a lately made and very stylish English walking dress in fine cloth with the new shape of skirt having a twist lining and falling in full round folds at the back and sides.

The stylish pelerine bodice as well as the bottom of the skirt have a fine edge of fur and fancy gold arrowpoint edging. The trimming of the poke bonnet is upstanding loops of ribbon held by a buckle. The brim is faced with velvet and has a twist of velvet which rests upon the hair of the wearer.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

A HEROINE OF THE SEA.

The Short Story of Grace Darling and Her Rescue of a Shipwrecked Crew.

In the lists of heroines of the world stands the name of Grace Darling, who, though small in stature and of very frail and delicate constitution, accomplished by sheer pluck a famous rescue of human life from peril at sea more than fifty years ago. All that now remains to tell the tale of Grace Darling to those of this generation is the modest tombstone in the old churchyard of Bamburg, Northumberland, in England. Upon it are inscribed these words: "Grace Horsley Darling, born Nov. 20, 1815, at S. Sunderland, Farfordshire, wrecked Sept. 7, 1838, died Oct. 25, 1842, aged 26 years."

Under the canopy covering the tomb Grace Darling's effigy lies carved in stone. The face is serene, and girlish in the extreme, of the slender figure is graceful, as with tiny hands folded over her breast her arm encircles an oar, the emblem of her greatness. In that little grave grown churchyard Grace lies in lonely state, close to the picturesque village, with its white walled thatched roof cottages clustering at the foot of the grim old castle on the verge of the sea.

GRACE DARLING.

Standing within the castle keep, dark as the night may be, one can always see the revolving light of the Longstone lighthouse shedding its intermittent gleams upon the black waters to warn mariners of sunken rocks and perilous passages. Here in this lighthouse tower Grace was living in 1838 when the ship struck upon Harker's rock, and it was from there, aided by the no less heroic mother, who pushed off their little boat, that the father and daughter set off through the blinding storm to rescue the shipwrecked crew.

Mr. Darling's tiny cockleshell of a boat could not have lived in the open sea for any length of time, and it was by creeping under shelter of a range of rocks and rowing with the gale that they were able through almost superhuman exertion to traverse the mile and a half between their island and the wreck and bring off in safety nine people.

Honors and wealth poured in upon Grace Darling as well as her brave father, but she did not live long to enjoy them. Within three short years the brief span of her life came to an end.

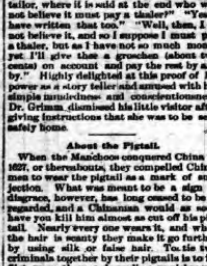
A Pretty Compliment.

Jacob Grimm—who, with his brother William, formed the well known collection of fairy tales and legends—once received a pretty compliment. A little girl eight years old called at his house one day, asked to see him and was shown into his library. Kindly inquiring what she wanted, the lassie, staring at him very earnestly, replied, "Is it then that hast written those fine marchen (fairy tales)?" "Yes, my dear," answered the best professor, "my brother and I have written all the books that are in here." "Then then hast also written the tale of the clever little tailor, where it is said at the end who will not believe it must pay a shaler?" "Yes, I have written that too." "Well, then, I do not believe it, and so I suppose I must pay a thaler, but as I have not so much money put I'll give thee a grochen (about two cents) on account and pay the rest by and by." Highly delighted at this proof of his power as a story teller and amused with her simple innocence and conscientiousness, Dr. Grimm dismissed his little visitor after giving instructions that she was to be sent safely home.

About the Pigtail.

When the Manchoos conquered China in 1627, or thereabouts, they compelled Chinamen to wear the pigtail as a mark of subjection. What was meant to be a sign of disgrace, however, has long ceased to be so regarded, and a Chinaman would as soon have you kill him almost as cut off his pigtail. Nearly every one wears it, and when the hair is scanty they make it go further by using silk or false hair. To-day two criminals together by their pigtails to fix it upon them a degrading punishment. In the presence of a superior it is always let down.



From Faraway Japan.

My new dolly came to me
Over miles of land and sea,
And a beauty she is, too!
I'm sure you'll say so when you see.

When at first I took him out
From his box I had no doubt
That my little round face and man
Came from faraway Japan.

A LITTLE STRANGER.

As his jet black eyes and hair
Show the other dolls did not mind
And the sort of dress he wore
They had never seen before.

But I tell him not to mope—
They don't mean to be unkind—
And in fact a day or so
He'll be quite at home, I know.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ATTRACTIVE FANCY WORK.

Cushions of Various Kinds—Ribbon and Lace Braid Work.

Some of the handsomest sofa cushions have large pieces of silk embroidery in the center, with corners of velvet edged with cord. Some are bordered with guipure embroidery, put on full over a frill of silk. Others are edged with broad tinsel galon, and some have heavy ruches; but the principal point would seem to be that they should be made in handsome brocaded silks of rich coloring.

New toilet cushions are made of lace and muslin, covered all over with diagonal bands of narrow ribbon. Face made of satin, stuffed and tufted, are another good form. An odd pincushion is diamond shaped, with fluted satin around the sides, and baby ribbon rosettes for trimming, while a piece of lace again forms the cover for the top.

Many of the previous pincushions are made over a ball shaped foundation, and the first thing to be learned is how to make this ball neatly and symmetrically. The cover, of soft linen or satin, should be cut in sewn, and a ball of bran, sand and wadding out in the middle. Three pieces, four, six or eight in number, according to the size of the ball, must be neatly sewed together, a space being left open through which the bran can be pushed in. The remainder of the seam is then sewed up, and the ball is ready to be trimmed into a fruit or anything else that fancy may ordain.

Ribbon work is fashionable for cushions, screen panels, sachets, etc. A basket or a lyre figures in almost all the designs, but these are treated so differently in the manner of working that no two look alike in the patterns. Satin is preferable to all other materials for sachets of the best class.

For cot covers lace braid work is charming. The center of the linen cover is powdered with pink tipped daisies, and in one corner of this square center is the word "baby," outlined with a fancy patterned lace braid, inclosing a few of blue forget-me-nots. To make the square threads are drawn, and a stiff lace braid is run in and out of this open work. The border is worked with lace stitches, connecting lace braids of different patterns.

Touchoirs are done in the same style, and they are quite uncommon at present. Linen doilies are powdered, each with a different flower, such as bluebells, primroses and violets, all worked in their natural colors.

The Household Use of Borax.

Borax is one of the most useful things to keep in the house. It is one of the best agents for softening water for domestic use in the laundry, bath and bathroom, though it must not be used for softening water which is to be drunk or used for cooking, as taken internally it has a specific medicinal effect. The hard water may be softened on a small scale by putting a small quantity in a saucerful of hot water over night. There is no greater comfort for any one on a tour than to have in a portmanteau a district than a small box or packet of borax, for by its use the effects of hard water on the skin are quite neutralized. It may be used either as a substitute for or in conjunction with soap, the quantities being a handful of borax to nine or ten gallons of water, and it has the advantage over soda in not injuring colored clothes.

Besides these some borax is useful in removing the fur or deposit which forms in tea kettles, enameled saucepans and the like. If a sampful of good water in pans of borax be boiled in a kettle, the fur will be largely dissolved.

In the country borax is used for washing hens and for things and in the making of cold starch and for giving an additional gloss to collars, fronts, cuffs and starched fabrics generally.

As an insecticide it is invaluable. Cockroaches will not haunt a kitchen where borax is scattered on the floor, and it is harmless to domestic pets.

A Good Bean Soup.

Soak one quart of dried white beans over night. In the morning drain. Add two quarts of water. When it comes to the boiling point pour off this and two quarts of fresh boiling water, also about a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda. Boil until the beans are soft, then press through a sieve and return it to the kettle. Add salt and pepper to taste and a cup of cream or a cup of milk and a bit of butter. If still too thick, add more liquid. Cracker is scattered and browned in the oven or squares of bread browned in butter are nice to serve with this.

Chocolate Blanc Mange.

One quart of rich fresh milk or cream, three ounces of chocolate, one-quarter pound of white sugar and one box of gelatin dissolved in a half pint of water. Boil milk, chocolate and sugar together a few minutes, after first dissolving the chocolate and rubbing it smooth in a little of the milk. Then add the gelatin and ten drops of vanilla. Stir well and remove from the fire a few minutes. When lukewarm pour through a strainer into molds that have been previously dipped into a bath of cold water.

The straight edge is made by a series of five chains, repeating it for three rows, then a treble, make two chain, one treble. The top of the scallop is formed of two rows of double guipure stitch, one row of single stitch and a scallop of one single crochet. Twelve treble, one single crochet.

BUOYANCY OF WOMEN

WHY THE GENTLE SEX IS HAPPIER NATURALLY THAN MEN.

They Have Greater Power of Resistance. An Average High Development of Their Esthetic Sensibilities Leads Them to Find Pleasure in Many Ways.

Why are women, as a rule, happier than men? First, because they have a greater power of resistance. Physically there is no longer any question among scientists that the female organism withstands unfavorable environment better than the male. Poring pestilences and epidemics more males die than females. A woman can endure longer and severer nervous strain than a man. It is significant to note how much better a woman can bear any kind of pain than a man. The lord of creation moans and writhes when he has a toothache, while a woman bears in white, calm silence such a racking and rending of the whole nervous system as would in all probability drive a man either to suicide or distraction.

The same superior power of resistance may be noted in woman's mental and moral organization. Women can endure a stress of temptation which would prostrate men in equal life as many an soldiers in a gust of wind. They can also endure mental strains which would wear out the patience if not the brain tissue of a man in half the time. Woman has will power which is simply magnificent. Her mental and moral energy seem to gush and bubble from unused and inexhaustible springs of vitality. Women, both physically and mentally, has a reactionary power which the opposite sex, except in rare instances, is unable to command. The salient characteristic of man's mental and physical force is its quantity; whereas the salient characteristic of woman's is its quality. And quality dominates quantity always.

Now this power of resistance on woman's part is a great advantage to her in the attainment of happiness. It enables her to throw off or rise superior to little annoyances and worries which fret all the vivacity out of a man. A woman can be cheerful under circumstances which would make a man misanthropic. This difference of organization, and consequent difference of disposition, comes out in a thousand little ways. It is simply a difference in the power of resistance, and if you follow this power out into particulars you will find that it makes a world of difference in the matter of comparative happiness.

In the second place, woman's superior capacity for happiness is due to the average high development of her esthetic sensibilities. Woman got a world of enjoyment out of such things as music, flowers, the colors and textures of fabrics, delicate handiwork, dress, adornment, pictures, bric-a-brac and a multitude of things of the nature which the average "practical" man pretends to despise. And this enjoyment of beautiful things is one of the purest and healthful last kind. It increases the natural refinement, the delicacy of perception, the humanizing influence of the female sex.

It may not rise to artistic talent, or even in some instances to thoroughly artistic appreciation, but it is an elevating, ennobling, cheering, brightening influence in the home life and in society without which this world would be glum and unlovely enough. The love of the beautiful permeates the gentler sex as a vein of gold runs through a stratum of rock, adding its brightness and beauty to the whole character. It would be very strange if this nat-urus and instinctive development or the aesthetic sense in woman did not add greatly to her capacity for the highest and purest kind of happiness.

Again, the natural buoyancy and vivacity of woman's nature increases her capacity for happiness. This I suppose to be the result of the fineness and responsiveness of her nervous organism. At all events no one can fail to remark the life, fullness, the sparkle, the vivacity of women, especially young women. Man is a morose animal compared with his consort. Who has not noticed that most men work silently, where as most women, where it is permissible, sing at their work? When you see a bevy of girls together you always expect to hear them laughing. With boys it is different. They are quite as likely to be planning, arguing or quarreling. And the distinction holds through life. Man as a rule is serious and overcast; woman is cheerful and sunshiny. It is a matter of organism, of disposition, of inbred characteristic. And the sunshiny disposition would surely seem to be the one most likely to increase its possessor's capacity for happiness.

Finally, take them on the average, women are more highly developed on the spiritual side than men. And as the spiritual life is the source of the supremest joy which mankind can know, is it not reasonable to claim that woman's capacity for happiness exceeds man's in proportion to her clearer appreciation and more devout appreciation of things which are divine and eternal? Woman's religious faith is her heart's dearest treasure. She finds immeasurable resources of joy and comfort in her belief in the immortality, the survival of all precious earthly ties and companionships, the endurance beyond the grave of all that is lovely and worthy here, and the revelation of beatific realities of which the present life can give us only the merest hints and suggestions.

So that if a woman were deprived of all other sources of happiness save this alone, she would still be able to live a life of such transcendent brightness and hopefulness that all the graver, more tangible pleasures of earth would be like a child's dazzled toys compared with the shining realities and ideals of the child when she is blooming out of maidenhood into womanhood.

Had woman but the single advantage over man that her more quickened and highly developed spiritual nature, it would be enough to establish for her the claim of a capacity for happiness which could never be equaled on man's part save by an equivalent quickening and enriching of the higher life of the soul.—Paul Pastnor in Detroit Free Press.

The Countess of Aberdeen.

The Countess of Aberdeen spent much of her youth on her father's highland estate of Dalchosnie. It was there that she made friends with her father's guest, Mr. Gladstone. Mounted on her little pony she often accompanied him on his rides, and he talked kindly to the bright little girl sometimes concerning principles and people that some statesmen would have thought quite removed from the interest of so young a creature. But time passed, and at last, when, in 1877, Isabel Majoribanks became the Countess of Aberdeen, these early confidences and friendships became the established bad secured for Mr. Gladstone an influential and enthusiastic adherent in the popular young peeress.—Young Woman.

Mrs. Dr. Haviland, Dr. Eva Harding, and Mrs. Dr. Hamilton are said to be the only family whose women members are all doctors in the United States.—Atchison Globe.

Showing the Progress Made in Dentistry in the Past Generation.

"I called at a dentist's office today," said a western congressman. "I had a hollow tooth in that upper jaw of mine, and I'd have it upholstered; but the dentist advised me to have it drawn instead of filled, saying that the process was almost painless and the satisfaction complete. I yielded to his argument with fear and trembling. I had never had a tooth pulled since I was a boy, and the memory of my last experience in that line was enough to give a person bad dreams.

"I was surprised at the ease with which the fang was extracted and the almost complete absence of pain. After this I'll rather enjoy having teeth drawn. It was widely different when I was a boy, though. I remember the village dentist quite well. When he wasn't drawing molars he was shoeing horses. He was a large man, and the muscles of his brawny arms were strong as iron bands. I remember his motto.

"He simply throttled his victim and inserted a pair of tongs into the unfortunate's mouth and then he brandished hard and pulled until the tooth came out or the tongs broke or his sprained his wrist. He generally extracted three or four sound teeth before he captured the aching one, and he was filmed and made no extra charges. Oh, I tell you, the world has advanced since I was a boy, and in nothing more than dentistry," and the congressman removed his spectacles in order that he might see the paper he held in his hand.—Washington News.

The Supreme Test.

The gray dawn was just breaking and a cold shiver permeated the being of a lady with black circles under her eyes who sank sighing into a chair and gloomily contemplated her husband in the act of removing his shoes.

They had just returned from the social event of the season.

"You had a good time, dear?"

Scalding tears trickled down her cheeks.

——"love me."

Her husband turned toward her aghast.

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

She was sobbing.

"You've neglected me. You weren't good to me tonight."

"Nonsense!"

He gazed upon her bowed head in astonishment.

"Do you say?" Well, I declare! I wonder if you know what you're talking about. Didn't I play three hands of cards with you and only get nine twice?"

He hadn't another word to say.—Detroit Tribune.

A MERRY PARTY

Enjoy Themselves at "Uncle John" Smalley's Home.

A sleighing party of twenty-four couple, chaperoned by Smalley Bros., drove to the large farm house of "Uncle John" Smalley, at Green Brook, last evening. It was a jolly crowd and they "made night hideous" as they drove along through the country, with their tooting horns.

Once arrived at the hospitable home of "Uncle John," they took possession of the old gentleman's house, and danced until early morn to music of the harp and cornet.

Among the company were: Councilman Charles Sebring, Mr. and Mrs. William C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. John P. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. David W. King, Mr. and Mrs. William Day, Mr. and Mrs. George F. Randolph of Rahway, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Brokaw, Mrs. David Smalley and Miss Stronge of Elmora, Miss Carrie Moore of Cranford, Miss Emma Gillen, Miss Lena Smalley, Miss Dolge, and Messrs. John MacLaughlin, George DeMeza, Fred Oblz, William MacLaughlin, and J. Smalley. The latter was the genial floor manager.

—The Broadway hill was thronged last night with a crowd of merry coasters. Two "bobs" were smashed by upsetting.

—The crosswalks on Front street and Park avenue are being cleaned to-day for the first time since the heavy snowfall.

—A single sheet of paper six feet wide and seven and three-quarters miles long has been made at a paper mill in New Jersey.

—There was a strong odor of gas on West Front street yesterday, caused by a leaking gas main. The break was repaired about five o'clock.

—Mr. Fred Cutter's sleigh upset, at the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Cutter and a friend were thrown out but not injured.

—The work of laying the foundations for the new Babcock building on West Front street, will be begun at once. The excavation for the cellar is about completed.

AWOKE JUST IN TIME.

Mrs. Blimm Bravely Puts Out a Fire and Saves the House.

Yesterday morning the family of Mr. Jacob Blimm of Somerset street had a narrow escape from being burned in their beds. Mrs. Blimm chanced to awake, when she discovered that the room was full of smoke. She ran down stairs and found the mantle piece and some of the beams overhead, in the dining room, all ablaze. Hastily procuring a pail of water she threw it on the flames, which she extinguished after a few moments hard work. Mrs. Blimm discovered the fire in the nick of time, as soon the whole building would have been in a blaze. The fire was caused by hot soot falling against the fireboard.

Shut in on the Tracks.

A horse car on the East Jersey street line, at Elizabeth, was caught between the gates at the Long Branch railroad crossing, yesterday, at Elizabethport. The gateman, in his excitement over an approaching train, suddenly shut the gates. The driver whipped his horses and escaped by breaking off one of the gate arms. The car was slightly damaged.

INVINCIBLE PARK CLUB BOWLERS.

Another Victory Added to the Last Last Evening.

Last night the Park Club bowling team won its fifth successive game from the Fanwood Club team. The game was rolled on the former's alleys, and was played with five men teams. Mr. Lyman of the Park Club bowled the nice score of 217. This is the highest score made in a match game this season on the Park Club alleys. He is also tie with the member holding the highest score for the month. The Park Club bowlers started off poorly, but the lead their opponents gained was soon overcome, when they settled down to business. The following is the score.

THE BOARD OF HEALTH'S ORDERS.

All Garbage Must Be Dumped in the Gravel Pit.

The Plainfield Board of Health has issued notices to be served on the city scavengers, prohibiting them from dumping any more garbage on the several lots around the city, which they have been in the habit of using for that purpose.

Many complaints have been made by residents of Arlington avenue, West Front street, in the vicinity of Harberger's, and Putnam avenue, because of the disagreeable stench from the garbage emptied on lots near them.

This nuisance will now be abated and all such refuse is to be taken to the gravel pit on East Second street, where the Board of Health will see to it that it is covered with lime and a coating of gravel placed on top of that, completely burying it.

The notices were given to Chief of Police Grant to-day, who will see that each scavenger is served with one.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

The last to be added was that of Mt. Pleasant. The exercises will consist of an address by the Rev. Chas. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, on "Moral Earthquakes;" singing of hymns and short reports from the president of each society.

It is expected that the number of societies will soon be increased to thirteen by the adding of the South Plainfield Society.

THE STORY OF A HYMN

COMPOSED BY A PLAINFIELDER, REV DR. LOWRY.

Although "Shall We Gather at the River" is Nearly Thirty Years Old, it is Still Sung Throughout the Country.

The Rev. Dr. Lowry of Park avenue, in the January number of Current Topics, gives the following interesting history of the origin of the popular hymn "Shall We Gather at the River," which has been sung for nearly thirty years:

"It was on a hot day in July, 1864. The weather was of that enervating kind against which the will struggles in vain. Some feeble attempts at pastoral work in the city of Brooklyn, N. Y., where I then resided, had met without strength for further exertion. Late in the afternoon I threw myself on the lounge in my study, and gave myself up to nothingness. I am not sure that I can explain it psychologically, but the weakness of the body seemed to liberate something within me that gave into a sort of preternatural activity. Although the physical exhaustion was extreme, the mental procession went on with accelerated rapidity. Some reserve thoughts that I had had no recent use for, came bounding to the front and demanded attention. The imagination became quick, and the religious sentiment took possession. The trend set in toward the Apocalypse. Visions of the future passed before me with startling vividness. The imagery conceived in the Isle of Patmos took the form of tableaux. Brightest of all were the throne, the heavenly river, and the gathering of the saints. There was no more sultry July day, no more wearied body, no more sense-environment. Everything was changed in that celestial outlook. I began to wonder why the hymn-writers had said so much about the "river of death," and so little about the "pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, proceeding out of the throne of God and of the Lamb." As I mused, certain words began to arrange themselves. They came first as a question of Christian inquiry, "Shall we gather?" They then broke out in chorus, as an answer of Christian faith, "Yes, we'll gather." On this question and answer the hymn developed itself. There was no laborious construction, no patient and painful searching for the right word in the right place, but a sort of automatic phrasing and rephrasing without the consciousness of effort. The thing was "born, not made." If it had been "made," it might have been freed from its defects by artistic chipping and furnishing. But having been "born," it had to carry the faults of its birth, and do its little work in its own way.

"The tune came with the hymn. I have never been able to tell which had priority of birth. They were twins, and they seem to be out of place when forced into other combinations. When the hymn had formulated itself, and the music had gathered around it like a perfectly fitting robe, the surrounding world gradually came back to me as the thing came more. The discovery of what had been done in that dreamy state electrified me. The July day may have been as hot as ever, but I did not know it. The body may have been as weak as its atmosphere could make it, but I was not conscious of it. I sprang up as from a refreshing sleep, sat down to the organ, let the tune drip out of my fingers, and made the house ring with a voice which, at that time, had a fair share of dynamics. After that, the hymn was written out, and the music with it. That I was still of the "earth, earthy," subject to terrestrial limitations, was evident when I was confronted with the necessity of fitting six words to rhyme with "river." Of course, I did not succeed, and so the poor little thing had to go out with rhymes that are not rich, though its feet were sound enough to carry it anywhere. But "poets that are poets" do the same thing, alas!

"In that same year the American Tract Society was preparing a song-book for Sunday-schools, and asked for contributions. I gave "Shall we Gather" and several other scores. The other scores quietly crept out of sight, but "Shall we Gather" has insisted on holding on. In the following Spring, the Brooklyn Sunday-school authorities wished to use it for the May Anniversary. Forty thousand children sang it on parade and in their churches. Then it went everywhere. You know something of its subsequent history. As a work of art, its success is not proof of it. As a hymn with power both to comfort and to inspire, he is glad to leave it as it is, performing its humble mission."

Plainfield Beats Dunellen.

The fourth game of the series between the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein and Dunellen Bowling Club teams took place last night, on the alleys of the former club on Somerset street. The home team bowled the high score of 1598, winning by 387 pins. It is the first time they have beaten the Dunellen team.

After the game a supper was served in the room adjoining the alleys. The following is the score:

AN OLD COUPLE MARRIED.

A Number of the Groom's Grand Children Witness the Ceremony.

Sunday afternoon Mr. John Lambert, who is over seventy years of age and one of the oldest residents of Fanwood township, and who has lived all his life on the Lambert Homestead at Willow Grove, took unto himself another wife, Mrs. Lambert, the first, having been dead a number of years. The bride was a Mrs. Frazee of Newark. She is the junior member of the contracting pair by about five years. The ceremony was performed at the residence of Mr. Levi Darby of Fanwood by the Rev. J. H. Parks, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church. Mr. Lambert had the distinction of having a number of grand children at his wedding. They departed for the Lambert homestead shortly after the ceremony was over, where a party of sixty of the old gentleman's friends serenaded them last night. Mr. Lambert, not to be outdone, invited the whole party into the house and treated them as only those old-timers know how to entertain their friends.

MR. ASHLEY'S HORSE AGAIN RUNS AWAY.

This Time With a Sleigh, but no One is Injured.

About two months ago Mr. Ashley of Fanwood sent his coachman to this city to drive for a lady who was visiting at his home. On the way here the horse took fright and ran away. The lady was thrown out and her arm broken.

Yesterday the same horse ran away again while being driven to this city by way of Front street. This time it was hitched to a sleigh which did not upset as easily as the gig, and the driver kept his seat and succeeded in stopping the animal by running it into the fence in that place and Ocean Grove, trying to secure evidence that would establish the fact that Helen Potts was addicted to the use of morphine.

She called upon the young lady who was at one time friendly with her son's wife and a painful meeting ensued. The mother of the young lady was finally compelled to ask Mrs. Harris to leave. Mrs. Harris says visited the cottage of George Potts and there another distressing scene took place. She endeavored to reach Mrs. Potts, but was foiled by Mrs. Potts.

Mrs. Harris then endeavored to reach some of Helen Potts young lady friends and secure from them an admission that they had seen her buy or use morphine. At times she became hysterical. She returned to New York yesterday afternoon.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

[From the Philadelphia, Pa.]

A timely movement has been inaugurated in Boston against the public display of indecent theatrical posters and show-bills on the bill boards, and other places of public resort. A petition recently presented to the Board of Aldermen, in connection with petitions for hearings, declares them indecent displays to be an unwarrantable offence to the moral sentiments of the large majority of the people, as well as to individual rights, and a hindrance to the growth of purer morals in the community. The petitions bear the signatures of many well-known influential people, including Edward Everett Hale, Dr. Caroline Hastings, of the School Board, Francis J. Garrison, Mrs. Susan B. Anthony, President of the Massachusetts W. C. T. U., William H. Baldwin, President of the Young Men's Christian Union, John P. Ford, Superintendent of the Working Boys' Home, James L. Gordon, General Secretary of the Boston Y. M. C. A., and others. The petitioners request the removal of this display of indecency in a praiseworthy precedent which might be followed to much advantage in many other cities.

Frank Devlin's Death Another New Jersey Mystery.

The inquest in the murder of Frank Devlin, at Woodbridge, for which Robert Conrad Andrews is now arrested on a charge made by the dead man's brother, Patrick Devlin, was concluded yesterday afternoon at the office of ex-Judge Newton at New Brunswick, acting as coroner. The verdict was, "That Frank Devlin came to his death by pistol bullet wounds inflicted by some person or persons unknown to this jury." Potts and Jorg will be released.

Durubbo's Trial Postponed.

Dominico Durubbo, the Italian bandit, and Charles Prince were on trial yesterday in the Union County Court for the murder of Patrick Riley, last September. As the jury was about to be impanelled it was discovered that an important witness for the State, Dr. Montford, who attended Riley after he was shot, was on board the practice cruiser Bancroft on her trial trip. Consequently Sheriff adjourned the trial a week. The Judge said any witness who was not present next Monday would be fined, as the postponement was a large expense to the county. Twenty-three witnesses were subpoenaed. The cost to the county yesterday was nearly $600.

About Counterfeits.

You cannot always tell a counterfeit silver coin by a lack of ringing sound when it is struck on a counter, as counterfeits in which powdered glass has been included in the molten composition of which they are cast, have a good, clear, loud ring, and also look bright like silver. They are not so heavy, however. The fact that a green-back looks old, as if it had been long in use is no evidence in itself of genuineness. The counterfeiters make a new counterfeit look old by a simple process—that is, they rub mutton tallow over the surface with the finger, which soon gives it a very aged appearance.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Tailor Greater Than Sculptor.

It is a fact that if in the midst of the inauguration ball next March a sudden volcanic eruption should cover the whole city of Washington with a shower of ashes a mile deep, so it could not be dug out for 5,000 years, the people who live in 3893 would learn much more about the real habits and customs of the barbarians of 1893 from the dress they wore than from the big cannon at the Washington navy yard. A scrap a few inches square of the clothing of a face determines on the instant their stage of development.

Not so far out of the way, therefore, is Mr. J. O. Madison, of the ancient and respectable guild of tailors, when he claims that dress is an indication of morals, and that the tailor is greater than the sculptor. "Unfamiliarity with philosophical methods of investigation" on the part of an ignorant public is the cause of the prejudice in high society against the tailor as a man and brother, he thinks. The tailor on his part has a greater right to look down from heights of superiority upon the society swell for the tailor makes the swell. Mr. Madison calls the cutting and fitting of garments "the esoteric art," and says there is nothing more fascinating to one who understands it well.

But in the following passage Mr. Madison fairly bursts his buttons and rips his back seams:

> The sculptor chisels his statue, if he can, up to his ideal of symmetrical form and facial beauty, and its perfection and beauty will generally correspond with his ideal. But if he were obliged to cut and make a garment—a coat, for instance—that should precisely fit the male form he had carved to would be a mere difficult to do of than to chisel his thoughts into immortality. His effort to cut and make the garment could not fail to show with that of the tailor, and he would very soon discover how far his art falls below and how much steeper is the ascent after it is than that of the sartorial artist. But with all that trouble and annoyance and disappointment that would follow his effort, and with all the consequent humiliation and disgust, he would not fully appreciate the greatest difficulty of the tailor's art, for its study is possible—it is of stone and cannot move. It cannot squirm, as the tailor's object does, nor draw back, nor hunch its shoulders, nor swell its chest, nor thrust out its arms, nor say the air with them in fruitless gesticulation, as the tailor's. The sculptor would realize that the tailor's art is one of innumerable, intricate and bewildering difficulties, and that in defiance of the rather of measures and laws to the glorious freedom of an ibitum. Compiex facilities, well stored memory and clear discernment are, in short, all called into play by tailoring as by no other trade and as frequently and often to as great an extent as in the practice of any art.

Cause of Contagious Diseases.

The marine hospital surgeon detailed to examine into the mysterious epidemic at the Little Rock penitentiary reports that it was caused solely by the filthy condition of the prison. What is worse, this horrible sanitary condition has existed several years. No wonder there has been an epidemic. The only wonder is that the whole adjoining country about Little Rock was not affected and a large percentage of its population swept off by the penitentiary epidemic.

Contagious diseases could spread through a whole country and revel in death and destruction are in every case caused by filth, bad air and starvation. The region over which cholera hovers constantly is one of the most thoroughly unsanitary spots that man at his dirtiest can create, and that is saying much. Typhus fever, the awful plague which stalks through the war closed are now old enough to be national legislators. A very large proportion of the members of the house of representatives in the Fifty-third congress will be under forty years of age. Some of the new senators will be men who were too young to be soldiers thirty years ago. The old leaders of more than a generation have nearly every one dropped out in both houses. Even in the Fifty-second congress there are in the lower house thirty-four members under forty. The new men will have it all their own way from this time on. The old fellows who are yet alive can, when they retire, spend their last years in the dignified and honorable employment of horticulture, as Hannibal Hamlin and the ancient Roman statesmen did.

Here is some wisdom from Matthew Marshall: "A regard for their credit has a more potent influence in inducing men to fulfill their contracts than the fear of legal proceedings. Corporations or individuals who only paid their debts at the end of a lawsuit would very soon have no debts to pay, because they would have no customers."

JUSTICE L. Q. C. LAMAR.

His Sudden Death at a Friend's House in Macon.

A UNIQUE FIGURE OF THE SOUTH.

After Serving In the Confederate Army He Was Elected to Both Houses of Congress, Made a Member of Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet and by Him Appointed Justice.

MACON, Jan. 24.—Justice Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar died here at 8:50 o'clock last evening. The death was sudden in the extreme, for although he has been ailing for some time, Justice Lamar appeared to be gradually gaining in health.

He came from Washington to Macon about about a month ago and had been visiting at the residence of Mr. W. H. Virgin in Vineville, a suburb of this city.

At about 5 o'clock Justice Lamar took his overcoat, intending to go to the city, but was met at the door by a friend, Dr. Llewellyn, with whom he returned to the sitting room. At that time and during all the afternoon he was in good spirits, and at dinner at 6:30 he seemed to have a good appetite. Dr. Llewellyn left the house about 7 o'clock, and a few minutes later the justice was seized with violent pains in the heart and died at the hour mentioned.

JUSTICE L. Q. C. LAMAR.

Characteristics of Judge Lamar.

With the passing away of Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court Lucius Quintus Cincinnatus Lamar one conspicuous political history loses one of its most unique figures.

Mr. Lamar was noted in Washington, where the best years of his life were spent, for his absentmindedness and eccentricities, no less than for his genial nature and charming manners. Every trait of his character was inherited. His father, the late Judge Lamar, associate justice was named, had his unusual cognomen selected for him by an eccentric brother of his mother, who delighted in naming the children after his favorite historical heroes.

Lamar the elder was a lawyer, a compiler and editor of legal decisions, etc., a judge, a bred of unbounded hospitality and an eloquent speaker, but withal a man of many little eccentricities which seemed to be the children of a high and by some strange charm to the unique personality of the dead justice. He seemed to have been but a composite picture of his father and the members of his paternal grandmother's family.

His Early Life.

Like Justice Lamar's personality, his public career was remarkable. He comes of one of the oldest families in Georgia. He was born in Putnam county in 1825, and after his father's death was taken to Oxford, Miss., where his education may be said to have begun. After acquiring all that was to be learned in the Oxford schools young Lamar was sent to Emory college in Georgia. He graduated in 1845, at once commenced the study of law in Macon, and was admitted to the bar two years later.

The practice of law in a small town seemed to fail to satisfy the young attorney, whose inclinations were all toward study, and whose keen analytical sense was only wasted on the trifling cases which were at first entrusted to a beginner. Mr. Lamar, after two years of work, which was eminently unsatisfactory and uncongenial to himself, accepted a position as adjunct professor of mathematics in the University of Mississippi.

Cold, dry figures were no more to his liking than petty legal cases, and after a year at the university, his reputation as an analytical adviser and eloquent advocate having preceded him, Mr. Lamar removed to Oxford, Miss., and resumed the practice of the law. Important cases were given him, and his fame spreading rapidly in his adopted county, the people in 1853 elected him to represent them in the state legislature.

This may be said to have been the beginning of Mr. Lamar's public career, and it came dangerously near being the end, for small politics was not to his liking either, and he gave it up in disgust and in 1856 removed to Mississippi, locating on a plantation which he owned in Lafayette. Here Mr. Lamar had his first opportunity for public officer when he decide between the Union and the confederacy. Mr. Lamar therefore resigned his seat in congress to become a member of the Mississippi secession convention, in which body he played an important part.

When hostilities began, Mr. Lamar accepted a commission as lieutenant colonel of the Nineteenth Mississippi regiment. He was afterward promoted to the colonelcy, and in the spring of his death the people of his home town, Oxford, almost always referred to him as Colonel Lamar and seldom as senator or judge. He hadn't completed his retirement from actual service in the field, Mr. Lamar was sent as a Confederate commissioner to Russia. His mission, as history relates, failed of its purpose.

When the war closed he went back to the University of Mississippi, where he became professor of political economy and social science in 1859, and was given the chair of law a year later. He then gave up his position to go to the bar, which he continued until he was elected to congress in 1872. He was re-elected in 1873 and in 1876 was chosen by the legislature as one of the representatives of the adopted state in the United States senate. He remained in the senate until March 4, 1885, when he accepted the portfolio of secretary of the interior tendered him by President Cleveland.

Appointed by Mr. Cleveland.

On Dec. 6, 1887, Mr. Cleveland sent to the senate the name of L. Q. C. Lamar to be associate justice of the United States supreme court, vice Justice Woods, deceased. After some delay the confirmation was confirmed, and in the latter part of January, 1888, he entered upon the discharge of his new duties.

In the house of representatives and in the senate Mr. Lamar was but a frequent speaker, but whatever he said was attentively listened to, for his utterances always gave evidence of deep thought and careful preparation. He was a graceful and forcible speaker, but never addressed or attempted to employ the graces of the professional orator. With all his absentmindedness and love of hobbies the associate justice was a man of remarkably good judgment, and his ability to quickly read the character of a new acquaintance was almost marvelous. Secretary Vilas once said of him:

"Lamar is a man of magnificent surprises. I did not know him until we met in the cabinet, and during the past two years I have been very intimate with him. I think I have never met any society whose intellect has grown upon me so overwhelmingly as has Lamar's. At times he has consulted with about subjects of public policy which only the decision of a question of law could settle.

"Once he had a most important decision to make. He had not written it, for I believe he does not write his decisions until the last minute, but he had the whole matter revolving in his mind. His began at the beginning and followed the facts. Such a faculty of clear, lucid statement is seldom met. I think in my time no man I have known has possessed it to the same degree as Lamar unless it was the late Matt Carpenter of Wisconsin. Then he began to unfold the principles of law which he thought applicable to the case and rolled on from position to position it was with a ponderous, majestic yet ever delicate and sensitive movement that was simply wonderful.

His Last Appearance.

"I said to myself, this man may not be able to quote the exact section of the law or the particular page of the reported decisions, but he has a mind thoroughly imbued with legal principles and magnificently disciplined.

"Without making invidious comparisons it is my full conviction that Mr. Lamar will stand strength and adornment to the supreme bench. I believe he possesses some qualifications that the bench needs and as the years go on the value of his services will more and establish itself far above the reach of criticism."

Justice Lamar was twice married. His first wife was a cousin of Mr. Lamar, the famous Confederate general. She died early in January, 1885, leaving one son and three daughters, one of whom, Miss Josephine, made her debut in 1887, and soon became a great social favorite at the national capital.

Two years after the death of his first wife Mr. Lamar married Mrs. William S. Holt, the widow of a well known Georgia judge.

The ceremony was performed in Macon on Jan. 5, 1887. Mrs. Holt had a fine mansion and was quite wealthy.

In April, 1887, Justice Lamar was stricken down in Washington with hemorrhages of the lungs, complicated by symptoms of Bright's disease. He had occasional utilities in January, 1888, and after a month exhausted nature succumbed to the strain.

It is said that Mr. Lamar was a more voracious reader than any public man who has ever lived in Washington since the civil war. To this propensity was attributed most of his absentmindedness.

Affairs at Homestead—Frick Sees His Chief, and Everything Will Remain as It Is Unless Mr. Carnegie "Puts His Foot In It"—Nothing to Say For Publication.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Among the passengers of the North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Wilhelm I, which arrived yesterday from Genoa, were Andrew Carnegie, his wife and Miss Whitefield, Mrs. Carnegie's sister, who had been abroad for some time. Mr. Carnegie and his party were the first to leave directly that the ship was made fast to her slip, and entering a coach they were driven rapidly away. At Mr. Carnegie's home at 5 West Fifty-first street Henry Clay Frick met his chief, and for several hours the two were closeted together. To all requests for an interview Mr. Carnegie sent word that he had nothing to say for publication.

Before Mr. Frick left Homestead he was reported to have said that everything at the scene of the recent strike was just as he wanted it, and that it would remain so unless Mr. Carnegie should "put his foot in it" when he arrived home.

James B. Scott of Pittsburg called later in the day. At the time of the Homestead strike Mr. Carnegie was said to have decided to make the offer he had made to donate a public library for the city of Pittsburg, and Mr. Scott is here to make an effort to have the offer remain good.

Beatty's Trial Begins Today.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 24.—The first man arraigned for carrying out the Homestead poisoning plot, Holland F. Beatty, who was captured in Louisville after he had fled from this town, will be put on trial in the criminal court this week. Beatty is charged as was Hugh F. Dempsey, and there are an equal number of counts in his indictment. The number of witnesses to testify is large.

The counsel for Dempsey will move for a new trial. The chief argument in the petition is that the verdict is not in accordance with the court's charge and therefore not according to law. Dempsey still has a great fund of hope.

Dempsey's Jury Were Unanimous.

It is told by one of the jurors that the entire body was a unit for conviction from the first. Attorney Bell, the New York lawyer who came here to defend Jack Clifford, has gone home again, the Clifford trial being postponed.

Thomas Gompers of the American Federation of Labor and officials of the Amalgamated association were in secret conference all day yesterday, considering the evidence to secure in the coming Homestead murder, riot and treason cases. The acquittal of Critchlow did much to enable those to her debit in favor and sound sympathies with the men, but Dempsey's conviction has caused a renewed feeling of uneasiness, so that it is the desire to make the strongest defense in behalf of Pops when awaiting trial as possible under the circumstances.

Indiana Political Fights.

LAFORTE, Jan. 24.—Hon. M. H. Wedrent suit against Judge Daniel Noyes of Michigan City, to recover $50,000 for alienation of affections, claiming damages to the amount of $10,000. In the campaign of 1888 Mr. Weyer, though a Democrat, opposed Mr. Noyes' candidacy for circuit judge, which ex-hausted nature succumbed to the strain.

It is said that Mr. Lamar was a more voracious reader than any public man who has ever lived in Washington since the civil war. To this propensity was attributed most of his absentmindedness.

LEGISLATORS WRANGLE.

The Day Was One of Cross Purposes in Both Houses and Senate.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Barely has a more boisterous meeting been held over a bi-partisan and non-personal measure than that which occurred in the house yesterday. Members were at cross purposes over the quarantine bill. Its most earnest supporters believed that it did not go far enough, and while they acquiesced in some of the amendments made by the New York members, they did so under protest and in the belief that otherwise the measure would meet a lingering death through filibustering. After many parliamentary wrangles the bill was finally passed. And then another snag was struck, and this time it was placed in the channel by the Pennsylvania members in the course of the New York and New Jersey bridge bill.

In its original form this bill was opposed by the New York members, but an agreement between them and the advocates of the measure had been reached. However, the Pennsylvania members had not been consulted, and their objections led to the withdrawal of the bill. The remainder of the day was consumed in the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. Chandler diverted the senate by arraigning two Republican senators (Messrs. Hoar of Massachusetts and Platt of Connecticut) for putting forward against the antioption bill a constitutional argument that would be equally strong in its application to the tariff law. He warned them that they would be called upon to defend the tariff law in the next congress if the Democrats were true to the platform on which the presidential ticket had been elected.

He intimated that their contention that taxes could only be imposed for the purpose of revenue would be fatal to a high protective tariff. At the conclusion of Mr. Chandler's speech the antioption bill went over without action, an agreement having previously been reached that the vote on that bill shall be taken next week. In the discussion of a proposed amendment to the Cherokee outlet bill Mr. Platt of Connecticut referred to the president-elect as a man "whose desire to take care of the best interests of the country would get the better of any desire to serve his friends."

MR. BLAINE NOT IMPROVED.

The Visits of the Physicians, However, Are Less Frequent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Yesterday it was stated at the Blaine mansion that the patient was resting comfortably and that there was no change in his condition. The usual afternoon visit of the physicians was omitted.

Dr. Johnston visited Mr. Blaine at 6 o'clock. On leaving the house he said he considered the patient just a trifle stronger than the day before, but this was almost imperceptible. Mr. Blaine, he said, rested well during the day, and from present indications he did not look for any change during the night and would not return unless summoned. The doctor was asked if he considered Mr. Blaine's condition improved. He replied that he did not, and that he was still very feeble.

BIG BANK CRASH IN NEBRASKA.

The Bankers Had Been Paying Six Per Cent on $525,000 of Deposits.

LINCOLN, Jan. 24.—The Capital National bank of Lincoln has failed. The immediate cause of this was that State Treasurer Hartley, who had about $250,000 there on deposit, gave notice that he would require $100,000 within a week. The bank had been paying 6 per cent on about $525,000 of deposits. The bank skipped a dividend last time and has been in a shaky condition for several weeks. Cashier Outcalt said that the assets would fully protect the depositors, but this is doubted.

PHILLIPS BROOKS DEAD.

A Divine Whose Love For Humanity Was Broad.

HIS DEATH CAUSED BY PNEUMONIA

The Eminent Episcopal Bishop of Massachusetts Who Preached in Churches of Other Denominations Than His Own and Who Possessed Rare Gifts of Eloquence.

BOSTON, Jan. 24.—Right Rev. Phillips Brooks, D. D., bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts, died yesterday of pneumonia.

Last Thursday morning he contracted a slight cold, which, however, caused him no alarm. Dr. Beach, the family physician, called during the day and gave him some medicine, advising him, more as a precautionary measure than anything else, to remain indoors until the trouble had disappeared.

Everything progressed well until Sunday, when diphtheria sympt ms set in. During Sunday evening he seemed to grow worse. Dr. Beach was with him the entire night. The patient was seized with a coughing spasm toward morning, which lasted for a few moments, when his heart ceased to beat.

BISHOP PHILLIPS BROOKS.

Shortly before midnight the patient's mind began to wander, although he was conscious. Looking up at his faithful and beloved servant, the bishop said:

"Katie, you can go. I shall not need you any more. I am going home."

These were the last words of the great Episcopal divine, the man who has made the diocese second only in prominence in this country.

The Bishop's Consecration.

The consecration of Mr. Brooks as bishop was an event of unusual interest not only to Episcopalians, but also to Christian people of all shades of religious belief, for Mr. Brooks by his work in the ministry unconsciously become so identified with the religious life of Boston and become so ingrafted into the hearts of the people that no single church was large enough to monopolize his influence. The event was significant, because of the world-wide reputation of the man who was then to be made the head of the Episcopal church in this state.

The broad and catholic spirit of Mr. Brooks, his kindly, generous, philanthropic nature, his singleminded purpose to do the will of the Divine Master and his entire absorption in the cause of Christianity and the uplifting of poor humanity all combined to give him a place in the affections of the people, which is not often accorded to great men, and at the same time won for him the respect and love of strong denominational men. Some of the opposition to the confirmation of Mr. Brooks was instigated by those who thought that he was too tolerant to be at the head of so great a denomination. Bishop Brooks was one of the busiest men in Boston. From early morning often till late at night his work went on, seven days in the week.

He was a greatly overworked man, and but for his fine physique and his robust health he would long ago have succumbed to the burden which has gradually increased from year to year.

A Distinguished Career.

Phillips Brooks was born in Boston Dec. 13, 1835. He graduated at Harvard in 1855, studied theology in the seminary at Alexandria, Va., was ordained in 1859, and became rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Advent, Philadelphia, a comparatively obscure charge. Three years later he became rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity, one of the largest and most fashionable churches in Philadelphia. He remained there seven years, in 1869 becoming rector of Trinity church, Boston. About a year ago he was consecrated bishop of the diocese of Massachusetts, succeeding the late Benjamin Henry Paddock.

While he was pastor of Trinity church Dr. Brooks declined many calls elsewhere, a professorship in Harvard and the office of assistant bishop of Pennsylvania, to which he was elected in 1886.

In his Boston parish he exerted a powerful influence for good, especially over young men.

Bishop Brooks was one of the most brilliant pulpit orators of the Protestant Episcopal church and had a more rapid delivery probably than any clergyman in the country. He was noted for his "low church" views and preached in the churches of other denominations than his own.

Bishop Brooks published "Lectures on Preaching," delivered before the Yale Divinity school (New York, 1877); "Sermons" (1878 and 1881); "The Influence of Jesus," Bohlen lectures, delivered in Philadelphia in 1879, and "Baptism and Confirmation" (1880).

Bishop Brooks was the ninth pastor settled over Trinity parish, and he was the fifth rector of Trinity who has been consecrated to the highest office of the Episcopal church.

A Stylish Hat.

gradiating from brown at the stem to mauve at the tips. A brown velvet band and a rose at the left side rest on the hair.

The long empire veil falling in graceful folds is shown with this hat. These veils are tacked together at the nape of the neck with small bows of baby ribbon.

Petticoats Bedecked.

There is a rumor in the fashionable world to the effect that petticoats are to be banished for trousers of monstrous size, made of silk or satin and trimmed with lace. Of course these will not be adopted at once, but there certainly are indications that the petticoat is doomed for ordinary everyday wear. It may not disappear today or tomorrow, but in the coming by and by the ordinary undergarments of the ordinary women will assume the form of a pair of trousers. Combination garments are now on the market, of silk and of woolen, that include petticoat, knickerbockers and chemise.

Popular Colors.

The new shades of purple and violet that are coming into vogue may suit a few blonds, but they are by no means becoming to dark women. All the same the popularity of petunia, magenta and violet continues to grow apace. In time the violet, it is believed, will supersede the other shades, but for the moment petunia is the most in demand.

Fashion Notes.

Rings with two flowers and colored stones are seen These are a variation of an old fashion. They are shaped like forget-me-nots, with a stone in the center surrounded by stones of another color.

The long shoulder seams of the 1830 styles do not meet with much favor, but the skirts very full around the bottom are making their way toward more general recognition.

Hats being large afford a wide field for placing ornamentation—large velvet bows, always with two pointed ends like ears, feathers and gold buckles. On some toques a tuft of curled feathers is placed at the side, fastened with a jewel.

THE GLORIFIED SKIRT

THE BODICE AT LAST LOSES IT: SWAY.

The Skirt Will Revel in Galons and Velvets. Ribbons and Other Enchantments—Nothing Will Be Too Good for It—The Merchants Rejoice.

For a whole year now we have been solicitous upon the bodice, and its caprices that our poor extremities, all unhoused and undecorated, have been left to get on as best they might in skimpy covering of severest cut. The skirt has asserted itself. It threatens vengeance dire for our indifference to its possibilities. They revel in galons and velvets, in ribbons and passementeries, which bring up a gown to the high water mark.

BEAUTIFUL IN WHIPCORD SILK.

The merchants rejoice that now a gown may not be made of a small pattern, and that quantities of trimming will be required for a handsome effect, and also that fixing over gowns will be out of the question, for last year's skirt is just half too narrow even now for this year's mode, and by the time the flowers bloom in the spring they will be like a flannel shirt at the third washing—quite out of sight. The New York item fashion writer says the authorities disagree as to the dimensions of the skirt proper, some insisting on the circumference of 5¼ yards, others on a 4-yard measure. The number of breadths required varies, too, in like manner; but the golden mean, the happy average, includes the mystic number seven.

These seven breadths are arranged so that each one folded in the middle is sloped off at the top, measuring twenty-two inches at the bottom and not much over half as wide at the top. The skirt is gathered to the belt in front and gathered again at the back with a short stitch and a long one to get the fullness into a small space. No balayeuse is needed, but many women are so attached to the pretty inner ruffles that they cling to them still.

Authorities disagree, too, as to the feasibility of using a stiff finish at the edge, for the petticoat is now trimmed with many overlapping frills to give the desired flare at the bottom. Of the dresses shown in the illustrations of this mode, one is of whipcord silk in ecru, with a finish of mink tails on the edge and many bands of brown galon brightened with gold and a touch of turquoise. The bodice is what is called the pelerine bodice and is lined with blue and finished with fur and gold. The bonnet is brown, with a gold buckle in its bow and yellow roses inside its deep brim.

The other dress, in pale blue ondine silk, has ruffles of blue chiffon beaded with crystal passementeries and a double collar of dahlia velvet finished with crystal beads and lined with blue. Double puffed sleeves of velvet in the dahlia color and a sash belt of the same material complete the gown, which belongs to the 1845 period, that has been very lately added to the different dress epochs from which modes are copied this season.

Ruffled Collars.

If you have a bit of velvet and a little fur, and nothing particular to do with it, make yourself a collar in this way: Make two ruffles of the velvet, each over a finger long, and sew them together so you have a double ruffle; run ribbon along the seam, so it will be between the ruffles; edge the ruffles with fur. Of course you line them with a pretty bit of silk. Now tie them about your throat so one ruffle goes up and the other goes down. If the upper one does not fit up as close as you want, put another piece of ribbon in just the right place to make it hold tighter.

A Dress Tonic.

Following a popular English caprice, red corded silk costumes in ottoman faille and bengaline are made into fur trimmed Russian costumes for brides-maids at church weddings. Many persons have a decided antipathy to this color, but on a dull, leaden winter's day red in some of its richer shades has the effect of a tonic.

For Women Who Board.

The ability to mind one's own business is a most commendable and beautiful virtue, but still there are some women who board who have so few affairs of their own with which to occupy their time that the greater portion of the day, and many hours of the night as well, are spent in talking about what does not concern them in the least.

Their entire world is encompassed by the four walls of the house that holds them, and the doings and sayings of the inmates are the staple topic of conversation. In the morning they gather in each other's rooms, and the conversation opens with a discussion of at what hour the next door neighbor arrived home the night before, the business and income of the new boarder is the second story front, the quarrel between Mr. and Mrs. So-and-so, which, by the way, they never would have known anything about if one of the members had not glued her ear to a convenient crack in the adjoining door, and many other topics of a like interesting and elevating character.

Now, it is a perfect wonder to busy women how these ladies find the time for such lengthy discourses. Surely the reading of a course of standard literature would be a much more worthy treat; the quarrel is not and not lead to the mischief that such gossip always results in. Oh, women who board, take care! Take care, lest your judgment be warped and your conclusions too hasty. Surface observation tells you nothing of the real life of men or women, and unless you desire the boomerang of your venom to recoil upon your own character, watch the tongue carefully lest it lead to gossip and scandal that has no foundation in actual fact.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Feminine Luxuries in Rio.

A woman home from a long residence in Rio Janeiro says that the greatest boon to her from her friends up here was that of a bonnet. "The common people never wear them," she says, "and the grandees get them made to suit their peculiar ideas of headgear, specially and at exorbitant prices. Such a thing as an average bonnet that my country woman have by the dozen almost at home is simply not to be obtained. I met a missionary's wife down there when I first reached the city, and in talking with her of her separate needs she laughed as she said in all earnestness: 'And, oh, a bonnet. If they will put a bonnet in the next box I shall be happy,' which may be of value to some other packers of boxes for Rio.

"Another felt want to American women down there, which, however, cannot be supplied by caterers, is that of closet facilities. Closets or wardrobes are unknown in the native houses, and a few hooks about the wall is the only way to dispose of clothing that cannot be folded. One reason for this is that nothing is ever packed away for any length of time for fear of gathering dampness in that moist climate. Things must be turned over constantly. Brazilian women do not miss these conveniences as we do, however, as their belongings are much fewer, and the scarcity of space in the American woman of fashion thinks indispensable would amaze a Rio belle."—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Showing Off.

There is nothing so aggressively unpleasant as the tendency some women exhibit at all times and places to show off. It is a trait not confined to the very young, and is indulged in by rich and poor alike. From observation we are disposed to believe that it is a trait of fever which cannot be controlled, for women who are usually the most sensible of their sex will, without any apparent cause, be led into it.

It generally assails them in some public place, such as the street cars or a ladies' restaurant, and rages fiercely so long as there is any one around to hear them. What their object is will never be discovered, for no one is in the least deceived by it or led to think any more of them for it.

It may be that they use only their "company voice," which is employed for the benefit of strangers alone, and is so painfully affected that one realizes the instant it is heard that the "gallery" is now being talked at.

This method is usually distinguishable by the use of "cawn't" and "shawn't," which drop into "don't" and "don't" directly the stranger for whose benefit they have been employed has vanished.

Other women do not go in so much for pronunciation as for loud and dilate largely on their servants, the plural number always being employed, so as to give the listeners the idea of a large retinue.—Philadelphia Times.

Appointments of the Guest Chamber.

However small and simple may be the chamber in which you lodge your pilgrim, its appointments must be scrupulously comfortable. Your guest may bring all necessary articles with him, yet it is your duty to make ready as if he came unequipped for more than a morning call. Prepare for him as if he had started from a transatlantic dock a half hour's notice. He will rise up and call you blessed when he finds it unnecessary to confess his total forgetfulness of a button hook or his oversight of a hairbrush.

In these days of numerous inventions it is impossible to know all the improvements in household arrangements, so if there be anything peculiar in the methods of heating, lighting or ventilating your rooms, be sure to explain them. A visitor can experience no one sensation comparable with awakening on a cold morning to the consciousness that he doesn't know how to open the shutters, and that in the quiet of the night arrayed for bed, to find that the light is to be put out by some method entirely unknown to him. One thing more. You must tell the stranger within your gates before he retires the hour for breakfast, and, if there is no rising bell, it is well to ask if he desires to be called in the morning.—Good Housekeeping.

Fortunate Little Women!

Don't you worry about the little woman! Just analyze her a bit before you waste any great amount of sympathy upon her. That baby mouth wasn't made in vain. Ever since one of those little women stood up in a street car, or carry her own parcels home, or get in or out of a carriage without having half a dozen men run to assist her? And all just because she is a little woman, and has that helpless, imploring look, as if she couldn't stand the least bit of trouble in the world. And every man feels sorry for her and is ready to extend his sympathy and assistance. I've watched her—I've made a study of her tricks and her ways. She just looks at a man out of those appealing eyes and he is her slave. Ever since Eve ruled Adam by a pout and a tear, the little women have been helped to all the good things of life because I look so small and sweet and helpless. Little woman! Little humbug.—Exchange.

Don't Spoil the Soup.

Appreciation of a good dinner is often destroyed in advance by a heavy supper. Many hosts and caterers make this mistake. The prelude to a course dinner should be a thin, clear soup, and portions less than enough to float a yacht should be served.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

The Greatest Boy.

It is believed that in New York alone there are not less than 100,000 children under eighteen years of age who are practically homeless. Many of these sleep under and some of them know no other home than the dumps on the docks. Homeless little fellows are rooted out by almost every liv ery stable or tenement house fire, and all this despite the fact that the societies that look after these waifs are active in every direction. Nearly all the newsboys are homeless and have neither father nor mother. On summer nights they can be found in packing boxes and barrels, huddled among the straw. In winter nights they frequent the newsboys' lodging house, in Duane street, and curl up on the steam pipes in the basements of the great newspaper offices.

The night that General Sherman died three little fellows were asleep in the gutters on the north side of the postoffice, when a fire broke out in the cellar and little Joe was so badly burned that he died. Since that time the police have been more vigilant to prevent accidents of a similar nature. Think of a little abandoned baby, without a rag of clothing on it, nestling about in a dirty alley like a little human pig for two weeks before it is cared for!—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Dog Paper Carrier.

Tag was only a month old when John found him one cold winter morning in the street. As he seemed to have no home, John took him and made him his pet. A most useful pet the little dog afterward proved to be, for when Tag grew a little and became strong he began to follow his master every morning while he left the morning papers at the houses along the streets.

But John little knew what an intelligent little animal was running along by him every day. He did not know that this little animal was gradually learning exactly at which houses the papers were to be left. And he probably never would have known it, had it not been for a mistake he made one morning.

On one of the streets they used to pass through were two adjoining houses built exactly alike, and at one of these John left used to leave a paper each morning. He must have been thinking of something else on this particular occasion, or perhaps he forgot for a moment which was the right house. But whatever the reason was, he threw the paper in the front door of the wrong one. He was passing along when he heard Tag bark and saw him run up the steps, seize the paper in his mouth and run to the front door of the next house and leave it there.

Just think how surprised John must have been! And how proud little Tag must have felt! That made John think he could make Tag quite useful to him. So after that he used to leave the papers only on one side of the street and Tag would leave them on the other side, running across each time to get the paper from his master.—Our Little Ones.

The Doll Feast in Japan.

Now you shall hear of the doll feast of Japan, which, I must tell you, is not a repast, not a great banquet for dolls, nor a big dinner for the little girls whose dolls they are.

The doll feast of Japan is a great national fete, a sort of doll fair or festival that comes every year, and to which the whole nation looks forward with pleasure.

The streets of the cities are made gay with fancy booths, decorated with all the colors of the rainbow and more colors besides. In these attractive shops are displayed for sale dolls in their most gorgeous attire. Dolls of all ages and styles wait patiently for the delighted multitude, who are sure to assemble before every booth. Altogether it is a very grand picturesque sight. The people put on their holiday clothes, and with their children go about from street to street admiring and purchasing the LOCAL UNION Y. P. S. C. E.

THE ANNUAL MEETING HELD IN THE SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

A Large Attendance of Members.—Mr. E. M. Cabe Elected President.—An Address by the Rev. Charles E. Herring.

The annual meeting of Plainfield Local Union Y. P. S. C. E. was held in the Seventh-day Baptist church, on Madison avenue, last evening. The auditorium was filled to its utmost capacity by an audience of Christian Endeavorers and their friends.

The exercises opened with prayer by the Rev. Mr. Hutchinson of Elizabeth, followed by the reading of scriptures by the Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park avenue Baptist church.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected:

President—Mr. E. M. Cabe.
Vice-President—Mr. H. J. Martin.
Secretary and Treasurer—Miss Hawkins.

A resolution was adopted thanking the retiring president, Mr. Marvin M. Dunham, for the able and efficient manner in which he had attended to the duties of that office.

The Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of First Presbyterian church, delivered an address. He took for his theme "Moral Earthquakes," making four points of analogy between the physical and the moral earthquake. He said:

"In the first place the earthquake arouses and alarms. There is a tendency in spiritual lethargy—churches tend to develop or degenerate into social club houses, for the elect, and select society. Benchwarming should give way to activity. Christian endeavor means Christian en deavor—Christians in the line of duty. We are the elect of God, not to be saved but to save. The first thought I would present therefore, is, that you rouse yourselves to Christian activity. The second thought is that the earthquake means destruction. Cities have been overwhelmed and the courses of rivers changed by the earthquake. In 1169 the earthquake destroyed 15,000 lives in Calabria; in 1416 Naples lost 60,000 lives; in 1755 Lisbon's earthquake destroyed 75,000 souls. Spiritual earthquakes destroy. We need the scaffolding destroyed; the false props destroyed; the weak supports of our faith destroyed. The spiritual and moral earthquakes force man to rest upon the divine foundation. The human must go.

"Religion needs shaking up. Boundaries need to be broken down. A view of heaven is that there will be no temple in it. No boundary walls. It will be all temple. Moral earthquakes are not only destructive, they are constructive. The earthquake repairs more than it destroys. Our planet could not exist without the earthquake.

"The Ganges river carries into the sea as much of the soil of India as would build a space as large as Egypt. The coast of Chili in the earthquake of 1883 rose from two to seven feet. The earthquake preserves the land from the steady inroads of the sea. Many churches, Christian Endeavor societies need a periodical shaking up. Revivals are essential. Plainfield is not Paradise. Churches are abundant, but the devil is roaring just the same. Lastly, I read in Acts 4:31—'And when they had prayed the place was shaken.' Prayer is the shaking power. God hides his power till we ask for it. The spirit is in the world just as fire is in the earth. Let us pray for destruction, the destruction of the human, the sinful. Volcanic soil is fertile. Vesuvius is surrounded with vineyards. At the beginning of your new year, may you be stirred to renewed activity; may the spiritual earthquake destroy the weak supports of your faith. Then the sunlight of divine authority for you is the Holy Spirit. This is the despensation of the spirits. The Holy Spirit will construct for you a better life if by a life of prayer you hold communion with Him."

Reports were read from the different societies, showing them to be in splendid condition, financially and otherwise.

After several short talks by members the meeting was brought to a close by the pronouncing of the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Livermore.

A LANTERN SLIDE EVENING.

The Plainfield Camera Club Exhibits the Work of the Hoboken Club.

An exhibition of lantern slides made by members of the Hoboken Camera Club was given by the Plainfield Camera Club in its club room last evening. The exhibition consisted of about a hundred views taken mostly in parts of the country very remote from Hoboken. They were, with a few exceptions, very poorly made and were freely criticised by the members of our local club. As object lessons will doubtless do much good.

There was a large audience, in which they were many ladies.

The slides for the next lecture, which is to be given Feb. 7, are said to be very fine. They come from a large Brooklyn organization.

Charged with Keeping a Disorderly House.

The police last night arrested Agnes Posenberg of Leland avenue. She is charged with keeping a disorderly house. As the city was not prepared to try the case this morning it was adjourned until next Monday, and the defendant placed under $200 bail to appear for trial.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

THE REPORT MADE BY MISS JULIA E. BULKLEY.

To State Superintendent A. R. Poland for the School Year Ending August 31, 1892—Successful School Work in Plainfield.

The following report was received from the Board of Education last night. It is the annual statement made at the end of the school year, August 31, 1892, by Miss Julia E. Bulkley, superintendent and Supervising Principal of the Plainfield schools, at that time, and shows a most gratifying result:

To Hon. A. R. Poland, State Superintendent:

One of our constant and serious problems is the accommodation of our rapidly increasing school population. An equally perplexing question is the flexible school, opened at the holidays, and then completed by division of overcrowded primary classes. The high school, primary and grammar of Misses Emma Bonham and Mary Bonham, in charge of the younger classes in the Grant school building, are the two most brought into step, each succeeding in the excellent results toward the time when each school shall have a room suitably furnished, shall have children of three or four years of age, and shall be ready to attend the kindergarten instead. Through this plan and wonders indeed of observation and self-activity are seen with the teacher of the primary.

MANUAL SCHOOLS.

The latest problem that has to be solved is location of the High school. It is gradually outgrowing its present and inadequate quarters. The services of a specialist and the increased classes are crowded to the present limits of room. The question of higher education is increasing yearly.

Of the nineteen graduates of this year all of the eight boys and seven girls expect to enter upon the academic or scientific courses at some college, and of the thirty-one coming graduates nearly all of the girls and boys have already chosen their colleges and have taken preliminary examinations. Another year this will have been added to the long list of these receiving college degrees and certificates. One interesting feature has been the voluntary interest in self-improvement. Debates, mock parliaments, papers and other literary efforts, private and public, were some of the means of self-training. Two lectures were given for foundation." Museum of Natural History, one on Early Language, another on the Daily Life of the Chinese, and a course of lectures on American authors, Holmes, Hawthorne, Lowell and Whittier, Vincent chapel, given under the direction of the High school and netted a handsome sum for an addition to our library. The alumni association, too numbering over three hundred, has this year formed a permanent organization.

ORDER IN SCHOOL.

Arithmetic.—All home work is memory work and to secure more intelligent, independent thought in arithmetic has been the aim of the teacher in her direct work with the class. Drill for the purpose of keeping the applications of a problem is made as prominent as skill and accuracy in getting results.

Language.—Language has formed a part of every lesson although receiving attention in daily, special lessons. Practical expression by the pupils should however be made more prominent to correspond with the training in the scientific form.

Penmanship.—The experiment was tried this year of omitting regular lessons in penmanship for the half year in the grammar classes. Since pen and ink is used in the first year in the primary and in the high school, the writing as well as formerly in the grammar rooms, this will readily do away with the necessity of training in penmanship in the grammar grades, except in the lowest, and permit the use of the time in other directions.

Science.—The classes have made a marked advance in their study of plant field fauna, and flora, mineralogy, groupings and classifying, with a study of the human body, physiology, hygiene and relations and careful drill and memory work should there results. Some of the best work has been done in the high school in the study of physiology.

Drawing.—In no department have we more skilful teachers and there has been more marked advance in methods and general interest and results than in drawing. We also show that there are dangers in modern methods.

Music.—The value of the old memory in number we are in danger of neglecting memory. Objects and illustrations are but a means to an end. The study of

The World's Congresses.

It is now certain that the Columbian exposition will be the greatest world's fair that ever was, even industrially. But one of the unique features—one of the noblest as well—will be the series of international congresses that will occupy the months of the exhibition. These congresses are designed to present the intellectual and moral progress of man in every department of the world of ideas. Side by side with the grand display of the things man has made will run the presentation of the far grander ideas man has thought.

The congresses will be held under the auspices of the World's Congress auxiliary, an organization formed to take charge of them. Hon. Charles C. Bonney, World's Congress headquarters, Chicago, is president of the World's Congress auxiliary. They will begin the middle of May with the ever popping up woman question, and will close with the congress of agriculture, beginning Oct. 16. The meetings will be in the noble Permanent Memorial Art palace, in Lake Front park. This fine building has two audience rooms large enough to hold 4,000 people and more than twenty smaller rooms for committee meetings.

The industrial exposition will show what man is doing for himself. The world's congresses will show what man is doing for man. Their influence in fusing and welding what the old dreamers named the solidarity of man will be inestimable. We give below the list of the congresses, with time of meeting.

In looking through the list one is struck with the fact that the subject of public health is placed about as far away from that of medicine and surgery as it can be. Is there any ulterior sarcasm in this, might one ask? The tendency to differentiation in every department of thought and action at the present day is well illustrated in the fact that the engineering convention will have seven sections—those of electrical, mechanical, civil, mining, metallurgical and military and marine engineering. Before many years there will be added another department, that of aerial engineering.

The continent of Africa will occupy a large place in the deliberations of the general department during August. The congress of African ethnology will meet during the week beginning Aug. 14. Among those meeting the week beginning Aug. 21 will be that of psychical science, though many wise men are still disputing whether it should be raised to the dignity of being called a science. It will deal with hypnotism, clairvoyance, visions, thought transference and other kinds of spookery.

The congresses will assemble as follows:

May—Women's Progress, The Public Press, Medicine and Surgery.

June—Temperance, Moral and Social Reform, Commerce and Finance.

July—Music, Literature, Education.

August—Government, Science and Mechanics, etc.

September—Law Reform, Political Science, etc., General Department, Science and Philosophy.

September—Labor, Religion, Missions and Church Federation.

October—Sunday Rest, Public Health, Agriculture.

The New Gold Mines.

They are in the San Juan river valley, in southeastern Utah. The region attended by the gold discoveries is the four corners of Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and Colorado. The way most of the prospectors reach the fields is through southwestern Colorado. The Navajo Indian reservation lies between New Mexico and Arizona and just south of where Utah and Colorado come together. Thousands of the mining boomers must pass through the Navajo reservation to reach the mines, and there is a prospect of a disturbance among the Indians on that account.

One feature of the new mines is that they are situated in a warm climate. Sixty miles south of the San Juan gold field is the place where old John D. Lee, of Mormon Mountain Meadow massacre notoriety, lived, and there gigs grow. The precious metal thus far found is got by the placer mode of mining. The "pay dirt" is found in the banks and bars of the San Juan river. Another find has been made along the Trinity river in the Henry mountains. Whether the placer mines will be the means of leading to the richer, more reliable lodes is yet among the unknown things the future holds.

A curious case is narrated in which electricity was used with signal success to resuscitate an apparently drowned man. All other means had failed and life seemed extinct. Then one electrode of a small machine was placed over his heart, the other at the nape of his neck and the current turned on. The heart began to beat again in a few moments, and it was not long till life came back in full pulsation.

The right way to settle the immigration question will be to establish a thorough national quarantine, whose regulations can be applied rigidly when necessary, and then leave the whole matter of suspending immigration to the discretion of the president. If cholera threatens, he can then stop immigration—if not, he can let it alone.

AN INCANDESCENT WAR.

Has Edison Claimed an Invention of Goebel?

ELECTRIC LIGHTS MADE IN 1859.

Interesting Experiments of a Poor German Electrician—The First Incandescent Light Called Out the New York Fire Department—Erected on a Roof.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—With reference to the defense offered by the Beacon Lamp company at Boston in the suit of the Edison company to restrain it from manufacturing electric incandescent lamps, alleged to be infringements on the Edison system, Mr. Franklin L. Pope gives a full history of the inventions by Goebel. The electric lights manufactured by Goebel in New York in 1859 are claimed by the Beacon company and by many expert electricians to antedate and anticipate Edison's inventions.

THOMAS A. EDISON.

Mr. Pope recalls Gobel's frequent appearance in the streets of New York just before the war with his somewhat crude but effective apparatus for making incandescent light, which separates the Hessian philosopher exhibited to the public, along with a huge telescope, also made by himself, for a small consideration.

Heinrich Goebel, who was born in Springer, Germany, in 1818, pursued various experiments in galvanic and magnet electric machinery under Professor Mosigmann before coming to this country in 1848. He then established a little optician's shop in New York, continuing his experiments with electricity. One night he astonished the citizens and called out the fire department by erecting an electric arc light on his roof, supplied by about 80 cells.

Discovered the Filament by Accident.

One day he discovered while burning out some wood from an iron ferule that the carbonized fibers were conductors of electricity. This led him to construct an incandescent lamp in a vacuum, the filament being of bamboo and also of tampico. These were attached to wires of platinum, iron or copper, sealed airtight into the tube by fusion. The air was exhausted by means of mercury and the lamp then hermetically sealed by fusion. From as early as 1855 until after 1881 I frequently made such lamps and always had a number of them in my possession; often lighted my shop with them with the aid of a battery of about 30 zinc carbon cells.

"In 1859-60 I was accustomed to exhibit in various public places in New York city a large battery and two or three of my incandescent lamps, which I was accustomed to light up to attract the attention of the passersby. Some of these lamps have been preserved."

Goebel's English Prevented Success.

Mr. Goebel states as his reason for not coming forward sooner with his claim that he speaks English with difficulty and cannot read it at all, and that he thought the lamp was not valuable in the way he used it, as it was too expensive to be anything but a plaything.

Mr. Pope, in commenting on this fact, says that it is not strange, in view of all the circumstances, that the knowledge of the applicability of the dynamo to not only begin to attract public attention in 1880, did not reach Goebel till 1881, when the company formed to manufacture the Edison lamp learned of his experiment, and found to their surprise that Goebel was not only an expert manufacturer of carbon filaments as well as of complete lamps, but that he had quite a stock of these in possession, with the appliances necessary to their production. He might have applied for a patent at that time, but in view of his long continued and repeated use of the invention in public more than 20 years before, it is a matter of doubt whether a valid patent could have been granted to him.

Fortschritt Mine Accident.

VIENNA, Jan. 25.—Dispatches from Dux say that 80 miners were killed and scores injured by an explosion which occurred when the shifts were changing. A cage full of miners had been lowered half way down the shaft when the ground trembled and a rumbling report was heard.

A Rich Colorado Find.

Fair Haven Scorched.

FAIR HAVEN, Vt., Jan. 25.—A disastrous conflagration broke out at midnight last night and came near destroying the entire town. Aid was asked for from Whitehall.

Uxbridge Receives a Library.

WORCESTER, Mass., Jan. 25.—Edward C. Thayer of Keene, N. H., has presented the town of Uxbridge, his birthplace, with a library building and site to cost $60,000.

Murderer Coy Hospited.

The Pope May Lose $200,000.

ROME, Jan. 25.—The pope had a current account of $200,000 with the Geor.hi Banking company, who closed their doors.

BISHOP BROOKS' FUNERAL.

Bishop Potter of New York Will Officiate Thursday Next.

BOSTON, Jan. 25.—The funeral services over the remains of Bishop Phillips Brooks in Trinity church Thursday will be conducted by Right Rev. Henry Codman Potter, bishop of New York, who will be assisted by Bishop Clark of Rhode Island and Rev. Dr. Donald, rector of Trinity church. While those who are directing the arrangements for the funeral realize the place that the late bishop held in the hearts of the entire community within and outside of the limits of his own church, and realize as well that even Trinity will be unable to hold probably thousands who would like to be admitted, they have found it necessary to govern their arrangements so as to accommodate the members of the church in the diocese and kindred associations, so that when that is accomplished it is doubtful if there will be any seats left for the general public.

St. Augustine Caster Harvest.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 25.—A special from St. Augustine to The Evening Telegram says: A fire which started at 2:00 o'clock yesterday morning in the Casino building adjoining the Hotel Alcazar raged stubbornly for nearly five hours, but was confined to that structure, which was badly gutted. The loss will probably reach $500,000. The Casino covers an area of 500 by 300 feet. Its walls were of solid concrete. The ground floor occupied by billiard rooms and bowling alleys. The south and central portions for three floors were occupied by an immense swimming pool, opening from which were magnificent apartments fitted up in oriental style for Russian and Turkish baths. The upper floors were occupied as servants' quarters for the Alcazar and other hotels. The fire was caused by a servant pulling down a gas fixture while attempting to light it. The Casino was built in 1887 by H. M. Flagler at a cost of $220,000. Mr. Flagler was on his way here from New York.

Without Electric Light.

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., Jan. 25.—This town is without electric light, which for nearly a year ex-Mayor Gleason's Electric Lighting company has been furnishing. The reason is that the company can obtain no water to operate their plant. Commissioner of Public Works Starkey, having discovered that the company has not been paying for the supply which was taken from the main through a blind pipe, shut it off. Ex-Mayor Gleason's health commissioners attempted to gain admission to the board room at the city hall, but police on duty put them out of the building. Mayor Sudd's new police board met and made a number of transfers. Acting Sergeant Henry Buchanan, a strong supporter of Gleason, was put on duty. The new board of admission met and elected Alfred Nelson, whom ex-Mayor Gleason assaulted a year ago, as president. The fire and police boards were organized, with Mayor Sanford as president.

Tupper Says No.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Charles H. Tupper, minister of marine fisheries in the Canadian government, says: "The talk of the great desire of Canadians for annexation is entirely misrepresented. Canada does not want annexation. We want to be good neighbors and that is all. No one in favor of annexation has been elected on that platform to even the smallest office in Canada. The party now in power in Canada is partly kept in because of the distrust that the opposition party even have slightly thoughts toward annexation."

To Legalize Sunday Papers.

HARRISBURG, Jan. 25.—The agitation in Pittsburg of the Law and Order society against Sunday newspapers and the decision of the state supreme court in sustaining the arrest of the publisher here of a Sunday paper have attracted considerable attention and it is said that before the legislature would enact a law legalizing the publication and sale of papers on Sunday. Such a bill was introduced in the house by Mr. Marshall of Allegheny.

Will Try to Impeach Governor Crounse.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 25.—The house took official notice of the collapse of the Capital National bank, in which state funds to the amount of $230,000 were deposited on application of the bank, and by Governor Crounse. Representative Barry of Greeley offered a resolution providing for the impeachment of Governor Crounse.

Locked in Burning Cars.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Jan. 25.—Another rear end collision occurred on the Pennsylvania railroad. One freight train struck another, a passenger train hit that, and a fourth train only escaped through the foresight of a passenger. Locked mail and express cars were overturned and burned. The clerks were saved.

To Strengthen the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Mr. Wilson of Missouri introduced in the house a bill to authorize the secretary of the navy to contract at a cost of $600,000 for one 15-knot destroyer or submarine vessel, with two guns of 18-inch diameter in the clear, 40 feet long and to carry 500 pounds of gun cotton.

Derlict In the Rotna.

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., Jan. 25.—The Owens Paper company's stock, machinery and buildings have been deeded to Andrew Mills of New York for $65,000.

CABINET SPECULATION.

Chairman Harrity Summoned to Lakewood.

BAYARD ASSISTS THE PRESIDENT.

Five Out of Eight of the Places In Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet Can Be Filled by Politics Governors With Reasonable Safety—The Others Are Uncertain.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—A Lakewood dispatch to the Press says: Mr. Cleveland's selection of Senator Carlisle for the treasury portfolio is a settled fact, and from a most reliable source comes the information that Mr. Cleveland telegraphed National Chairman William F. Harrity of Pennsylvania to come on for consultation, and that while here he will be tendered the postmaster-generalship portfolio. It is also conceded here that Daniel Lamont will be offered the navy portfolio, Mr. Bayard that of secretary of state and J. Randolph Tucker that of attorney general.

The Lesser Cabinet.

A number of politicians who claim to be in touch with Mr. Cleveland have arranged this slate:

Secretary of State—Thomas F. Bayard of Delaware.

Secretary of the Treasury—John G. Carlisle of Kentucky.

Secretary of War—Patrick A. Collins of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the Navy—Daniel S. Lamont of New York.

Secretary of the Interior—E. C. Wall of Wisconsin.

Postmaster General—William F. Harrity of Pennsylvania.

Attorney General—John Randolph Tucker of Virginia.

Secretary of Agriculture—Hugh C. Wallace of Washington.

Mr. Cleveland sent out word that he had formulated no plans about Mr. Justice Lamar's funeral. It is not at all likely that he will attend.

Mr. Cleveland and ex-Secretary Bayard, who is here assisting Mr. Cleveland in fixing up his cabinet, put in several hours of hard work, and then the two statesmen went sledging with Mrs. Cleveland and Mrs. Bayard. On their return Mr. Cleveland and Mr. Bayard at once went into the parlor and steady and persistent work upon the cabinet, denying themselves to all visitors.

A Very Gay Deceiver.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 25.—J. H. Caldwell, with several aliases, the most cunning prisoner the government has had for some time, was in the United States court charged with counterfeiting. Since his incarceration the government has learned that he has had a wife and seven children at Carrollton, Ky., another at Owensboro, Ky., and another at Albany, from whom he borrowed $1,700. He met a Grace Green, whom he pretended to marry, and took her with him to Dalton, Ga., where he deserted her. When next heard of he left "widow" at Cedia, O.; Maysville, Ky.; Columbus, O., and Ripley. He courted during the time a Miss Pope of Cincinnati, whom he met at some river town in Illinois. She was a rich widow.

Dr. Tanner Dutdone.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Alexander Jacques committed his 40th day of fasting. When he began the feat Jacques weighed 145½ pounds. When he finished he weighed 113½ pounds. He is an inch taller than before, measuring now 5 feet 9½ inches. During the 40 days he drank 25,840 drams of water, 14,190 drams of vichy and 9,920 drams of iron water, that is water in which rusty nails had been lying. He took her with him to Dalton, Ga., where, according to the certificate signed by Dr. Wiese, Jacques was watched all the time by a committee of medical students. There was very little public interest in the effort, and as financial enterprise it was a failure.

King Cotton Carnival.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Jan. 25.—The reign of King Cotton began with the inauguration of the carnival festivities. Fully 10,000 people are in the city. The programme consisted in a reception of the king, who came up the Savannah river, and an address by the mayor and the turning over of the keys of the city to his festal majesty, all of which was followed by a carnival of sports and other festivities. The weather is as gloriously resplendent as a spring day.

A Mysterious Death.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., Jan. 25.—Margaret Foster Crawford, a resident in physical culture, is believed to be the Margaret Foster who died in Bellevue hospital, New York, who died in 1886. No trace can be ascertained as to her present whereabouts. Miss Creswell was a daughter of Colonel John Creswell, an ex-speaker of the Pennsylvania house of representatives.

Asks to Have Trustee Hayden Removed.

NEW HAVEN, Jan. 25.—Attorney Burton of Middletown, representing the State Asylum for the Insane, has made formal application for the removal of H. Sydney Hayden of Hartford as trustee of a fund of $15,000 left by Mary I. Townsend, on the ground that the asylum has not realized on the bequest.

Brooklyn Moonshiners Raided.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 25.—The secret service detectives in Brooklyn raided an illicit whisky still and captured, after an exchange of about a dozen shots, one of the moonshiners and a finely equipped distillery. The capture is estimated to be worth $7,000.

Wound Around a Shaft.

YONKERS, N. Y., Jan. 25.—Charles Bain, a carpenter, while repairing machinery in Waring's hat factory caught his apron in the revolving shaft, and he was wound around the flying wheel.

Refuses a Pension to Mrs. Jeff Davis.

Catarrh, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts. For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not work and

Could Scarcely Walk.

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. Mr. Bryant passed, closed and I could not speak. The doctors said it was consumption of the throat and gave me up. I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, taking one of Mr. Joseph C. Smith's testimonials.

It Seem's poor

but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken one bottle I felt very much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling stout-hearted. I thank God and my wife for my restoration to perfect health." HARVEY REED, Lacyville, O.

MR. BLAINE'S CONDITION.

The Grim Destroyer Bravely Warded Off, but Still Approaching.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—No encouraging reports as to even temporary gaining of strength have been received from Mr. Blaine's physician or family, and the impression is everywhere becoming more emphatic that each day now finds him in some respects not so well as on the previous day. Everything about the house appears calm for the same as usual. The dim light in the sickroom, seen through the drawn curtains, conveys no sign of anything beyond the ordinary vigil.

The physician visited his patient at 9 o'clock and said there was no material change. Mr. Blaine slept more than he did a week ago, but after awake he was conscious. The doctor said he would not return during the night unless called for.

As far as known there has been no change in Mr. Blaine's condition since the time of the doctors' visit at 9 o'clock and at 5 o'clock a. m. all is quiet in the vicinity of the house.

Canadian Unrest.

TORONTO, Jan. 25.—J. D. Edgar, member of parliament for West Ontario and a leading reformer, has published an address to his constituents, in which he says that the material condition of Canada's agricultural population is most unsatisfactory, but blames the determined hostility of the Dominion government to unrestricted reciprocity for promoting the annexation movement. He reviews at length the visit of Canadian commissioners to Washington in regard to reciprocity last winter, and asserts that when the Canadian ministers refused to conclude a treaty of reciprocity on the terms offered them by the United States they flagrantly betrayed the true interests of their country in order to sustain the offensive system of Canadian protection. As to her national future, he thinks Canada will not have to wait many years to achieve her independence—not born of hatred to England nor baptized in fratricidal blood, but an independent power, having its autonomy guaranteed by England and the United States.

The Panama Trial.

PARIS, Jan. 25.—M. Franquenille has finished his examination of 18 persons connected with the Panama scandal. He has decided that Ferdinand de Lesseps, Charles de Lesseps, Henry Cottu, Marius Fontane, ex-Deputy Sans Leroy, ex-Deputy Gobiron, M. Arton and M. Blondin are culpable. His decision as to the other ten is not yet known. The interest in the Panama trial increases as the end comes near. The approaches to the court were crowded as soon as the gates were opened. Many prominent men were present, and also a number of ladies. Maitre Barboux resumed his argument in behalf of his clients. He indicated no new line of defense, but proceeded to justify the assurances which the directors of the Panama Canal company had given to the shareholders and the public in relation to the Panama enterprise.

Proposed Connecticut Legislation.

HARTFORD, Jan. 25.—Bills were introduced in the house making the keeping of poisonous for the sale of goods on horses and any form of gambling punishable; making eight hours a legal day's work for all labor employed by the state. A petition was presented consolidating the town and the city governments of Hartford. In the senate bills were introduced authorizing the governor to appoint a committee of five persons to revise the militia laws; ratifying the voluntary association of the board of the World's fair managers and appropriating $75,000 therefor. The bill was referred to the judiciary committee which compels the railroads to give members of the general assembly passes.

Two Kansas Senators.

TOPEKA, Jan. 25.—That Kansas will send a Democrat to the United States senate there is no question. The Populists will elect a senator, and the 78 Republicans and 5 Democrats will also elect a senator. The man elected by the Republicans and Democrats will have behind him the votes of a constitutional majority of members holding certificates of election from the state canvassing board. The senator so elected will undoubtedly be seated by the United States senate.

SENATOR JAMES SMITH.

The Man For Whom Governor Abbett Stepped Aside.

A CLOSE FRIEND OF MR. CLEVELAND.

New Jersey's Legislature Elects Him by a Vote of 55 Over Sewell, Republican, Who Received 36—A Newark Man and a Millionaire—End of a Long Struggle.

TRENTON, Jan. 25.—The monotony of the proceedings in the legislature was broken by the taking of the formal ballot for United States senator. Both houses met in joint session and ratified the result of yesterday's ballot in the separate branches. The assembly vote was: Smith, 39; Sewell, 21. Senate vote: Smith, 16; Sewell, 5.

James Smith, Jr., was born at Newark in 1831. He received a good school and college education, and after he was graduated his father gave him a place in his big New York dry goods house. The young man, however, did not like the business and established himself as a leather dealer in Newark. Ten years ago he entered politics as a Democrat and has held several municipal offices, besides being a prominent figure at conventions of his party.

Mr. Smith is wealthy and has a fine mansion in Newark. The new senator is rather stout in build, and his face is clean shaven.

What Mr. Whitney Says of Him.

He is a great friend of William C. Whitney, and the latter recently said regarding the legislature's choice:

"I am much pleased with the selection of Mr. Smith as the next United States senator from New Jersey. He is a man of great ability. In addition he is fair minded—in fact I have rarely seen a man who was more open minded and unprejudiced. Such qualities do not always accompany force and strength. He has, however, all of these traits. He is forceful and ingenious, a leader in fact, but at the same time he is fair and deliberate, and can see both sides of a question. He can make a good speech, too, and with all these qualities I know he will not only make a good senator, but a senator of whom New Jersey will be proud. I predict a his success. He was one of the most earnest and strongest friends Mr. Cleveland had at Chicago, and I found him a most important ally.

The Homestead Trial.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 25.—The jury as finally made up is composed of seven farmers, two merchants and five mechanics. The prosecution and the defense having agreed to admit the evidence of the doctors, patients and experts given in Dempsey's case, the reading of this testimony was then begun. It will probably occupy the greater part of today's session. Patrick Gallagher and J. M. Davidson, the two other defendants, who confessed to administering the poison at the instigation of Dempsey, will be called up immediately at the conclusion of the Beatty trial. It is expected that they will plead guilty and throw themselves on the mercy of the court.

The New Jersey Historical Society.

TRENTON, Jan. 25.—The New Jersey Historical society elected officers as follows: President, Judge John Clement of Camden; vice presidents, Dr. Samuel H. Pennington of Newark, Hon. W. S. Stryker of Trenton, Dr. G. B. Mott of Flemington; recording secretary, William R. Weeks of Newark; corresponding secretary, William Nelson of Paterson; treasurer and librarian, Judge J. CHILDREN'S COLUMN.

Useful Shoes.

How many of grandma's children would like to wear wooden shoes, as the Hollanders do? I am sure your little feet would ache and feel very awkward and look very clumsy in such coverings, and yet the little Holland children clatter around as easily in these wooden shoes as you walk.

doors, in your dainty boots and slippers. In Holland the vessels seen on the river are shaped quite like one of these shoes, and the children in the illustration given here have taken one for a model, and trimmed a shoe with sails and are launching it for an imaginary voyage.

Sometimes when the children sweat play and get thirsty they stop at a stream, take off one of their shoes, fill it with water, and drink as eagerly as though it were from a silver goblet. So you see the wooden shoe is a very useful article. During the frost it is natural that these shoes should get dusty or muddy from tramping around, but Saturday is the great cleaning day, and the children are expected to scour their shoes till they are as white as snow and fit to wear to church on Sunday. When the Sabbath morning comes they are put on and worn as far as the church door, but there they are left until the long sermon is over and their owners are ready to return home. Then if any little urchin has been noticed as being restless or mischievous they (the shoes) are put to a very good practical use—the mother applies one as a rod of correction and discipline.—Christian at Work.

Why Willie Was Whipped.

He was a hardworking and zealous board school teacher, and had just told the class that wool comes off the sheep and is made into blankets, clothing, etc., to keep us warm in cold weather, and he proceeded to question little Willie, who had been rather inattentive during the lesson.

"Now, Willie," said the teacher, "where does wool come from?"

"Off the sheep's back, teacher," replied Willie.

"And what then?" inquired the teacher Willie could not answer.

"What are these made from?" asked the teacher, touching Willie's trousers with the cane.

"Uncle John's old 'uns," said Willie and the teacher and the cane adjourned to the library.—London Tit-Bits.

visit from her young teagnoor Saipa, with his nurse. Ralph misbehaved and the nurse admonished him after the manner of her kind, "The dog will bite you," she said, and Ralph began to cry. Elsie looked on, and then said: "She knows there was no dog in the house, but she was a little afraid to combat this strange nurse's assertion. But she saw a way out of her dilemma. "Don't cry, Ralfie," she said reassuringly; "wait till the doddie comes," which was the wisdom of Solomon and Shakespeare combined, for the bugaboo of a three-year-old. What an amount of weeping would be banished from the world if everybody would "wait till the doddie comes" before he began his tears.—New York Times.

Taking His Father's Place.

General Banks relates that when early in the war he was ordered to Frederick he had to leave his family at Baltimore. They went with him to his train, and as he bade his wife a tender goodby he said to his little son, then only five years old, "You must take good care of your mother while I am away." Acting immediately on his instructions, when the car conveying them stopped for him to alight, the little five year-old quickly hopped off and gallantly extended a hand to his mother to help her off just as he had seen his father do.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When to Eat His Supper.

"Fred, you didn't sleep a wink last night, and you kept me awake, too," said little Bess in a complaining tone. "You should never go to bed after supper."

"But when am I to eat my supper?" Master Fred wanted to know.

A puzzled look overspread her face for a second, and then she said in the tone of one having solved a problem:

"The next day. I s'pose."—Youth's Companion.

Physical Exercise.

Swinging in the aisle is an excellent exercise for strengthening the muscles of the arms and back. Pupils stand in the middle of the aisle, between the rows of desks. Place one hand on a desk on each side of you, but do not step back. Raise the si-boys, throwing the weight on the hands. Raise the feet from the floor, kick them together and bend the legs back from the knees. By counts swing forward and back in the aisle. Bring the feet to the floor and the body to an erect position with hands at side.—R. Anna Morris.

The Tallest Talker Man.

A young woman, sweet and fair, who did not leave her name, but whose face gave unmistakable evidence of suffering, handed this one in yesterday:

Hear the talker and his talk—
Constant talk!
What a world of merriment his meanings make!
Hear it dropping, dropping, dropping
On the silent, air of evil
With no evidence of stopping.
Though the girl is overtopping
With a yearning for him to leave.
Hear it keeping time, time, time,
In a sort of dismal rhyme,
To the saddened anthem that forever, ever stalk
Through his talk, talk, talk,
Talk, talk, talk—
Through this limitless variety of talk.

A Stock Sheep.

"And this is the founder of our house, He fought under William the Conqueror."

"I suppose you are very proud of him?"

"Well, hardly. You see he is the only one of our ancestors since the foundation without ancestors."—Life.

Too Wise.

It is not profitable for a merchant to be too wise; at any rate he should not try to be wisty on every occasion. Not long ago, in a country town where there are two groceries in the place, a very green, overbreathed, timid looking young countryman came into one of them one afternoon at a time when half a dozen villagers were grouped around the stove. The storekeeper was waiting upon some one and paid no attention to the newcomer.

Presently the young man said in a faltering, half frightened voice:

"Do—you—keep—sweet p'taters?"

"No!" said the storekeeper; "we don't keep 'em. We sell 'em just as fast as we can."

Then he winked at the company around the stove, who snickered appreciatively. The green youth turned back. "Oh!" and went up to the stove and spread out the palms of his hands. The storekeeper went on waiting on his other customers and said up about fifteen minutes in doing so.

Then he stepped toward the green young man, who was still warming his hands at the stove, and said brusquely:

"Did you say you wanted to buy some sweet potatoes?"

The young man turned slowly about and answered, "I—didn't—say—I—wanted—to buy—them; I—just—thought—I'd—keep—'em."

He warmed his hands a few minutes longer. Then he walked slowly out of the store, remarking as he went:

"I—guess—I'll—go—down the street—an—buy me—some—sweet p'taters!"

The laugh around the stove was not at the expense of the green horn this time.—Youth's Companion.

Not According to Expectations.

"You can't always judge men by appearances," observed the stout man.

"No, indeed," came a chorus of assents from the circle.

"And you can't always tell by a man's looks and makeup whether he's got fighting stuff in him or not."

"That's so," chipped in several.

"Don't—all how a man'll turn out does cause sometimes when you haven't stood him up that way at all."

"Yes, indeed," was the unanimous response.

"Yes, I witnessed a scene today that impressed that on my mind. There was a big, bullying, blood fellow cuffing a small boy on the Bowery, when a dudish looking chap stepped up and told him he was a coward and threatened to thrash him if he didn't stop."

"And did he stop?" asked the thin man.

"No, he didn't."

"Then the dudish chap pitched in and licked him of course," observed the well dressed man.

"He pitched in, but he didn't lick him; not by a darned sight. The big, blood fellow licked the dudish chap and knocked the stuffing out of him. And that just illustrates the point I want to make. When a slender, dudish chap gets into a scrap with a big, burly, bullying fellow, it isn't always safe to gamble that the dudish one will win. Once in awhile it turns out that the bullying fellow's got the fighting stuff in him, if he don't look that way. Don't it?"

There was no response. Every one in the circle, except the narrator, looked as though he were conscious of having been sold.—New York Herald.

Wanted to Reciprocate.

A few days ago a negro's wagon broke down near Carrollton. A white man passing offered assistance, which was gladly accepted, and when the wagon was again on its wheels the negro expressed his gratitude thus: "Boss, I hope your wagon will break down some day and I can return your kindness."—Atlanta Constitution.

IN A SAFE PLACE.

A Domestic Episode from Which a Lesson Was Drawn.

"Harry," called Mrs. Society Lights to her husband as they were closing the house for the night, "put the silver where the burglars can't find it. You know they have been in the neighborhood."

"All right," said Mr. Society Lights. "I guess I know just where to hide it," and he rummaged and crashed around looking for a good place.

"I've got my diamonds safe enough," announced his wife when he came up stairs. "You'd never guess where I've hid 'em, and I'm not going to tell you either."

"Oh! Then I'll tell you where the silver is; so we'll be even."

And the two conspirators smiled pleasantly as each other over their secrets.

The next morning Mrs. Society Lights ordered her maid to build a fire in the dining room fireplace, where the wood was laid ready to be kindled.

When Mr. Society Lights entered the dining room and saw the fire he said cheerfully to his wife:

"Found it, didn't you?"

"Found what?" asked his wife in surprise.

"Why, the silver of course."

"But I didn't find it, though we've looked every place that we haven't a spoon or fork for breakfast."

"Jumping Jerusalem! Who made the fire? Here's the girl! I hid the silver under the kindling, and—and"——

"Sit down," said his wife, "and don't get excited. It was pretty well smoked up and will have to go to the jeweler's for repairs, but if the handles of the forks had not stuck out it would have been a melted mass by this time."

Mr. Society Lights grew calm, and at breakfast they talked of nothing else but the fortunate escape the silver had. At last Mrs. S. L. said:

"You should have been more discreet. Now nothing of that kind could have happened to me. I am very careful where I hide my diamonds."

"Does your diamonds this morning?" asked Mr. S. L.

"No, but they're all right Hannah, go up to the rag bag in my closet and take out my diamonds and lock them up."

In a few moments screams were heard from Hannah.

"Diamonds burned up!" quoted Mr. S. L. in a sarcastic voice.

"Please, ma'am, the rag bag's gone! It was sold by the girl, and Mary has got 25¢ of the rags, as the man's just this blessed minute gone off with them!"

Hattie—and beautiful Mrs. Society Lights was also Hattie—had been searching after a rag gatherer who was blowing his horn, unconscious of pursuit.

"Stop!" shrieked Mr. S. L., and clutching the cart he grasped the precious bag, made sure the diamonds were still in it, and then carried them off, to the astonishment and regret of their late purchaser.

"You need a guardian," said the perspiring Mr. Society Lights when he restore the diamonds to his wife.

"So do you; a keeper you would!"——

Hotel Notice.

For a Cold in the Head.

Nothing but travel, and extensive travel at that, will give a person a full idea of the queer ways that there are in the world. An American who was not long since journeying through the mainland countries of England relates that in a small country town he once entered an inn rather pretentious for the place and called for tarbot—a favorite fish in those parts.

The American had had a few days of dyspepsia, and his appearance and manner perhaps showed that he had become a little wheezy in consequence of the climate. He pronounced his wife's name slightly, and the innkeeper misheard it for frequent recourse to his pocket handkerchief.

When the turbot was brought, the guest fancied, even before it reached his plate, that it was no longer fresh, and an attempt to eat it confirmed that impression. He called the proprietor, who at once sent the waiter for a fresh turbot and removed the objectionable fish.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the inn keeper, "but we got the idea, sir, as you came in, that you had had a bad cold in yer head, sir."

"And suppose I had? What would that have to do with my being served with spoiled fish?" demanded the American, somewhat indignantly.

"Heverything, sir. We has this rule in the 'ouse: fish as is a leetle doubtful, like that 'ere, sir—that 'ere fish has lost the nerve of youth, as I may say—them we serves to parties as appears to 'ave colds in their 'eads, sir, and we finds as bein as the parties can't smell nothink, they likes the fish just as well, sir, and bothers they prefers 'em!"—Youth's Companion.

Blows and Curses.

Dawn was about to break, cold and gray. A belated pedestrian was the first in all probability to hear the sound of shouting blows accompanied from the interior of the brownstone mansion on the corner.

He paused and listened.

Presently there alighted with the horrifying noise oaths of a high degree of blasphemousness and seething with passion.

The oaths and the blows, it was apparent, had not ceased for a single moment.

Obviously something dreadful was being done.

Several belated pedestrians had now assembled. They looked at each other with blanched faces.

"Murder!" they gasped.

The blows fell like rain. The oaths flowed no less copiously.

They could remain transfixed with horror no longer. They burst open the door.

"Whatsoever would?"——

The woman who turned upon them like a wild beast held a jagged club in her hand, and her eyes had a baleful glare in them.

Presently they overpowered and disarmed her.

"What do you mean?"

Her discourse was distinguished by a singular ferocity.

Several belated pedestrians held her while others went for a policeman.

After a time the latter returned. Softly they whispered in the ears of the former. Then they gently relaxed the woman's hold. After which they went again feebly pounding the stuck for breakfast.—Detroit Tribune.

Fashions in Corpses.

A fussy little woman went to an orphan asylum to adopt an orphan. She picked out a little girl with red hair, and after giving a receipt for her left.

She returned next day and said to the superintendent: "My husband thinks this orphan's hair is awful. Haven't you got any with black hair and blue eyes?"

The superintendent hunted through the institution and found nothing of the color wanted. It is a very rare combination anyway, I have heard. Then the woman got mad.

"Why don't you keep a proper assortment of orphans?" she demanded. "What's the use of running a place in this one horse way. Over in the Brooklyn home they've got orphans of every kind. You'll really oblige me if you act like that. Don't you find your customers are going elsewhere? What do you think you'll have any orphans with black hair and blue eyes?"

"The colors aren't fashionable," said the superintendent, "but I shall be pleased to communicate with you and fill your order when I have the right kind."

"Well, see that you do," answered the woman, a little mollified. "These institutions aren't half what they used to be. Don't keep me waiting longer than a week."

And she left the red haired one and went home. Every time the door bell rings she thinks it's an expressman bringing her orphan order with black hair and blue eyes.—New York Herald.

The Price of a Chair.

The prisoner was before the court for assaulting his wife.

"You are a fine specimen, aren't you?" said the judge contemptuously. "What do you mean by breaking a chair over your wife's head?"

"It was a mistake, your honor," pleaded the prisoner.

"Do you mean to tell me," said the right honorable magnate judge, "that you didn't intend to hit your wife with that chair?"

"No, your honor, I don't," responded the prisoner, "but I did not intend to break the chair."

"Six months," remarked his honor.—Detroit Free Press.

MEMBERS AND GUESTS HAVE A GOOD TIME.

With Feasting, Bowling and Pool-Playing the Club Rooms Present an Animated Scene—The Plainfielders Excel as Hosts Rather than as Bowlers.

The Y. M. C. L. A. of Elizabeth and the C. Y. M. L. of this city bowled their third game in the Journal trophy series last evening at the Lyceum Hall on Sixth street. The occasion was made one of general interest, and was a fraternal gathering as well as a contest for bowling supremacy. As entertainers the young men of this city excelled. It was clearly evident that they were also very considerate, for they certainly could not be guilty of giving their visitors unbounded entertainment and then defeating them, so the Y. M. C. L. A. was all owed to win.

A great many prominent business men and persons known in political circles of Elizabeth accompanied the Y. M. C. L. A. to this city. Among them were: Freeholder John Sauer, Aldermen Engle and Dobner, President of the Board of Education Nugent, Secretary of the Board of Education Wm. H. Ryan, Factory Inspector McCloud, Dr. W. J. Whelan, Cashier McGuire of the State National Bank, Capt. D. P. Collins and others.

Several Plainfield bowlers were present including C. H. Lyman, W. G. Brett, J. L. Stevens, J. D. Davis, H. A. Quonett, A. Sutcliffe, and B. T. Barnes. A large number of ladies were also present.

The game opened with the Elizabeth team in the lead. There was nothing particularly exciting throughout the game. Our young men were "distanced by luck." But the "reserves" from Elizabeth were there in full force and they gave their war cry with as much zest as if the game was close. The Lyceums made a great many strikes knows as "the Pat Gleason strikes"—all down but one.

While the bowling was at its height an interesting game of pool was being played in the pool room of the building. The Lyceums against the St. James of Newark. The pool team regained its part the laurels lost by the bowlers. White and McInery represented this city. They played a strong game from the beginning and won easily by a score of 100 to 60. The game was witnessed by a large number of persons, several of whom were from Newark.

After the games all present were invited to the hall where a bountiful supper had been prepared. Over eighty persons partook. They were then treated to music and dancing. Mirth and jollity reigned supreme until train time—11.28.

The committee in charge was Messrs. T. Carty, M. J. Winn and John Trainor.

The following is the bowling score:

Y. M. C. L. A.		C. Y. M. L.

A Serious Wreck Averted.

What might have been a serious railroad accident was fortunately averted at Bound Brook Tuesday afternoon. The section of frost spread the rails on the Central Railroad near the station, and a passenger train running at reduced speed left the track. The engineer bravely stuck to his post, and by coolness and good fortune prevented a bad wreck. The road bed is badly damaged, being torn up for along distance by the heavy passenger cars, not a single inmate of which was hurt in any way, although all were shaken up.

Mr. J. B. Flett and family of Sandford avenue moved to-day to West Front street.

Refreshments were served and the party returned home early this morning.

RAILROAD TAXES.

Collected by the State and Apportioned to Each County.

It is not generally knowd that the State acts in the capacity of assessor and collector of taxes for the localities. Under the tax act of 1884 the State Board of Assessors assess all railroad property, and while the main stem is taxed for State purposes, the balance of the property is taxed for the benefit of the localities. On this class of property a tax of one per cent. is imposed, which is collected by the State and sent to the localities. The report of the State Comptroller shows that during the fiscal year of 1892 the amount of $658,188.27 was collected from the railroads and distributed among the taxing districts of the State.

The amounts received by the various counties were as follows:

Atlantic	$1,667.28

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Comments by a Plainfielder respecting Joseph Jefferson.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS.—The advent of Mr. Joseph Jefferson is an event in the dramatic history of Plainfield which deserves public recognition. No actor has appeared upon the boards here more welcome in the highest intellects of his auditors, nor who could draw from them more recognition of his admirable art. Belonging to the school of studious players with housed motives, from which school have departed Warren, Gilbert, Fisher and Harry Edwards (not to mention the generation prior to them), he brings to us the mellow charm of an art ripened in the sun of keen intelligence and displayed with a personal pleasure in his art which he exhibits.

As Bob Acres he represented, undoubtedly, Sheridan's ideal "Fighting Bob," and played it with an unction and grace of simplicity which would have pleased the inimitable genius, Mr. Quick, with its originality and wholesomeness of feeling. Mr. Jefferson, long associated with the history of the American drama, has been first and foremost a comedian, winning laughter by the subtleties of his wit; and, particularly in the face of the present sterility of high class players, he represents with Mr. Edwin Booth the highest embodiment of intelligence on the American stage.—Mr. Jefferson in the line of comedy, Mr. Booth in the tragic line.

Loss upon loss has taken from the foremost ranks of literature and poetry and the ministry and the drama, men whom to lose seemed a blight on the superiority of individuality in culture; yet, as there is Holmes, so there is Jefferson, men who have illuminated our lives with their virtue and genius, and who to-day are still teachers of old-time staunch stability in art-purpose and art-accomplishment, which are so rapidly becoming mere traditions. Their genius still exists and long will exist in the same way that traditions of Booth and Barton and Gilbert and Warren still linger, and even as the genius of Babbage and Garrick and Kemble and Kean still present ideals and influences to us of a century or more later.

As Rip Van Winkle, Mr. Jefferson is a child of Irving's fancy. Irving could not have imagined a more winsome Rip, a more complete original, nor more human. Mr. Jefferson first played the part many years before he used the present text and form which had a first representation in Jersey City, at the Academy Theatre in London. Dion Boucicault rewrote the text which had been made by Jefferson himself on the basis of Charles Burke's play so that he alone should speak during the scene with the ghosts of Hendrick Hudson and his mariners. Boucicault introduced the colloquy of the children and for the last act paraphrased the recognition of King Lear by Cordelia. In that text, Mr. Jefferson has played since, nearly thirty years. The first Rip Van Winkle was Thomas Flynn, a friend of the elder Booth, and the first representation of Rip was in Albany on May 24th, 1859.

In such a letter as this it seems quite necessary to add that Mr. Jefferson has been a boy actor some sixty years, he having born on February 20th, 1829. His first appearance was in Washington, D. C., when a child, as an imitator of the original Jim Crow, Thomas D. Rice, who emptied Jefferson out of a bag on the stage. The child, being dressed as a "nigger dancer," at once performed the antics of the celebrated Jim Crow and disappeared amid applause.

Mr. Joseph Jefferson.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Fruit in the Northwest.

There is an impression among eastern people that fruit will not grow in some of the states of the northwest, the Dakotas, for instance. But we find from a report of the South Dakota Horticultural society that in this state at least fruit of many varieties and excellent quality is produced in abundance. Among them are grapes, apples, plums and berries of all kinds. It is true a few precautions are necessary, as one Dakota fruit grower judiciously observes—the same as are taken by eastern fruit growers. One of these is that in most parts of South Dakota there seems to be a doubled and twisted crop of insect pests. These must be sprayed for all there is in it with paris green, london purple and other rainbow preventives. At the approach of winter grapes must be laid gently down upon the soil and covered in a warm bed with coarse hay if the variety is old and tough; with earth and "litter" if it is young and tender. But if this is done there will be excellent fruit. The Concord grape is reported to thrive best.

The whole country may point with pride to the achievement of these Dakota people in tree planting and fruit production. One man of the convention reported his mother as saying that thirty years ago there was not on two quarter sections a switch large enough to whip a child with. So the Dakota youngsters missed one unpleasant experience at least.

But those brave pioneers went from eastern homes where fresh, ripe fruit and berries were plentiful; where great, beautiful trees shaded the lawn in summer and evergreens on the northwest of the house broke the force of the chill blasts in winter. They resolved they would have both fruit and forest in their new home. The struggles of the pioneers on these treeless plains to secure orchards and shade trees are among the most interesting portions of the history of the brave young northwestern states. Now they have blue grass lawns, roses, honeysuckles, pine, cedar and fir trees, and beautiful flowering Japanese catalpa trees. The pioneer strawberry culturists reports that for ten years he has not had a single failure with his favorite fruit. The worst enemy some of the fruit pioneers encountered in their efforts was the silvery tongued but unreliable nursery agent. Dozens of varieties of fruits had to be tried before one was found that would thrive in that climate.

The Jewish Colony in New Jersey.

Early in the year 1891 the American agents of Baron Hirsch bought 5,100 acres of wild pine lands in southern New Jersey. This was in anticipation of the arrival of a large number of Russian Jewish exiles. They came, and the Israel colony was founded in April, 1891. Most of the men had been tradesmen in Russia, but it was partly to keep them from overcrowding still more the field of peddling and small merchandising among their race in America that the attempt was made to put them to farming. The 5,100 acres were divided into 30-acre plots, which represented the farm that was to be allotted to each family. It was a very small farm, according to American ideas; still the result shows that the founders of the colony calculated correctly. The families were settled upon the plots with the privilege of buying them, being allowed twelve years to pay for them.

The result thus far has been gratifying in all respects. The first work done by the colonists was to chop down the pine trees and clear the ground for the next year to cultivate the soil. Professor H. L. Sabsovitch, a learned Russian Jew, who came to America some years ago, gave up his place as professor of chemistry at the Colorado state agricultural experiment station to take charge of the farming operations of the exiles in New Jersey. Cloak and trousers factories have been established besides the farming industry, and the Russian Jewish colony promises to add substantially to the wealth of southern Jersey. There are now about 1,000 people in the colony. Woodbine is their postoffice and railroad station. Many of them have taken out preliminary naturalization papers.

The medical profession really begins to believe that cancer can be cured. The cure is effected through knowledge of microbes. There is a microbe for each disease, and the cancer germ has been already discovered. The first step toward finding the cure was the discovery that if patients affected with cancer were suddenly taken with certain other diseases—as for instance, erysipelas—the cancer ceased its ravages during the progress of the other ailment. This was known a century ago. But not till recently was the cause discerned through the germ theory. It was found out that the bacteria of certain diseases were hostile to one another and waged war upon one another in the human blood when they met. If, then, the cancer patient is inoculated with the erysipelas virus, the microbes of the two diseases attack one another, and the erysipelas germ destroys the cancer germs. It is claimed that certain cures of the dread cancer have been effected in this way in New York and in Berlin, Paris and Vienna.

Even North Carolina got down to 80 during the cold snap.

NEWS OF WASHINGTON.

The President and Cabinet Have Their Pictures Taken.

McCOMAS CONFIRMED AS A JUDGE.

An Effort to Crush Trusts and Cut the Pension List—Army Expenses Reduced—A Day Given Up to Filibustering—Affairs of Congress Considered.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Filibustering against the bankruptcy bill was inaugurated by Mr. Kilgore (Dem., Tex.). In the first place he insisted on the reading of the journal in full. Then he objected to the approval of that document, and an hour was consumed before it was finally agreed to in reference to a portion of the records of the house which is accepted by the courts as binding evidence of the proceedings of congress. Again he brought his dilatory tactics into effect. He was seconded in his endeavor to defeat the bankruptcy bill by Mr. Pierce (Tenn.), who supplemented his every filibustering motion with another which was calculated to prevent action, and the filibustering continued. "Another wasted day" was the comment of the Republicans, and their comments were echoed by a majority of the Democrats. But the few Democrats opposed to the bankruptcy measure held firm, and the house adjourned without action, thus exhausting the two days assigned to the judiciary committee and the bankruptcy bill.

Neither the antioption bill nor the Cherokee outlet bill—which have the alternate right of way in the house—found any show of consideration. The hour of the session was taken up in routine matters, none of them entitled to be regarded as of much public interest. The only exceptions were the introduction of a bill for the admission of Utah as a state and an amendment reported from the committee on naval affairs and referred to the committee on appropriations looking to a further increase of the navy by 1 battleship, 2 armored coast defense vessels, 10 gunboats and 8 torpedo boats.

McComas' Nomination Confirmed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—For the first time this session there was a protracted struggle in the executive session of the senate over a presidential nomination—that of Louis McComas, ex-secretary of the national Republican committee, to be associate justice of the District of Columbia supreme court. Within a few days after the reception of the nomination the opposition to the confirmation began to develop in the shape of two vague charges touching the business integrity of the nominee. These charges were not stated each of these, and declared in its report to the senate that, in its judgment, there was nothing that in any way tended to show that Mr. McComas was not fitted for the place to which the president proposed to appoint him.

The senate went into executive session with a determination on the part of the Republican senators to confirm the nomination before adjournment. More than four hours were consumed in debate. The opposition to the nominee in the senate was based almost entirely upon the ground that Mr. McComas was not a resident of the district. The Republicans replied to the Democrats on this point by referring to the precedents set by Mr. Cleveland in the matter of judicial and territorial appointments, and asserted that Mr. Cleveland might feel disposed to again ignore platform declarations in that respect and select the best fitted man for federal appointments regardless of residence. When it came to a vote there was no attempt to filibuster and the result was decisive, the vote standing 39 for confirmation to 19 for the opposition.

Cutting Into Pensions.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Democratic members of the house subcommittee on appropriations, in framing the annual pension appropriation bill for admission to the full committee, have made a vigorous onslaught on the dependent and disability pension act passed by the Republican congress in 1890. They have adopted a number of amendments changing that law. The following are the principal changes made: That no widow shall receive a pension under the act of 1890 unless married to the soldier prior to 1870; that no person shall receive a pension under the act of 1890 unless disabled in the service from manual labor and in receipt of an income of less than $600 a year, and that no nonresident of the United States shall receive a pension unless he was actually disabled in the service.

Another amendment provides for the appointment of a commission to consider necessary modifications in the pension laws and to report at the next congress. Most of these amendments were offered by Mr. O'Neil (Mass.), who stated that they were framed so as not to exclude persons actually dependent, but would require all persons to prove that they were in fact dependent upon the pension as contemplated in the title of the act of 1890. They were adopted by a vote of 8 to 2, the Democratic members—Messrs. Mutchler, O'Neil and Livingston—voting yea and Messrs. Grosvenor and Bingham nay. The fight against the amendments will be carried by the Republican members into the full committee on appropriations, which has yet to act on the bill. It is said to be likely that some of the Democratic members of the full committee will unite against their associates on the subcommittee. If the amendments get out of the committee, a lively fight in the house is certain, as their effect would be to purge known a century ago. But not till recently was the cause discerned through the germ theory. It was found out that the bacteria of certain diseases were hostile to one another and waged war upon one another in the human blood when they met. If, then, the cancer patient is inoculated with the erysipelas virus, the microbes of the two diseases attack one another, and the erysipelas germ destroys the cancer germs. It is claimed that certain cures of the dread cancer have been effected in this way in New York and in Berlin, Paris and Vienna.

To Crush Trusts.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Mr. Scott (Ills.) offered in the house a bill amending the antitrust act so as to require the attorney general, upon oath of any 10 reputable citizens that a trust or combination exists, to inquire into the matter and prosecute all persons who participate in such combination. In case a trust is found to exist in respect to any article upon which duty is now levied, the tariff is to be removed. Any property owned under such contract or trust, in the course of transportation, is made liable to seizure and forfeiture to the United States. Any person whose business or property is injured by a trust is authorized to sue therefor in the United States district court and receive threefold the damages sustained.

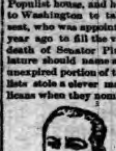
MARTIN FROM KANSAS.

Populists Nominate a Democrat For Senator and Elect Him.

STOLE A MARCH ON REPUBLICANS.

Enough Democrats Left the Republican Fusion to Break Their Majority, and Having Sat In Joint Session With Populists Cannot Now Get Back.

TOPEKA, Jan. 26.—Judge John Martin of Topeka became Senator Martin of Kansas. The latter title was bestowed upon him by the joint convention of the senate and the Populist house, and he will proceed at once to Washington to take Senator Perkins' seat, who was appointed by the governor a year ago to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Plumb until the legislature should name a senator to serve the unexpired portion of the term. The Populists stole a clever march on the Republicans when they nominated Judge Martin in caucus. They figured that, Mr. Martin being a Democrat, there would go into their joint convention not only enough Democrats to elect him without counting the Populist members who took the seats of unseated Republicans, but also enough to break the Republican quorum. Their figuring was correct, for when the roll was called in their convention there were fourteen absentees. Of course these three cannot now go into the Republican joint convention, and without them the Republicans can muster 31 members—two short of a quorum.



JUDGE JOHN MARTIN.

The Republicans will therefore be unable to elect a senator, and John Martin will probably go to the senate. His election is illegal, inasmuch as it was participated in by a house whose organization they allege to be unconstitutional. That question, however, will have to be settled by the United states senate when Mr. Martin appears with his credentials.

Judge Martin has been a leading Democrat of Kansas ever since there were any Democrats in the state. He has made the race for congress in his district several times, and once, four years ago, undertook the thankless task of running for governor on the straight Democratic ticket in the face of a Republican majority of 80,000. When the Farmers' Alliance developed into the Populist party Judge Martin urged the Democrats to unite with them, not so much to secure the victory of Populist principles and Populist men as to beat the Republicans. His counsel prevailed, and the result as the election is well known. He has received his reward.

What Republicans Say.

The election of Martin leaves the situation as complicated as before. Though he is declared elected, it was done by the vote of a house the constitutionality of which is in dispute. The Republicans and stalwart Democrats claim that the election is a farce by reason that the Populist house is an illegal body and none of its acts can be legal.

The Republicans find themselves in a predicament for the reason that they are unable to muster a quorum to vote on the contested election case. They will be able to do so until their rights in the house have been passed upon by the courts. If the courts decide that the Republicans have the constitutional right to act as they do they will elect another senator, who will undoubtedly be a straight out Democrat, and the case contest for recognition will be transferred to Washington.

Mrs. Lease's Opinion.

TOPEKA, Jan. 26.—Mrs. Lease and Mrs. Diggs declare emphatically that the election of Martin means nothing less than the death of the People's party in this state and national. Mrs. Lease said: "This is a deathblow to the People's party, state and national. It will drive 40,000 Populists in the south back into the Democratic party, and in Kansas thousands will return to the Republican party. John Martin's election killed our party, and that is all there is to it."

HORACE N. CONGAR.

A Prominent Citizen of New Jersey Passes Away at Newark.

NEWARK, Jan. 26.—Horace N. Congar died at his residence in this city. His death had been expected for months as he was sick with complete paralysis. He was born in this city on July 25, 1817, and connected the Newark Mercury, which he and Daniel Porter purchased in 1851 for 70 cents, with the interests of the Silver Gray Whig party. The first Republican meeting ever held in this state took place in Mr. Congar's dining room. Only four persons were present, and four years from that time Lincoln carried the state.

Mr. Congar held many positions of trust, being appointed consul to Hong Kong by President Lincoln shortly after the latter's election, and acted as assistant secretary of state under President Andrew Johnson, which position he held until March, 1869, when he was appointed secretary of state of New Jersey by Governor Marcus L. Ward.

On June 15, 1874, President Grant appointed Mr. Congar consul to Prague, the capital of Bohemia, and in the fall of 1876 Mr. Congar returned to this city and again connected himself with the Mutual Benefit as adjuster. His last political work was done in 1878, when Pattison for governor. His last political work was done in 1878, when Pattison for governor. His last political position of note was that of a member of the commission to prepare and suggest amendments to the New Jersey constitution, to which office he was appointed by Governor Ludlow on March 25, 1881.

Edison People Have No Fear.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—S. B. Eaton, one of the lawyers of the Edison Electric Light company, was seen in regard to the statement that Henry Ford and not Thomas A. Edison was the first inventor of the incandescent electric lamp. He said: "This invention by Henry Goebel also claims to anticipate Mr. Edison were brought to our attention in May, 1882. The representative of Goebel was one of the most prominent lawyers in the United States, himself a man of wealth and able to command among his friends and clients any amount of money to back up a good invention. He wanted the Edison company to buy what Goebel had. I laid the matter before the board of directors of the Edison company, with the result that we decided not to buy at any price."

Panama Eloquently Defended.

PARIS, Jan. 26.—Further prosecution of the Panama investigation now depends upon M. Franquerville, investigating magistrate. In resuming his argument in behalf of the accused Panama directors, Maitre Barboux endeavored to prove that they could not be accused of swindling in the issue of the lottery bonds, as they had simply adopted the only position openly adopted by the chamber of deputies. M. Barboux contended that both Ferdinand de Lesseps and Charles de Lesseps were justified in using the funds to maintain public confidence in the Panama canal schemes in the hope of averting menacing dangers. If Ferdinand de Lesseps erred, it was through too sanguine optimism. "But," exclaimed M. Barboux, "the world belongs to optimists."

Progress of the Beatty Case.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 26.—Nothing of a sensational nature was developed in the trial of Robert Beatty for complicity in the Homestead poisonings. The morning session was taken up with the reading of the testimony in the Dempsey case. In the afternoon a number of witnesses were examined, but the evidence did not differ materially from that given in the previous trial. Patrick Gallagher was on the stand for two hours and repeated the story of the poisoning plot. He was still giving his testimony when the court adjourned. It is thought the commonwealth will finish by noon today.

A Fireman's Brave Act.

JERSEY CITY, Jan. 26.—A fire broke out in a tenement house, cutting off the escape of three families. Those on the second and third floors were rescued by the firemen. They could not reach the fourth floor, however, on which lived Matthew Bligh, his wife and three children. The wife ran to the roof, taking two of the children with her. Bligh dropped the third child from the window, and it would have been killed but that Herman Schalk leaned from the window and caught her as she fell.

An official inquiry revealed that the note issue was 25,000,000 lire in excess of the amount declared.

Great Suffering

After the Grip

Tremendous Roaring in the Head — Pain in the Stomach.

"To C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Two years ago I had a severe attack of the Grip, which left me in a terribly weak and debilitated condition. Last winter I had another severe attack of the Grip, which left me completely worn out. My cough was all gone, I had no appetite, was all run down, and could not sleep. I had a roaring noise in my head, like a waterfall. I also had severe pains in my stomach. I was completely prostrated.

Severe Stabbing Pains

in my stomach. I took medicines without benefit, until finally heard so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla that I concluded to try it, and can say it is very gratifying. All the disagreeable symptoms are gone, I am free from pains and sleep well. Yours truly,

LAMONT VISITS LAKEWOOD.

The President and Hayard and the Ex-Secretary Talk It Over.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 26.—The most prominent arrival at the Cleveland cottage was Colonel Daniel Lamont, the former private secretary to Mr. Cleveland. Mr. Lamont came here from New York by the 4:30 train and was met by Mr. Cleveland, who had driven to the station in his private carriage. The president-elect took Colonel Lamont directly to the Cleveland cottage, where they were joined by ex Secretary Bayard, who is still here. A long conference followed in Mr. Cleveland's private study, and at 4 o'clock Mr. Cleveland consented to his ex-secretary to the station, where he boarded the train for the city.

Mr. Lamont refused to talk politics to reporters and remained in Mr. Cleveland's carriage at the station until the train arrived.

Among other callers were William H. Griffin and John M. Taylor, who were part of the electoral committee that came on from Tennessee to cast the vote for Mr. Cleveland.

It is certain that nothing further has been done in regard to filling the vacancies in the cabinet. This will be left until Mr. Whitney and Mr. Carlisle can be consulted.

Mr. Cleveland will in all probability attend the funeral of Justice Lamar.

NEW ORLEANS JUSTICE.

A Negro Kills Two Persons and Is Promptly Lynched.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 26.—One of the most horrible crimes ever committed here resulted in a woman's throat being cut from ear to ear, a man being murdered and another being lynched. Mrs. Martin McMahon, an aged woman, hired a negro ex-convict named Fisher. She sent the negro on an errand. She expressed displeasure at a trifling purchase he had made for her, when the negro, without warning, reached over to where a large meat knife was, and taking it up rushed for the woman. He caught her by her hair and cut her throat. The negro fled, but was caught by John Barrett, a fireman. Like a flash the negro turned and stabbed three times, killing Barrett instantly. By this time men armed with every kind of weapon came upon the scene, and after several shots had been fired at the negro the crowd quickly got a rope, and with cries of "Hang him before he dies!" dragged him into the yard and strung him up. The excitement was high, but the prompt action of the police put an end to further trouble.

Will Deal Summarily With Americans.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The Evening World says: The syndicate of American capitalists who some time ago purchased for $5,000,000 the valuable concessions controlled by the American bankers, Messrs. Wernersherf & Co., on the island of San Domingo, may have some trouble in gathering the fruits of their investments. The Dominicans are hotly opposed to the transfer of the privileges, as they believe it would result in American domination on the island. General Luperon, ex-president of San Domingo, who is now living in exile at St. Thomas, has issued a fiery manifesto against American control on the island and advocating revolution if the Americans should attempt to carry out their programme.

Egyptian Securities Not Affected.

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—In answer to an inquiry by cable about the present political troubles in Egypt, E. Peladini & Co. received an answer from their correspondent in Alexandria as follows: "No serious apprehensions felt here; unified Egyptian bonds over 80 and cotton market firm and unchanged." This news convinces Messrs. Paladini & Co. that the alleged fomentation among the lower classes of the natives has been exaggerated, as any serious uneasiness would have at once depressed the above values.

Pray Don't Mention It.

Gail and Joseph Brown.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 26.—Baltimore enjoys the unenviable distinction, The News says, of being perhaps the greatest hotbed of policy playing in the United States. PRINCE AND PRINCESS.

Royal Nuptials at the Capital of Germany.

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S SISTER WEDS.

Prince Frederick Charles of Hesse and Princess Margarethe Are Married by Both Civil and Religious Authorities.

Berlin Gayly Decorated.

BERLIN, Jan. 25.—The whole city was decorated with flags in celebration of the wedding of the Princess Margarethe, youngest sister of the emperor, and Prince Frederick Charles of Hesse.

The bride and bridegroom were taken to the Schloss through cheering crowds which lined the route. As the Schloss all the royal personages gathered in the Chinese cabinet to see the Empress Augusta Victoria place the bridal crown upon the Princess Margarethe's head.

Royalty in Procession.

Prince Frederick Charles and his bride then led the procession to the chapel where the religious ceremony was performed.

They were followed by the Empress Frederick, escorted by the emperor in the gala uniform of the Garde du Corps and wearing the decorations of the Black Eagle and the Garter, and by the Landgrave of Hesse; the Empress Augusta Victoria, escorted by the king of Saxony and by the czarowitz in the uniform of the Westphalian hussars; the Landgrave of Hesse, escorted by the Duke of Edinburgh and the Grand Duke of Baden.

The bride wore a gown of white silk and crepe de chine, ornamented with sprays of white daisies and caught at the waist by a gold girdle. Her only jewelry was a diamond necklace. The Empress Augusta Victoria wore drap d'argent, embroidered with gold. The Empress Frederick's gown was gray damask, with a velvet train.

Under a Bower of Chrysanthemums.

Court Chaplain Dryander awaited the bridal party at the altar in a bower of palms and chrysanthemums. As the couple exchanged rings the artillery in the Lustgarten fired 36 salvos.

The ceremony was followed by the wedding banquet, after which came the wedding dance. The marriage of Princess Margarethe and Prince Frederick Charles in a measure takes away from the Empress Frederick her last daughter.

The bridegroom, who is a lieutenant in Queen Victoria's Prussian dragoon guards, has a salary of only $800 yearly, but the Landgrave of Hesse, who is enormously wealthy, will see that he is well provided for financially.

Princess Margarethe receives a handsome dowry from her mother and a very substantial wedding gift from Emperor William.

Has English Tastes and Is Handsome.

Princess Margarethe is thoroughly English in all her tastes and habits, and she speaks the language without a trace of German accent, writes it perfectly and is a great reader of English books.

The princess, without being beautiful, is decidedly pretty. She has a bright and attractive face and is altogether charming.

Prince Frederick of Hesse is a son of the late Landgrave Frederick and the heir of his brother, the Landgrave Alexander.

Fooled a Lawyer, Swindled a Bank.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Jan. 26.—The First National bank of this city was swindled out of $300 by a swindler who introduced himself to Lawyer Davey as B. F. He then had Mr. Davey introduce him to Cashier Thompson of the First National bank and opened an account by depositing bogus checks representing $1,300. He got the bank to cash his check for $300 and left.

Governor Flower on Good Roads.

ALBANY, Jan. 26.—A bill was introduced in the legislature today embodying the views of Governor Flower in regard to the construction of better roads throughout the state. The bill provides that the board of supervisors in any county, by a majority vote, may designate certain county roads, which so far as possible should be the leading market roads between towns in the county, and undertake their repair and maintenance, the cost of the same to be a county expense and to be apportioned among the several towns of the county. The bill also authorizes for the purpose the board of supervisors to borrow money at a rate not exceeding 4 per cent per annum. In any county which avails itself of the privileges of the act the board of supervisors shall appoint a county engineer, who shall have general supervision of the construction and repair of the county roads. It is also provided that the money system shall prevail for keeping all other roads in a town in repair.

Haun, treasurer of Dufferin county and until recently manager of the Orangeville branch of the Bank of Hamilton, who committed suicide at Buffalo by taking poison, left here last Monday evening. CHILDREN'S DRESSES.

The Business Carried on by Two Society Women.

voted much time and attention to the labor problem for their sex, and believe that the true solution of the question is that women should enter fairly and squarely into competition with the trades and come out from behind the shelter of the decorative art, societies and ex changes.

This organization, therefore, is purely a business one in its relation to the world, asking for no favor beyond the usual good will and patronage which every house of business endeavors to secure, and trusting to the excellent character of its products for the continuation of its success. The underlying principle of the concern and the philanthropic side of the undertaking consists in sharing all profits with the employees, and thus by helping others to help themselves exemplifying the best method of practical charity and true benevolence.

A particularly distinguished looking model which they show for a girl of twelve to fourteen has a skirt of blue serge and a crossed black satin sash arrangement at the waist which is sewn into the seam under the arms and fitted neatly to the figure, the lower ends only being continued at the waist to the back in belt form and finished with a rosette. The upper part of the bodice is of tan colored cloth, and also the lower part of the sleeves, the full puffs being of the blue.

GOOD HEALTH

AMERICAN NERVOUSNESS.

Caused by Climatic Conditions and Business and Social Environments.

A well known ethnologist has recently claimed that those persons who hold that diseases of the nervous system have greatly increased with the development of civilization are in error. In reply to him Dr. A. D. Rockwell, of New York, records in Science his very positive conviction to the opposite effect. In his experience a typical case of neurasthenia is difficult to find in hospitals, in dispensaries and among the very poor everywhere, but among the well to do and the intellectual, and especially among those in the professions and in the higher walks of business life who are in deadly earnest in the race for place and power, this peculiar impoverishment of nerve force that we term "neurasthenia" appears with alarming frequency.

Dr. Rockwell says civilization itself, with all that the term implies, with its railway, telegraph, telephone and periodical press, exciting in ten thousand ways cerebral activity and worry, is the primary cause of this increase of nervousness among the higher classes in all countries. American nervousness is becoming almost a distinctive phrase, and it cannot be denied that in this country there are climatic conditions and business and social environments to the influence of which the nervous system is peculiarly susceptible, especially if complicated with evil habits, excesses, tobacco, alcohol, worry and special excitements. In the older countries men plod along in the footsteps of their fathers generation after generation with little possibility and therefore little thought of entering a higher social grade. Here, on the contrary, no one is content to rest with the possibility ever before him of stepping higher, and the race of life is all haste and unrest.

While Americans are undoubtedly a particularly nervous people, Dr. Rockwell considers it well to remember that a large number who think themselves nervously exhausted altogether misconceive their real condition. There is a vanity of disease as well as of dress. Many would rather the thought nervous than bilious or gouty. Real impoverishment of nerve force due to overwork and worry is often confounded with a poisoned condition of the system, the result of indolent habits and an excess of food, and instead of rest, quiet and soothing drafts there is need of mental and physical activity—less, not more food; depletion rather than repletion.

The Hot Bath.

The cold bath is going out of favor. There was indeed an element of humbug in the stoicism of the old Spartan who in the dead of winter broke thin ice to gain ablution. The ghastly smile and the chattering of teeth gave the lie to his protestations of delight. The laborer, whose civilization may well excite envy, shuns cold water as neither refreshing nor cleansing. The poorest inhabitant has a fire of charcoal lighted under a movable tub. And just as the heat in summer is more cooling than the iced drink, so is hot water to be preferred to cold, nor would all of the disciples of the priessnitz principle be necessarily a disciple of Hahnemann, says the Boston Journal.

A Comfortable Cup.

An enthusiastic lover of chocolate affirms that for those who wish to keep the body in a nation fresh and vigorous chocolate is the beverage of beverages. However copiously you have lunched, a cup of chocolate immediately afterward will produce digestion three hours after and prepare the way for a good dinner. It is recommended to every one who devotes to brain work the hours he should pass in bed; to every wife who finds he has become suddenly dull: to all who find the air damp, the time long and the atmosphere thundery, and, above all, to those who, tormented with a fixed idea, have lost their freedom of thought.

ETIQUETTE

THE TIDE OF CHANGE.

Innovations in the Social Traditions of Our British Cousins.

Changes are inevitable, not less in manners than in other things. Among advanced practitioners of the present, noted by an English authority on such matters, and of interest to Americans as well, is the freedom accorded to the girls of the day. So young ladies, to well brought up daughters. English society has changed its views about its daughters; it allows them to take care of themselves in the morning and in the afternoon, and only thinks it necessary to chaperon and look after them in the evening. The line is yet drawn with regard to evening amusements, and at all society functions chaperons are still needed. But even here the thin edge of the wedge has been inserted and with the zeal of fashion upon it; thus the "afternoon party" given by young ladies among themselves, to the exclusion of chaperons, opened the door for the "evening dance," also with the consent but without the presence of the chaperons. This change has hardly taken root as yet, but it is growing and is a strong fact. Then we continue, it may be chronicled that the freak of fashion is now leveled at the the voice of the British society woman. One of the characteristics of a lady was her voice; it was soft, low, well modulated. Poets and novelists bestowed this charm upon their heroines. But now the fashionable voice is high, shrill and strident. One English authority thinks it best described as "an exaggerated imitation of American intonation. These voices come not from the outer ring of the circle, but from the charmed inner ring, the highest in rank being foremost in taking the lead in this respect. True, American voices are naturally on these lines—formerly regarded as a defect—but quaint Americanisms and American wit allied to the same key, and the art so utterly give them a distinct originality, and without the one the other falls worse than flat on the ear, and the general complaint among men now is that the girls of the day have 'such very ugly voices.'"

One change effected during the past year is very decided—viz., "the disuse of crape in all mourning, with the exception of widow's mourning. There has been a decided stand against wearing crape for some years past, but the Prince of Wales gave it the coup de grace by dispensing with it during her mourning for the Duke of Clarence. Now there is a further protest against the heavy crape worn by widows, and bobbinet before another year has gone the modification in this direction will be very perceptible."

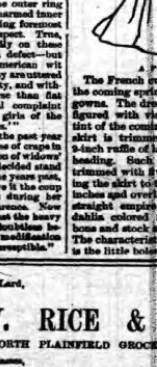
GOWNS OF THE DAY.

A PARIS CREATION AND AN IDEA IN COTTON.

A Dress Suitable for Calls and Receptions. Pretty and Simple Suggestions for Using Cotton Fabrics for Country Wear—Neat in Organdies or Ginghams.

A very simple and picturesque gown from Paris is an adaptation of the First Empire style. It is cut in "princess" shape, with a flowing skirt, and is worn with a very wide sash of a confrasting color, which makes the short waist seem still shorter. The stockinlike collar of soft folds matches the sash. The long, close empire sleeves have a puff covering the elbow, with an inflated balloon puff above. A fur collarette is worn with this costume. This is a suitable gown in which to make calls and to attend day weddings, afternoon receptions and the theater. It may be made of silk velvet of a single hue, or of mirror velvet, or of the new wool velvets with dark pile over a lighter background, or else of Russian colours with changing surface or cords. The girdle or sash may be made either of velvet or satin. Eminence purple, Russian blue, dull green, chestnut brown and black velvet dresses will be made by this model. The hat is of black felt, the brim faced with velvet and trimmed with a cluster of black ostrich feathers.



A PARIS MODEL.

The French cut is a good example of the coming spring mode for sheer cotton gowns. The dress is of organdie muslin, figured with violets in the new dahlia tint of the coming season. The gathered skirt is trimmed at the bottom with a 9-inch ruffle of lace put on with a slight heading. Such a dress is equally well trimmed with five narrow ruffles, finishing the skirt to the depth of about fifteen inches and overlapping each other. The straight empire sash is made of heavy dahlia colored faille, and the long ribbons and stock are of the same material. The characteristic feature of this dress is the little bolero jacket of lace, with its square cap sleeves falling over the top of mutton sleeves of the gown, and its deep cavalier cuffs of lace.

In many of the models introduced for the simpler cotton dresses the belt is formed of rows of shirring extending from under the arm to the bottom of the waist. The bottom of the sleeve is then held in by rows of shirring nearly up to the elbow, where the sleeve expands in huge proportions. Sometimes a yoke is also outlined in shirring. A New York Tribune writer thinks this is an excellent design for batiste cottons, which make such comfortable, dainty gowns for country wear, and are not sheer enough to require quite a silk lining beneath them, as the organdie muslins do. The same design may be carried out by omitting the belt of silk and substituting an open girdle of ribbon or of embroidery, like the jacket and cuffs, and ruffle at the bottom of the skirt.

New Frocks.

A number of beautiful gowns are being made of brocaded pompadour satin with either shot velvet or the new mercerellient velvet. The latter is a delightful fabric well suited to the "Josephine" dinner gowns, a resuscitated fashion which was in favor at the end of the last and beginning of the present century. A delightful model has a sky blue satin ground with small light pink flowers and fait straw foliage, and another shows a corn colored ground with pink flowers and green foliage. The shot brocaded satins are trimmed with shot velvet, magnificent passementeries and lace.

The House Dress Hint.

If you have not a red house dress this season you are truly nowhere. "Any color so it's red" is literally true, but it must shade to the crimson and not toward "brick dust," and most becoming and chic are these same gowns. And it must have gigot sleeves.

Something About Stockings.

Black or navy blue stockings are best liked for day time wear, though for full dress the rule never varies, and the stocking must always match the slipper.

CRINOLINES WON'T DOWN.

A Dinner Gown Just Imported Is Full to the Extreme.

Any one who doesn't believe the crinoline is imminent might spend a pleasant half hour, thinks the New York Sun, in the study of a new dinner gown recently imported and be stimulated in his reflections by remembering that inside the one gown is a wired ruffle gathered to the last degree of fullness. The greatly desired flare of other gowns is secured by a facing of buckram and a petticoat with three full flounces, one put on exactly above the other, and each in a different color. The lower half of the petticoat is gathered in a Spanish flounce to the upper part, which increases the flare. Besides, the skirts are so shaped as to give the peculiar stand out straight look now coveted instead of the clinging droop of last season's grace. The back of the gown gives a better idea of the great width of the skirt as is illustrated in the modified 1837 dinner gown of rich cau de nil satin, which has a round skirt with five graduated rows of double ruche arophane and a low shouldered 1830 bodice, with a scarf waistband fastened behind with each effect. An old-fashioned berthe of satin edged with lace and richly trimmed with spangles and beads falls over the full sleeves, which are encircled with many bands of the ruching and meet the gloves at the elbow.

What to Do in a Sickroom.

It is very often the case that at just the time one needs a physician it is impossible to get him. Frequently in the case of a sick person taking a chill the doctor has made his daily call. The family are terrified; they have no trained nurse there to relieve them of the responsibility. The thing to do is to warm the patient. Fill strong bottles with hot water, place them under the knee, at the feet, under the armpits, give stimulants and cover with blankets. After you have warmed him up do not sweat him, but gradually take off the extra covers. Be sure to keep an even temperature in the sickroom. This is very important at night or in the small hours of dawn. Always have hot water available in sickness of any kind. There is no better way of preserving one's self for emergencies than to imagine them as occurring and to prepare for them in one's mind.

Any one with the average intelligence can keep track of the pulse, temperature and respiration, so that in case of faintness or sinking spells he may know when to give stimulants.

A bottle of brandy or good whisky, a rubber bag for hot water and a can of ground mustard are the first three requisites for the family medicine closet. Emergencies will occur in every household, be it millionaire's mansion or tenement house.

The Luxury of a Bran Bath.

There are but few people who do not feel some strain and fatigue on arriving at a journey's end, and many fair visitors at country houses down with some humiliation that they look their very worst, besides being flushed and headachy, on making their appearance at the dinner table on the night of their arrival. In France women believe more implicitly in simple remedies than we do in America. No French woman who respects her personal appearance ever fails to take a bran bath on reaching the end of a journey. She goes as far as to carry the bran with her, ready sewn up in a large muslin bag, within the recesses of her portmanteau. The bran is first thrown into boiling water, and then well mixed with moderately warm water. A little carbonate of soda may be added if desired. Such a bath is delightfully cooling and soothing.

Keep the Hair Clean.

For washing the hair, particularly such as is inclined to be oily, nothing is better than the common hard soap of the kitchen. A woman who has used it frequently herself and seen its benefits tested in other cases prescribes it with strong faith. "Make a strong suds," she says, "rub it quickly on the hair and wash it off again at once. After that any scented soap or wash may be used in the way of an ordinary shampoo."

Simple and Useful.

To make such a stool as the illustration shows, which is at once fashionable and useful, purchase an ordinary kitchen bench. Rub it thoroughly with fine sandpaper, then paint all its surface with either pale blue or ivory white enamel paint. Make a cushion of hair, or, if that be more costly than suits your purpose, of ordinary excelsior, which shall exactly fit the top of the bench. Then cover it with some daintily figured India silk, or embroider for the purpose a strip of apron linen with Japanese gold, and lastly tie it firmly in its place with ribbons of a harmonizing tone.

DECORATED STOOL.

The Day Had Come.

The declaration of love by the well fed man with a diamond pin had a marked effect on the woman who was fast approaching the mervelon of life.

She blushed into tears.

"Why?" —

Anxiously he leaned over the bowed and trembling figure.

— "do you weep?"

"If I be— boo, hoo—joy."

He was satisfied and kissed her hand. She raised her eyes and gazed at him tremulously.

"And do you really love me?" she asked in faltering tones.

"I do."

She felt that he meant it.

"Then"—

Her demeanor grew suddenly rapturous.

—"you can marry my daughter. Many a time and oft has she failed of matrimony because her suitor couldn't love me. An"—

She had clasped her hands in devout thanksgiving.

— "best, at last!"

Then the revulsion overcame her afresh. —Detroit Tribune.

Elephant on Toast.

The young man from the country took his green mocktle and his best girl into a restaurant on Woolward avenue, and like some young men when the girls are around he was delighted to be facetious at the waiter's expense.

"Waiter," he said, "bring me a broiled elephant."

"Yassir," replied the waiter perfectly unmoved.

"And, waiter, bring it on toast."

"Yassir."

Then he stood there like a statue for a minute.

"Well," said the young man, "are you going to bring it?"

"Yassir."

"Why don't you, then?"

"Orders is, sir, dat we has to git pay in advance for elephants, sir. Elephants on toast, sir, am $15,000.25; if you take it without toast, sir, it am only $15,000, sir."

The waiter never smiled, but the girl did, and the young man climbed down.—Detroit Free Press.

A MAN SHOOTS HIMSELF

PETER HURLICH OF DUNELLEN PUTS A BULLET INTO HIS HEAD.

His Store was Robbed a Few Months Ago, and Brooding Over His Loss is Supposed to Have Led to the Deed. Another Cause Also Assigned.

Peter Hurlich of Dunellen shot himself in the temple this morning at 8.30 o'clock, with suicidal intent.

Dr. Brakely, the local physician, was summoned and promptly responded. After a brief examination he concluded that it was possible to save the man's life. He summoned Drs. Field and Gardon of Plainfield to assist him, and, up to noon to-day, they were reported to still have hope.

Mr. Hurlich had a merchant tailoring establishment on Front street, Dunellen, and lived over the store with his wife and child.

About three years ago the store was broken into and robbed.

The burglars were captured next day some miles away in a barn where they had gone to don some of the clothes. In fact, one of the burglars, a man named Fitzgerald, had a suit of clothes on him which he had stolen from Mr. Hurlich's.

The burglars were tried, convicted, and sentenced to several years imprisonment in the State prison.

Fitzgerald is said to have sworn to revenge himself on Hurlich for his testimony against him.

The Democratic Board of Pardons pardoned Fitzgerald out in time for him to vote at the last election.

A few nights after Fitzgerald had been set free, Hurlich's store was again broken into and robbed, this time the burglars taking away several arm-loads of cloths and clothing, loading them upon a wagon, and driving off when it was loaded.

They went about their work most leisurely, Dunellen having no police protection.

They were seen by a locomotive engineer who was slowly passing on a freight train.

The engineer's description tallied with that of Fitzgerald and his pal, whom the engineer saw crossing the tracks, it being a bright moonlight night.

Mr. Hurlich, who was a heavy sleeper, was awakened with much difficulty by bakers at work in the basement next door. They heard the crushing of the glass of the door, which the burglars broke in to do as much damage as possible. But by the time the bakers succeeded in awakening Mr. Hurlich it was too late. The burglars had escaped. Mr. Hurlich, brooded over his loss, which he could ill afford. It is thought it was this which led him, in utter despair, to commit the deed this morning, which will probably result in his death.

At last accounts—three o'clock this afternoon—the doctors had very little hope.

Hurlich is said to be about forty-five years old.

There is some talk of a forged note being the cause of the deed, but the real cause is, we think, clearly explained.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Frank O. Herring gave an afternoon tea to a number of friends Wednesday, at her home on East Ninth street.

Mr. David L. Lindabury and family of Prospect place, North Plainfield, have removed to Elizabeth. They reside at 249 Edgar place.

Mr. M. M. Dunham of this city attended the State Convention of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association, at Trenton, yesterday.

The Rev. Dr. Mitchell, the former pastor of the Plainfield Methodist church, is meeting with great success in Kansas City, in his new charge, according to the Kansas City Star.

Mr. Harry C. Runyon of this city has recently purchased a house and two lots at Somerville, from the New Jersey Land and Improvement Co. He expects to erect another house there in the Spring.

It was Mrs. John McGuire who died at South Plainfield Wednesday night, and not Mrs. McGuire as stated yesterday. The funeral will leave her late home at nine o'clock Saturday morning, and the services will be held at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's church in this city.

Miss Lavinia L. French and Miss Mabel Maxson, of this city are pupils in the Monday class of Mr. Scharwenka, who gave such a fine exhibition of the modern German method in piano playing, at last night's concert of the Philharmonic Club, and who is at the head of the well-known Scharwenka Conservatory of Music, in New York.

Rev. Dr. Lewis, who has for the past twelve years held the position of non-resident Professor of Bible History and Homiletics at Alfred University, in addition to his duties as pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church of this city, resigned the latter office on Sunday, the resignation to take effect to-day. He returned from Alfred this morning, travelling all night.

The death of Mr. William D. Dorlon at Camden last Tuesday was sad news to his many friends in this city. He was a young man, having just reached his twenty-first year. His career, though short, has been an eventful one. His mother, Mrs. Phoebe Dorlon, daughter of Mrs. Mary Hand of this city, died several years ago. She left a husband and three sons—Harry, William and Walter. After the death of Mrs. Dorlon, the father, a miller, moved away and left the three boys with an aunt, Mrs. Boylan of Mt. Pleasant. There the boys grew to be young men. Harry, the eldest, followed the vocation of his father and became a miller. William went to this city to attend the High School. At the conclusion of his studies he was employed at the furniture warerooms of Mr. Frank O. Green, who was then in business on Park avenue. A year or two later he went to Philadelphia to and entered the employ of the firm of Frederick Loewer & Co., of Fulton street. While in this city he became a member of the First Baptist church and the Y. M. C. A., but two years of life in Brooklyn changed him greatly. There he associated with young men who frequented the race tracks and other ruinous places. The fast life resulting from such association impaired his health, and about a year ago he returned to this city, where he remained until about a month ago when he secured a lucrative position at Camden. There he was suddenly stricken with typhoid fever. The remains were brought to this city and taken to the office of A. M. Runyon & Son, undertakers, where the funeral services were held this afternoon.

A FIRE AT FANWOOD.

C. A. Smith & Co.'s Office Consumed Last Night.

C. A. Smith & Co.'s coal and lumber yard at Fanwood came near being destroyed by fire last night. At about 7.30 o'clock the office was discovered to be on fire. The firemen turned out, but it was too late to save the office, which was burned to the ground. The firemen deserve great credit for their work in saving the lumber, which was piled in close proximity to the burning building. They were greatly handicapped by the scarcity of hose, which is a fire of that kind is a great detriment.

The loss is about $1,000.

The Township Committee will hold a meeting next Saturday night, and the citizens of the township should attend and see that the matter of procuring more hose for such worthy firemen, is discussed.

UPSET OVER AN EMBANKMENT.

Two Plainfielders in a Runaway Accident at Dunellen.

Wednesday evening Mr. Fred Dunn and his cousin, Miss Lizzie Dunn, started to drive to Bound Brook in a sleigh. Mr. Dunn hired the rig from a livery man in this city who told him that the horse was gentle and kind and had never run away. When they were near Dunellen on their way home, the horse suddenly started on a run, and before Mr. Dunn could check him, he turned quickly out of the road, upsetting the sleigh and throwing the occupants over an embankment. They were uninjured and walked to the Dunellen station and came home on a train. The horse meantime ran home. It is said that Wednesday night's runaway was the third one for the same horse this week.

THE GLADLY CYCLISTS.

A CLUB OF TWENTY-SIX PLAINFIELD LADIES WHO ENJOY WHEELING.

Governed by an Elaborate Constitution.—No Treating Allowed as "Runs."—A Club that is Thriving, and no Men in it Either.—Who the Officers are.

GLADLY is the day passed, last year, without a number of the handsome members of the Plainfield Lady Cyclists taking a "run" (a "run" is the same given a ride.)

This club was the outgrowth of the independence of skirts.

The ladies found out the pleasure of bicycle riding, but, while they enjoyed the riding better when a party could go together, they had to regulate meeting place and the difficulty of getting together a party for a "run" was naturally great. So the "Plainfield Lady Cyclists" was formed.

The gentler sex is nothing if not original, and, with greater wisdom than the male riders, their originality took a practical turn. For instance, no "treating" is allowed on a "run." Not even to soda water. Each one must pay her own expenses. Then again, no racing is permitted. This last rule is never violated. The officers of this club for the promotion of health and sociability are:

President ..... Mrs. D. S. Pond
Vice President ..... Miss E. H. Sayre
Second Vice President ..... Mrs. W. E. Rider
Secretary and Treasurer ..... Miss E. Butler
Organist ..... Miss Lillian E. Tryon

Among the members who are most often on the runs are Mrs. F. Green, Mrs. Rider, Miss Green, Miss M. Elrkner, Miss M. Brown, Miss L. French, Miss M. French, Miss A. Green, Miss B. Hall and Miss Mabel Potter.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club, not having given proper recognition to the "Lady Cyclist" as a club, scorned. The P. B. C. is still thriving.

During the Winter season, the name of the Lady Cycler's Club might justly be changed to the Ladies' Social Club, as the interest in the club is kept at Summer fervor by frequent social meetings.

There are twenty-six members in the club.

Everything at the regular meetings is conducted in a business-like way and according to parliamentary rules.

The constitution of the club is elaborate.

Monthly meetings are held on the first Wednesday in each month, and seven days' notice thereof is sent each member by the Secretary.

All members are elected by secret ballot, and two negative votes are sufficient to reject. The name of a rejected candidate can not be brought up again for six months.

The club colors are blue and gray.

The frequent "runs" of the club members have made the "blue and gray" riders familiar figures in Union county.

Good times for the coming Summer are now being planned.

NEW JERSEY CHESS TOURNAMENT.

To be Held at Hoboken Wednesday, February 22d.

The eighth annual tournament of the New Jersey Chess Association, will be held at Hoboken Wednesday, February 22.

During the entire existence of this association, the championship cup has only been in three different places. It was held by Mr. Stoker, of Millville, for two years. Next it was kept in this city three years in succession—two years by Mr. B. D. Keyes and one by Mr. Clarence L. Murphy. A Hoboken player won it next, and his successor, Mr. S. Hosmer, the present champion, is also a resident of that place. So for seven years the cup—while it has been held by five persons—it has only been in three cities.

The association will convene at nine o'clock a. m., and commence playing at 10, with a recess from one to two p. m.

Joseph Jefferson as Rip Van Winkle.

Some one said, last evening, at Music Hall, after seeing Joseph Jefferson as "Rip Van Winkle" in the play of that name, "Well, he is like wine, he improves with age." Mr. Jefferson was encored several times.

The part of "Derrick Von Beekman" the villain of the play was filled by "Edwin Varrey" and, like Jefferson's part, was well done. Mr. "Varrey" is known off the stage as Mr. Phillips and has a handsome country home back of North Plainfield. He was warmly applauded.

There were few vacant seats in the house.

THE CAREER OF BLAINE

His Brilliant Attainments and Magnetic Personality.

A TYPICAL AMERICAN STATESMAN

The Most Popular Citizen of His Day, Yet He Was Disappointed in His Lifelong Ambition—Dramatic Incidents of His Career as Congressman, Speaker, Senator, Secretary of State and Presidential Candidate—Colonel Ingersoll's Celebrated Nominating Speech at Cincinnati—Mr. Blaine's Domestic Life.

[Copyrighted, 1887.]

On the first Monday of December, 1863, there met in the hall of the house of representatives a number of men about thirty years of age who were destined to play an important part in national life. Allison of Iowa, Windom of Minnesota, Pendleton of Ohio, Randall of Pennsylvania and General Garfield were among them. But there was one who attracted attention from the veterans of the house the instant he entered the chamber. He was a man of noble proportions, of easy manner and perfect self reliance. He had a splendid crown of hair of reddish tinge and a full beard of the same tint. His eyes attracted the attention of every one who saw him. They were large, luminous and restless.

Sumner Cox, an old member, was attracted to this man as soon as his eyes fell upon him. He asked who he was and said that this man would make his impress in that chamber. Mr. Cox was told that this man who had thus attracted him was a new member from Maine whose name was Blaine, and Mr. Randall, who knew him slightly, said: "He is a native of my own state; was born near the town of Washington, was educated in the college there, and I afterward met him in Philadelphia, where he was a teacher. I have heard of him in Maine, where he is regarded as a man of great promise and much political ability."

Such was the impression which Mr. Blaine first made when he entered the house of representatives, and if traditions are accurate his personality was as strongly made manifest to his Republican associates as it was to Mr. Cox. Mr. Blaine was only thirty-three years of age. As Randall said, he had been ten years before a teacher in Philadelphia, and before that as a military school in Kentucky. He had taken his diploma at Washington college when barely twenty-one years of age, and while he was regarded by his teachers and his mates as bright and smart, he had given no suggestion of the powers that were in him, so that these early friends bore him in mind while he was in obscurity.

JAMES G. BLAINE.

His father, Ephraim G. Blaine, was a man of rugged force of character, and from him Blaine undoubtedly inherited the great moral courage and political audacity which have been characteristic of his political career. From his mother he inherited that wonderful intuitive capacity which has enabled him in moments of great crises to act as though by inspiration. From her he also received his high sensitiveness of emotional character, which has been conspicuous in his political life.

Blaine Emigrates Eastward.

Of course Mr. Blaine would have developed whatever talented and in whatever calling he selected as a life career, but it was pure chance which made him the man from Maine. He met while a teacher in Kentucky Miss Harriet Stanwood, who was also a teacher. They were mutually attracted, and just after he had made his maternity they were married. She was a Maine girl, and she induced her young husband to remove to her home and make it his abiding place.

Blaine while in Philadelphia had been attracted to journalism. He has said that he discovered by pure chance that he had the facility with the pen, especially in political discussion, but it could not have been pure chance. It must have been the impulse of the spirit that was in him. And acting upon this impulse, he became a part proprietor of The Journal, a weekly paper published in Augusta, Me. The profits were not great, and Mr. Blaine was if not compelled at least willing to accept employment as associate editor of the Portland Advertiser. The editor of that paper heralded Blaine's ability as a political writer and offered him $1,500 a year, a large salary for that time and place. Blaine was not slow in discovering his strength and his value, and at the end of a year he asked for an increase of salary to $1,700 and for a contract covering a period of years.

The proprietor, however, felt that he could not afford to pay this money, and Blaine returned to Augusta, determined to associate politics with his editorial life. He revealed extraordinary political capacity at once, was elected a member of the legislature and subsequently speaker, became chairman of the committee of his party and within three years was acknowledged preeminent among the politicians of his state. Exactly the same qualities which brought him those marvelous tributes of respect and admiration which were afterward his lot won for him great victories in state and congress, where politics prevail, where there has been a good deal of contention, and where personal rivalry and to some extent party jealousy give spice to their parts as dangerous as in some other states.

Blaine's Farsightedness.

From the very first Mr. Blaine perceived that a politician—and he had unquestionably determined to make politics his life business—needed perhaps above other men to be free from money embarrassments. He therefore began with great energy a business career which was brief. He procured some contracts from the war department for furnishing supplies to the soldiers, and while he was aiding the government of Maine to the extent of his ability in recruiting and equipping soldiers he was also engaged in a perfectly honorable business of supplying the government with rations for the army. He did not accumulate much, but he got enough so that he had a home, of his own in Augusta and a few thousands to his credit in the bank. He was for a time fascinated with business pursuits, and it was a serious question for some time whether he should not abandon politics and devote himself to business.

Those who knew Blaine in later years declared that had he entered the field of business activity he had the peculiar mental qualities which would have enabled him to stand with the great organizing and constructive commercial geniuses of this generation. He never cared for money for itself. He did not have the acquisitive sense. But he liked power, and he realized at that early day what the power of money is.

Why He Went to Congress.

An emergency arose in the congress district in which he lived. A candidate was to be put in nomination. The temptation was offered to him: he thought of the matter over night, and on the next morning had come to a decision which determined his career. He was nominated on the first ballot and elected with but a feeble opposition.

BLAINE'S BIRTHPLACE.

Soon after Mr. Blaine was sworn in a friend called on him at his boarding house at Washington quite late in the evening. He found Blaine at his desk, his ruddy tinted hair so near the gas burner that it seemed as though it must be singed, a copy of the house rules before him, a volume of "Cushing's Manual" and a report of precedents which had been established by the rulings of various speakers.

"Hello! hard reading, Jim'll, Mr. Blaine!" said his friend.

"Yes, if you read it offhand; but the man who masters this," throwing his hand down upon the pages of the book of rules, "masters the house of representatives."

It is one of the traditions of Blaine that he mastered Cushing's parliamentary law in one night in his college days, and won a youthful victory in school politics the next day thereby. And in this chance remark to a friend he revealed the purpose of political mastery which had seized him. He was quiet in the house until he had mastered as perfectly as the rule of three those useful acts of procedure which govern it. And when this was his possession he began to assert himself. That was exactly what one young Democrat named Stevens was doing. Mr. Randall, and herein lay in no small degree the secret of the power which these two men gained on their respective sides of the aisle.

Blaine's Quick Perception.

He showed courage, however, once or twice in that first term. He even dared to confront Thad Stevens, who had ruled his party in the house with autocratic and dogmatic assertion. The gaunt and grizzly old Commoner, amazed to find his authority disputed by a youngster, tried to brush Blaine off as an annoying but trivial incident of embarrassment, but he found his master. Stevens had introduced a bill providing for military governments in the southern states.

Blaine, on the first reading of this bill, with that intuitive perception which he possessed in a higher degree than any man of his day in congress, saw one fatal error in the bill. And Garfield used to say that when he arose to make his protest and delivered his speech his utterance was that of a man who had authority and his speech that of a mind which had reason. Blaine proposed an amendment by which, in spite of military government, the people of these southern states could in time establish for themselves a republican form of government again. Stevens chafed and raged, and the frown upon his brow made the flesh appear like corrugated ridges, as Cox once said, but he could not frown that congress into defeating the amendment.

Blaine's Impetuosity.

In the next congress, to which Blaine was elected by practically unanimous vote, he felt fully equipped for those struggles which had the speakership and, beyond question, the presidency in view. He had the same impetuosity in the house, the dashing, dramatic manner which characterized Sheridan in the field, qualities which, combined with courage and magnanimity, are sure to command great popularity.

These very qualities made Blaine reckless in speech at times. He never practiced oratory as those who desire to win rhetorical repute do. He wrote few and rehearsed no speeches. He was a master of good English, a ready thinker upon his feet, although he never spoke excepting upon a subject with which he was familiar. He possessed a capacity for invective and sarcasm, and he indulged in it, and then there came about the verbal encounter with Roscoe Conkling, which seems destined to be associated by tradition with the fame of both of them.

Conkling had returned to congress, and there is little doubt that both he and Blaine as soon as they met measured each other with the eyes of rivals. Conkling had won a magnificent reputa as an orator, and to the most arduous toil was unflinching it. He unquestionably aimed at pre-eminence in the party, and Blaine felt this intuitively as the latter's eyes fell upon the man. It was inevitable that these two should come into collision, and in the course of some heated remarks Blaine compared his to a turbulent sea. The words were no sooner uttered than Blaine regretted it, and he caused an expression of his regret to be conveyed to Conkling. Conkling, however, never mentioned Blaine's name afterward when he could avoid it, and refused many tenders of reconciliation.

After Mr. Conkling's death his brother, Colonel Frederick A. Conkling, informed the writer of these lines that it was a mistake to suppose that the remark in his brother's letter had greatly offended Conkling. The morbid wound was given, so Colonel Conkling said, by Mr. Blaine when he caused to be read in the house of letter from General Halleck, General Fry to himself (Blaine) in which direct accusations were made against Mr. Conkling's personality and official integrity. Conkling felt bitterly that when Mr. Blaine publicly retracted and repudiated these accusations then it would be time to talk of reconciliation.

But the incident was mighty in its consequences. It undoubtedly prevented the nomination of Mr. Blaine in 1876 and 1880 and contributed to his defeat in 1884. On the other hand can be traced to it the steps which ultimately led to Mr. Conkling's retirement from the senate in his millionaire and to his withdrawal forever from public life.

Mr. Blaine as Speaker.

He made a superb speaker. When he was first elected he had hardly entered the prime of life. He was only thirty-nine years of age. His hair and beard, by an inherited tendency, were already showing streaks of gray, but his complexion was ruddy, his skin as smooth as a babe's, and the mysterious and splendid fascination of his eyes seemed to increase with his years and political activity. He stood behind the speaker's desk a superb specimen of manly strength. It was a thing pleasing to those in the gallery and a thrill upon the floor to look at him. His eyes seemed to be everywhere. He had mastered the confusion of sounds which prevail in that turbulent body, as the horse magnifies is master of the distraction of a great foundry or manufactory, so that he could detect instantly that which was relevant and of importance and that which was of no consequence.

He held that great and noble body as absolutely at his command as though it was a family or a tribe of which he was the chief. He displayed business with celerity which seemed incredible. The clerks of his own party, the chief authority, and the house obeyed it, and no eyes which ever looked forth from the speaker's desk upon a throng intimated by the faintest consumour of the higher passions ever commanded such obedience by a glance as his. Therefore he gained the respect which comes from power that, when it is wielded by one man with Republicans is saying, "There is a man!" He was the supreme exhibition of these qualities which he unconsciously revealed first to the congressmen of his party, and through them to vast numbers of the party throughout the country, that here was the man to succeed in the presidency the hero of the civil war.

Blaine himself was as acknowledged candidate before he had finished his second term, and he used his power as speaker unquestionably, so far as he honorably could, to create the politics which command a following throughout the land. Our in the state there were certainly three rivals of his for that nomination, two conspicuous—Mr. General Grant's cabinet and Blaine was Morton and Mr. Conkling—and Mr. Blaine appointed to the committee on rules played his game against them and played it splendidly. At the beginning of his third term as speaker he realized that if his grasp was not quite upon the presidency his hand could almost touch the prize.

His Moral Courage.

It is therefore all the more remarkable that Mr. Blaine was capable of exploits that he did in the highest degree both moral courage and audacity, which might serious by imperil his prospects. His audacity was displayed when he was brought face to face with grave charges affecting his integrity of character. Accusations were publicly made that he had received a large sum of insurance certain securities from a railway seeking congressional aid. The proof of these accusations were said to be in the possession of a certain clerk named Mulligan, and in the shape of letters. The friends of Mr. Blaine looked very solemn in those days, and he was in great pain.

Margery. James D., Jr. Emmons. Walker.

FOUR OF MR. BLAINE'S CHILDREN.

One morning when this black cloud was hanging over him and his friends he arose to a question of personal privilege. They had been a hint of his intention. The great galleries were packed. Every seat upon the floor was taken, and senators had come from their chamber that they might see and hear Blaine in this hour of his desperation and peril. For every discomfort which this strong soldier of party when amply repaid. The scene which took place has seldom almost unequaled in parliamentary annals. Blaine stood there magnificent in his defiance. He held aloft a bundle of incriminating letters, of itself a dramatic picture and situation worthy of the greatest dramatists, and he declared with some sense of humiliation and pain that they might see and hear himself read these letters to the house, that its members might see what those accusations were.

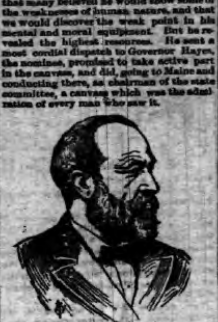
Blaine was never more superb. He conquered that house by his very magnificence of resistance. He held himself at bay so that every word of denial and explanation read to the echo with the applause of this spectacle. He read the letters through, and then, with dramatic effect, as if perfectly acting, was a finer exhibition of the dramatic gift than the greatest actors have ever shown, he pointed the finger of scorn and accusation at the clerk Mulligan of the house and accused him of withholding a telegram which would have proved his innocence.

Blaine's enemies never asserted that this was acting. They did not deny the magnificence of the performance, but they suspected his sincerity. For his friends it was a perfect vindication, and for himself it was a complete victory, as the formal charges were from that day dropped. It was a perfect stage setting. Had it failed Blaine must inevitably have been ruined.

His moral courage was displayed when he was defeated for the speakership as speaker he defied the majority in his own party and made a ruling which he insisted was just and in accordance with his oath as speaker, but which enabled the Democratic minority to defeat the Republican majority. Had Blaine been defeated in that fight he would have been retired by his ruling, but it gave him no strength in his own party and enlisted for him the sympathy of many Democrats, so that it was long afterward said that of all Republicans Mr. Blaine was the most popular with the Democracy.

His Tried Failure.

He lost the presidential nomination in 1876 when it was almost his. Personal animosity unquestionably cost him that prize. The offense he had given to Conkling and anger which he had caused to arise in the hearts of men who controlled other delegations led to a hasty nomination, which resulted in the defeat of Mr. Blaine to the rear. Men wondered how he would act in this emergency. His heart had been so enthusiastically set upon the nomination, that many believed he would show some of the weaknesses of human nature, and that we would discover the weak point in his mental and moral armor. But he revealed the highest resources. His sent a most cordial dispatch to Governor Hayes, the nominee, promised to take active part in the campaign, left for Augusta, Maine and conducting there, as chairman of the state committee, a canvass which was the admiration of every man who saw it.



JAMES A. GARFIELD.

In these canvasses as a politician Mr. Blaine was not less great than when he was the statesman or orator. He frequently made a sleeping car his home. They would hear of him one day in Portland and the next in the lumber regions. He would hold meetings and reports in his car. He gave orders like a general on a field of battle. He brought himself into personal touch with all of the politicians and got as many of the citizens as possible, and some of the anecdotes which are told of the way in which he won soldiers encouraged his wonderful intellectual resources and the rapidity of his mental operation.

Blaine in the Senate.

His political intentions were illustrated in another way at this time. He unquestionably suggested the arrangement by which Senator Morrill of his state, was transferred from the senate chamber to General Grant's cabinet and Blaine was appointed to Morrill's seat and afterward elected. He felt that his day of usefulness in the house was over. He had made his record, and he believed that in the comparative quiet of the senate chamber he would find some rest, and would be able to carry on the politics which had the presidential nomination of 1880 in view. His friends always felt that his life in the senate was irksome. He adapted himself to the traditions of that somewhat lethargic body, but at the cost of some personal discipline. Of course his personality was felt there, but as a senator he added but little if any to his repute.

While he did not enter upon the canvass for the presidential nomination of 1880 in that dashing and inspiring way which characterized him previous to 1876, yet he had the nomination in view and knew that he was the leader of a large part of the political leaders and felt that he was of the masses of his party. He advised, but he did not dictate, and he let his political friends do the work of conducting to a great extent. He would unquestionably have been nominated had he not been compelled to face the overwhelming popularity of General Grant, which was increased by his trip around the world, and was made use of with great skill by the politicians. Scarcely had the convention finished, when Blaine began to consult his friends as to the candidate of a large party of the political leaders and felt that he was of the masses of his party. He advised, but he did not dictate, and he let his political friends do the work of conducting to a great extent. He would unquestionably have been nominated had he not been compelled to face the overwhelming popularity of General Grant, which was increased by his trip around the world, and was made use of with great skill by the politicians. Scarcely had the convention finished, he could name the man who could beat him, and thus General Garfield became the candidate.

Garfield could make no other choice than Blaine for secretary of state, but what Blaine's career as secretary and Garfield's as president would have been of course is a matter of surmise. The impression has always been that Blaine's personality would have dominated Garfield's. He would, however, pledged to Garfield to support him for a renomination.

Blaine in Emergency.

Mr. Blaine was with General Garfield at the time he was assassinated, and from the nervous shock he then received he never fully recovered. He had never been the man physically after the assassination of 1876 that he was before. But this painful experience seemed to shatter his nerves more than that. His hair, which had been iron gray, grew white, and his mental and physical complexion became of that waxy hue which led many to believe that he had organic disease.

He was, however, capable of audacity and courage, and it was he who proposed to the members of the cabinet during Garfield's illness that the cabinet should announce to the country that the president was suffering from such disability as the constitution contemplated when it declared that the vice president should in such cases exercise the duties of the office.

Mr. Blaine felt that there ought to be no question about the constitutional view, and it was his opinion that if General Garfield recovered he would resume the office. He was overruled, however, by the cabinet as a matter of public expediency, although it was admitted that in case of war or great emergency it might be necessary to take such a step. The incident, however, is characteristic of the man.

Blaine in Retirement.

During the winter following the assassination of Garfield those who went to the congressional library most frequently to see a man of quiet manner poring over old volumes, searching the bookshelves, wandering about like a literary recluse, and when they recognized him they were amazed that he who had won so great fame and was the idol of so many Americans should be content to confine himself in misty alcoves and among musty books. Mr. Blaine, however, was permitting the activity of his mind to take another direction. He was not a man of leisure. Nature's cabinet, but could not be idle, and he decided, therefore, to take up the literary pen and the journalistic pencil before he had become familiar with it. He rejoiced in the work. It was the first leisure of the literary and the study which he had permitted himself since school days.

When men knew that Blaine was writing this history they said, "Now he will pay off grudges, and now he will give us his opinion of men and events in his character-same manner. In about two years one more volume was issued, and it opened as a great. Blaine the warrior was revealed in Blaine the true historian. He told his story in simple literary style, with great lucidity and with such fairness as could only have been expected of a historian of a future generation. He wrote of his personal enemies as justly and as kindly as of his friends, and he made a contribution to political history which is invaluable. The result of the work was enormous, and the profits made Mr. Blaine a very wealthy man. He said himself that it was only after the receipts of the sale of this book that he realized the luxury of possessing money.

The pathos of the story of General Grant writing his memoirs upon his deathbed is the most sublime of general history. But it has seemed to many that there is something of pathos in the quiet resignation with which Mr. Blaine returned to the writing of the second volume of his history after his defeat for the presidency in 1884. He had lost the prize when a change of 200 votes could have given it to him. The alliterative blunder of Burchard had defeated him in his moment of victory, and if ever a politician went through an experience which was to test the strength Mr. Blaine did in those winter days of 1884 and 1885.

He uttered one word of protest and utterance of despair, and then he took up his pen again, walking for an hour or two each day over the crusted snow of the Augusta streets that he might get exercise, and when there went to see him he found him Blaine the man—resigned, patient, cheerful, but with symptoms now and then of the fire of genius which burned within him. When his book was completed he took his family to Europe and spent a year, and it was while there that, acting in accordance with the monitions of his physician, he wrote the Florence letter, telling his friends that they must not look to him as a presidential candidate, for he could not accept the nomination if it came. Reinstantly and only after a second warning from him did his friends heed him. Had he remained passive while abroad he would have been nominated in 1888.

Secretary Again.

With something of the serenity of the youth of old age Mr. Blaine entered for his second term upon the duties of secretary of state. His mental genius asserted itself in that office again, and while his physical characteristics and the writer of his youth had been subjected to change the power of his mind was illustrated. He conducted most brilliant diplomatic correspondence, and he formulated the most comprehensive commercial and financial policy which the government had undertaken since the war, with the single exception of the resumption of specie payments. He turned the attention of the politicians from questions bred of the war to those of the future and gave promise of commercial prosperity between the nations of the American continent.

It is probably upon this achievement that Mr. Blaine rested for posthumous fame. He said when the politicians went to him urging him again to be a candidate for president "I was a candidate once. I was given one opportunity, and I never can say word or do deed again which would look as though I did not regard the verdict at that time as final."

On the 4th of June, 1892, the country was amazed to learn that Mr. Blaine had that day resigned as secretary of state in a brief and very formal note, without a word of explanation, and that President Harrison had accepted the resignation in the fewest possible words. This is not the place and now is not the time to comment or even surmise. On Sept. 8, 1892, Mr. Blaine addressed to Chairman Joseph H. Manley, of the Maine Republican committee, his last public letter on politics. On the evening of Oct. 14, 1892, at Ophir Farm, New York, the residence of Whitelaw Reid, he made his last speech.

Social and Domestic.

Those who knew James G. Blaine only as a politician can know but half of his life, and that not the more attractive. His ancestry was of the native American nobility, and his own family life was of a strangely varied character, but one of unalloyed happiness being followed by an evening of almost continuous calamity and sorrow.

The Gillespies and Blaines were people of standing before the Revolution, and both Colonel Blaine who was commissary general of the northern department of Washington's army, and Gillespie, his mother's father, was a scholar of high standing and illustrious grandson's studies down to the time he entered Washington university. Equal honor is due the ancestors of Mrs. Blaine, who was Miss Harriet Stanwood, of a family settled in Massachusetts in the early days of that colony, and went thence to Maine in the vanguard of its pioneers.

In Augusta, where her father, Jacob Stanwood, lived for many years, Mrs. Blaine was born in 1828. Her father was a well to do merchant, a man of influence, although never holding public office. He took great pride in his daughter, who was a girl of fine natural gifts, strengthened by liberal education. Full of ambition and force, she well displayed in after life, she determined to make her own way, and hence started out as a school teacher. It was at Millersburg, Ky., that she first met James G. Blaine as a professor at the Military Institute at Blue Lick Springs, a few miles distant. The world has heard enough of the circumstances connected with their marriage. It is a cruel feature of American political campaigns that neither man nor woman is spared. The slightest youthful indiscretion or even an error of judgment is magnified into a monstrous crime, and in 1884 both candidates suffered.

The first child of this union, Stanwood Blaine, died in infancy. Three sons and two daughters remained, and the father's heart was wrapped up in them. Walker Blaine, the oldest, was his father's trusted companion and secretary. Miss Margaret Blaine was to her mother what Walker was to his father, but Miss Harriet was less known to the public, possessing both wit and beauty and those social qualities required for a leading lady in Washington society. Of Emmons and James G. Blaine, jr., the world knew but little. Such was the family when Secretary Blaine took up his residence in that historic home on Lafayette square that was last too well named the House of Calamity. Two tragedies previously enacted there are a part of the nation's history, and the Blaines suffered terribly.

First came the death of a daughter, then the wife of Colonel Coppinger, and but two weeks later Walker Blaine died from before the country had learned that he was seriously ill. The marriage of James G. Blaine, jr., a mere boy, to Miss Marie Nevins, was followed rapidly by his divorce and a painful series of recitations, tions, and immediately after it the death of Emmons Blaine at Chicago. No comment can add color to this bare statement of the facts. Only Mrs. Walter Damrosch, nee Margaret Blaine, her sister Harriet and James G. Blaine, jr., remain to comfort their afflicted mother. When the host assembled by the late campaign shall have cooled the world will judge very leniently the actions of the secretary during the Minneapolis convention.

BLAINE'S WASHINGTON RESIDENCE.

Ingersoll's Eloquent Tribute.

The noblest eulogy on the departed statesman's political career and principles was that uttered by Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll in the Republican national convention of 1876. It is therefore submitted here entire as the fittest ending of this sketch

Massachusetts may be satisfied with the loyalty of Benjamin F. Butler. So am I. But if any man nominated by this convention cannot carry the state of Massachusetts, I am not satisfied with the loyalty of that state. If the nominee of this convention cannot carry the grand old commonwealth of Massachusetts by 75,000 majority, I would advise them to sell out Faneuil hall as a Democratic headquarters. I would advise them to take from Bunker Hill that old monument of glory.

The Republicans of the United States demand as their leader in the great contest in 1876 a man of intelligence, a man of integrity, a man of well known and approved political opinions. They demand a reformer after as well as before the election. They demand a politician in the highest, broadest and best sense—a man of superb moral courage. They demand a man acquainted with public affairs, with the wants of the people, with not only the requirements of the hour, but with the demands of the future. They demand a man broad enough to comprehend the relations of this government to the other nations of the earth. They demand a man well versed in the powers, duties and prerogatives of each and every department of this government.

They demand a man who will secretly preserve the financial honor of the United States who knows enough to know that the national debt must be paid through the prosperity of the people, who knows enough to know that all the financial theories in the world can not redeem a single dollar; one who knows enough to know that all the money must be paid not by law, but by labor; one who knows enough to know that the people of the United States have the industry to make the money and the honor to pay it over just as fast as they make it.

The Republicans of the United States demand a man who knows that prosperity and resumption when they come must come together; that when they come they will come hand in hand through the golden harvest fields hand in hand by the whirling spindles and the turning wheels; hand in hand past the open furnace doors; hand in hand by the flaming forges; hand in hand by the chimneys filled with eager fire—greeted and grasped by the countless sons of toil.

This money has to be dug out of the earth You cannot make it by passing resolutions in a political convention.

The Republicans of the United States want a man who knows that this government should issue every dollar that is needed abroad, who knows that any government that will not defend its defenders and protect its protectors is a disgrace to the map of the world. They demand a man who believes in the eternal separation and divorcement of church and school. They demand a man whose political reputation is spotless as a star; but they do not demand that their candidate shall have a certificate of moral character signed by a Confederate congress. The man who has in full, heaped and running measure all those splendid qualifications is the present grand and gallant leader of the Republican party—James G. Blaine.

Our country, with the vast and marvelous achievements of its first century asks for a man worthy of the past and prophetic of her future, asks for a man who has the audacity of genius; asks for a man who is the grandest combination of heart, conscience and brain beneath the flag—such a man is James G. Blaine.

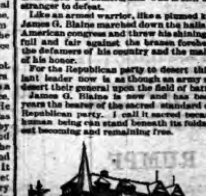
For his Republican host, led by this intrepid man, there can be no defeat.

This is a grand year—a year filled with the recollections of the Revolution; filled with proud and tender memories of the past, with the sacred legends of liberty; a year in which the sons of freedom, full of fire from the forges of enthusiasm; a year in which the people call for a man who has preserved in congress what our soldiers won upon the field, a year in which they call for the man who has torn from the throat of treason the tongues of slaughter; for the man who has mangled the mask of Democracy from the hideous face of rebellion; for the man who, like an intellectual athlete, has stood in the arena of debate and challenged all comers, and who is still a conquering hero.

Like an ancient warrior, like a plumed knight, James G. Blaine marched down the halls of the American congress and threw his shining lance full and fair against the brazen foreheads of the defamers of his country and the maligners of his honor.

For the Republican party to desert this gallant leader now is as though an army should desert their general upon the field of battle.

James G. Blaine is now and has been for years the bearer of the sacred standard of the Republican party. This standard floats above no human being can stand beneath its folds without becoming and remaining free.



BLAINE'S BAR HARBOR HOME.

Gentlemen of the convention, in the name of the great republic, the only republic that ever existed upon this earth, I nominate for the next presidency that gallant defender of the defenders and of all her supporters in the name of all her soldiers living, in the name of all her soldiers dead upon the field of battle, and in the name of those who perished in the skeleton attacks of famine at Andersonville and other prisons of hell, I nominate for the next presidency that prince of parliamentarians—that leader of leaders—James G. Blaine.

A NEW RECORD ON SKATES.

Joe Donoghue Covers Four Hundred Miles in Twenty Hours.

STAMFORD DEPOT, Conn., Jan. 27.—At 6:15 o'clock yesterday morning the signal was given, and the three contestants in the 100-mile skating match sped away on the course at Cornwood. The three skaters were Joseph F. Donoghue, aged 18, of Newburg, N. Y.; A. S. Frank lin, aged 23, of New York city, and John Ennis, aged 31, of this city. The match was brought about by a challenge issued by Donoghue. Ennis, who holds the American record, at once accepted. He made 100 miles in Chicago in 5:07 1-2. He runs a summer resort at Shippan Point, near here, and has contested in other athletic events. Franklin, who is a Norwegian, heard of the match and offered to come up. He states that in Norway he skated 160 miles in eight hours. Donoghue learned to skate on the Hudson, and his father is a boatbuilder and skate-maker at Newburg, and Joe works with him a great deal.

When Referee Curtis gave the signal to start Franklin started ahead with a short, quick stroke. Ennis came next, skating as erect as a soldier on parade. Donoghue was behind. Franklin's dress was entirely of blue. Ennis' color was white.

The men maintained this order to the end of the first mile. On the second half mile, however, Donoghue beat his body forward and glided to the lead so easily that the crowd shouted.

After the sun began to soften the ice all hopes of breaking the record were given up.

In the afternoon the crowd of spectators increased, leaving only a narrow track for the skaters. Franklin soon secured putting a wider distance between himself and his competitors with clocklike regularity, his early miles averaging about 3¼ minutes and his later ones about 4½ minutes.

When the champion made 90 miles in 6h. 32m. 27 3-5s. the crowd could hardly be restrained. On his 95th mile he met with an accident which nearly put him out of the race. A small boy darted out of the crowd on one side of the track and attempted to cross just as Donoghue came like wind down the long stretch. The boy collided with the champion and was knocked 20 feet in one direction, while Donoghue fell backward, wrenching one knee and cutting his lip. His brother was at his side and helped him to his feet. He was unsteady for a moment, but pulled himself together and gradually resumed his former gait. In seven hours from the start he had covered 97 miles and 220 yards, making a record for this time. His last mile was done in 4m. 2 2-5s., and his time for the 100 miles was 7h. 11m. 28 1-5s. When Donoghue finished Franklin had 90¼ miles and Ennis 68 miles to his credit. The best record up to date was that of John Ennis, made at the Chicago rink, and was 11h. 37m. 45s. Donoghue finished in good condition.

Natives Abroad.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Two Sioux Indians from the Pine Ridge agency, American Horse and Eagle Elk, are in custody of the police in Sydney, charged with vagrancy. These Indians were taken to the colonies in a wild west show from San Francisco, and they say they left the employ of a patent medicine advertising company. They filled one contract with the show, but broke a second, and since then have been tramping through the country.

AFFAIRS OF CONGRESS.

Senators Hiscock and Mills Get Together on a Bill.

AMERICAN SILK INDUSTRY GROWS.

Preliminary Appropriation For the New York Custom House—Inquiry Into the Panama Railroad Somewhat Curtailed From First Intent.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The session of the house was one devoid of any public interest. The stanley civil bill was granted the right of way, and while a few obstructions were placed on the track, none of them proved disastrous, and the bill made fair progress. The item of appropriation for the survey of public buildings elicited a debate of the attack, but Mr. Holman kept his men in line, and amendments looking to an increase of the appropriation for this purpose from $100,000 to $250,000 and $600,000 were cleared by the appropriations committee's "convenient rule." Without disposing of the bill the house adjourned.

There were not many senators in the chamber during the debate on the anti-option bill, but those who were present witnessed the remarkable circumstance of the stalwart Republican, Mr. Hiscock (N. Y.), having his argument against the constitutionality of the bill sustained by the stalwart Republican, Mr. Hiscock (N. Y.).

Mr. Mills declared his belief that the sentiment in favor of local self government prevailed from New England to the Pacific ocean, and Mr. Hiscock asserted that there had been surely presented to congress a measure in which less regard had been said than was paid in the pending measure either to the properties of legislation or to constitutional restrictions. An effort to pass a bill creating a commission on the alcoholic liquor traffic gave Mr. Vest (Dem., Mo.) an opportunity of ventilating his views on such specimens of crank legislation and those philanthropists who wanted to use the powers of congress to advance some special hobby to which they are devoting their otherwise useless lives."

Federal Election Laws a Failure.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The special committee of the house of representatives, of which Hon. Ashbel P. Fitch is chairman, has concluded its report into the supervision and administration of the federal election laws in the southern district of New York. The committee, after carefully studying their operations, express the opinion "that all of these laws have entirely failed to produce any good results in the direction of purity in the conduct of that section of the ballot box, and have been productive of such serious and dangerous results that they ought at once to be repealed," and the reasons given for such repeal as stated are because they result in no conviction of offenders and are therefore useless to prevent such crimes, are expensive and are fruitful of constant and continuing frauds upon the treasury.

For the New York Custom House.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Senator Hiscock introduced in the senate a bill embodying the recommendations of the treasury department relative to the New York custom house. The items of cost for the building is not specified. Five hundred thousand dollars is asked for the preparation of plans and the commencement of the work of erecting the custom house building. The secretary of the treasury is authorized to sell, after the completion of the new building, the old custom house site and building and place the proceeds, less the expenses incurred, in the United States treasury.

The Panama Inquiry Curtailed.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The Democratic majority of the committee on rules has decided to report back the Fellows resolution providing for an investigation of the Panama railroad and mail steamship with an amendment limiting the inquiry to the effect of the recent operations on American commerce, and providing for an examination of the traffic agreements made between the Pacific Mail Steamship company and the transcontinental railroads and their bearing upon the steamship subsidy act.

American Silk Statistics.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—A census bulletin says the classification of silk goods of American manufacture is now practically without limit and fully equal to the foreign product in quality of weave, beauty of design and excellence of finish, and the value of the net or finished production of silk goods manufactured during the year 1890 was over $90,000,000, against $54,300,000 for the year 1880.

Why Is Not the Sugar Trust Prosecuted?

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—Mr. Hopkins (Pa.) introduced in the house a resolution directing the attorney general to inform that body why the American Sugar Refining company or Sugar trust is not proceeded against as are other persons charged with crime.

Asiatic Horses Barred From Australia.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The prohibition of the importation of horses from California into New South Wales and south Australia is in force, and no official notice has been taken upon the request of the United States government that the prohibition be removed.

Postmasters Nominated.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27.—The president sent the senate the following nominations for postmasters: Edgar E. Barkley, Tupper Lake, N. Y.; Thomas Walkey, Jarratt, Pa.

Bubble Officers Alive.

SUPERIOR BRIDGE, N. Y., Jan. 27.—Custom house officers arrested John A. Miller and Miss S. Davis, both of Toronto, charged with smuggling. Miller had secreted on his person five dressed sealskins valued at $6,000, while the woman had over $1,000 in diamonds.

The Founder of the Children's Aid Society.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27.—Rev. Glen Wood, the well known Presbyterian clergyman, who was founder of the Children's Aid society and formerly western secretary and general representative of the American Tract society, died of neuralgia of the heart. He was 76 years old.

A Cold Week Coming.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 27.—A freezing degree below zero at every point from Helena, Mon., to La Crosse, Wis. The frigid wave struck this city last night, and the drop in the mercury has been 70 degrees in 18 hours.

A Blow at the National Game.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 27.—The Senate passed a bill to-day to license all games for amusin upon professional ball playing.

THE HOMESTEAD TRIAL

Some Damaging Testimony Introduced by the Prosecution.

EXPERIMENTS THAT KILLED A DOG.

Witness McKinnis Evidently a Surprise to the Defense—The Confessing Cooks Repeat Their Evidence Given at the Beginning of the Trial.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 27.—The commonwealth in the case of Robert P. Beatty, who is charged with administering poison to the notorious workmen at Homestead, sprung a sensation by producing a witness, Charles McKinnis, whose evidence was damaging in the extreme. McKinnis is a cook on the river. His evidence came in the nature of a surprise to counsel for the defense, but Prosecuting Attorney Burleigh called the name of Charles McKinnis the defendant, Robert P. Beatty, turned quickly in his chair. His face was flushed and his hands trembled. As McKinnis gave his testimony in a clear voice and practically sealed the fate of Beatty the latter did not for a moment remove his eye from the witness.

Perspiration trickled down his forehead, and he sat like one transfixed. It was plain that Beatty had not counted on the prosecution getting hold of McKinnis. The latter told how Beatty had approached him with a proposition to go to Homestead and dose the men with croton oil, and how situation declined to have anything to do with the scheme. An effort was made by Mr. Breenan to confuse McKinnis, but without success. The witness stuck to his story as to Beatty's action upon all in the courtroom, and the tipstaves experienced no little difficulty in maintaining order.

Prior to the calling of McKinnis the time had been consumed by Mr. Breenan, attorney for the defense, in his cross examination of Patrick Gallagher, the cook who confessed to having placed poison in the food.

The Poor Dog Killed a Dog.

Gallagher was asked whether he had any knowledge of the poison before he began administering the powders. He replied that he had not, but that Gilfoil had told him he knew. He had talked to Beatty as to the effect of the powders, and Beatty said to him:

"I gave it to a dog in a bowl of milk, and it foamed over."

"I said to him," continued Gallagher, "'What do you mean by foaled over?' He replied, 'Why, it killed him.'"

The cross examination of Gallagher continued for an hour. The latter clung to his original story, however, and the attempt of the defense to break down his evidence was not successful.

J. M. Davidson, who also confessed to administering the poison, was called after McKinnis, but his evidence did not materially differ from that given against Dempsey.

In his cross examination Davidson contradicted Gallagher in several instances. A number of witnesses then took the stand and testified to having been at Homestead during the strike.

G. A. Smith, an engineer at the Homestead mill, testified to seeing Beatty in the mill in August; saw him give Thomas Sheridan an envelope and a thick roll of money. Sheridan gave the envelope to a man named Gilfoil, who went to No. 8 cook house, and the money to Anthony Gilfoil, who worked in the same place. Witness saw Beatty again in the cook house, at which time he gave Gilfoil a bottle and an envelope. He had also seen Beatty, Gilfoil and Coleman on the train together.

Anglin to Confer.

PARIS, Jan. 27.—The Figaro states that M. Francqueville, the examining magistrate who has been charged with the inquiries as to the Panama scandal, The Arton stocks amounted to about 2,000,000 francs, and are said to have been distributed among the deputies and others. The statement that M. Barboux would deliver his peroration attracted a greater throng than ever to the street cases. Among the knights present were many public M. Barboux closed with an eloquent and touching appeal in behalf of Arton. Without a dissenting vote the committee of the French bar tendered unanimously congratulated him on his brilliant oratory. The court adjourned until Tuesday.

Knights of Labor Headquarters Unsold.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—Bids for the Knights of Labor headquarters building on Broad street, up for auction, although advised, reached no higher than $71,000, whereupon Secretary H. W. Wright and Brought Commissioner Chas. Ehrlich stopped the sale. "That figure is not enough," said Mr. Wright later to a reporter. "When we do sell the property we have settled to transfer the Knights' headquarters to Baltimore, Niagara Falls or Columbus. Should our officials reach no decision the general assembly of the order will settle the matter. We will not, however, as reported, transfer the headquarters to Canada."

A Better Trust.

ABUSED ITS SUBSIDY.

Charges Against the Pacific Mail Company.

EXPOSE OF A SECRET CONTRACT.

Paid by the United States to Develop American Maritime Commerce Between the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts Over Panama, but Really Working to Suppress It.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—The Evening Post says: It has been known for a long time that the subsidized Pacific Mail company has been practically directed in its operations by the Missouri Pacific and other railroads in the Transcontinental association, and the charge has been made that the company has worked in the interests of the railroads rather than to "develop American maritime commerce between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States over the Isthmus of Panama," as it is required to do by the terms on which it obtains its subsidy from the United States government, but the exact nature of the bond which has held the company to the railroad combination has been kept a secret.

That there was some sort of contract no one doubted, but the parties concerned have never given the public information on this point. The Evening Post has obtained a copy of the secret contract. It is a long document, signed by James Smith on behalf of the Transcontinental association and George J. Gould on behalf of the Pacific Mail company.

The terms of the contract show that the Pacific Mail company, while receiving a subsidy from the government to develop American maritime commerce, has bound itself to the Transcontinental association, to whose interest it is to suppress that commerce. The whole meaning of the contract is shown in section 8, which is here given in full:

A Flagrant Betrayal of Trust.

"The understanding and intention of this agreement is that the party of the first part, (the Transcontinental association) shall, through agents appointed by itself, have entire and exclusive control of all the through business of the said steamers of the company (Pacific Mail) between New York and San Francisco each way, and that no through freight or passengers shall be taken except as privy to be fixed by the party of the first part and by its consent, it being understood that said control shall be exercised through the established agencies of said steamship company.

"If the said steamship company shall have rooms or capacity for more than 300 tons in the event of its running two steamers each way per month, or for more than 400 tons in the event of its running three steamers per month each way of through freight or any steamer or steamers the party of the first part shall desire to fill it, the said party of the first part shall be at liberty to do so at rates fixed jointly by duly authorized representatives of the parties hereto, the party of the first part to have one-half of the freight on such excess and the steamship company the other half."

Bishop Brooks at Rest.

BOSTON, Jan. 27.—With the impressive funeral services of the Episcopal church, accompanied by evidences of public veneration such as have not been witnessed in this community before for a generation at least, the remains of the late Bishop Phillips Brooks were conducted to their last resting place in Mount Auburn cemetery.

The funeral service was read by Bishop Potter of New York, assisted by Bishop Williams of Connecticut and Clark of Rhode Island and the Rev. E. Winchester Donald, rector of Trinity church.

The bishop's body was borne out of the church at the close of the interior service it was placed on a draped catafalque in front of the west vestibule doors. Dr. Donald, rector of Trinity, took his place at the left, with the pallbearers grouped around. A hollow square had been roped off for the occasion, and within it was a solid row of policemen. Every head in space on the immense stage, the sidewalks and the surrounding streets was occupied by people representing every walk in life. Many found it impossible to get near the churches and took up positions on the steps of the art museum and in the doorways and windows of adjoining buildings. It was no crowd of curious idlers, but of sincere mourners.

The rector offered a short impressive prayer, closing with the Lord's Prayer, during which every head was bowed. It was a thrilling scene. Tears rolled down upon the cheeks of strong men, and the only sound besides the manner of hushed voices joining in the prayer was an occasional sob. At the close of the prayer the hymn, "O God, Our Help in Ages Past," was sung.

Buried In the Wrong Shirt.

MILLERSBURG, O., Jan. 27.—Owing to the superstition of the widow of Edward Woods, who was buried a few days ago, his body has been disinterred and reburied. The dead man was clothed in his son's shirt by mistake when the body was put in the coffin. The widow believed her son would follow his father into the grave unless the shirt was taken off. The change was accordingly made.

FAVORS THE READING COMBINE.

The First Judicial Decision Given the Company Every Point.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Jan. 27.—The first judicial decision in the Philadelphia and Reading consolidation case was rendered here by Judge Metzger of the Lycoming county court. The opinion of the court is a lengthy one, covering nearly all the great mass of testimony and dwelling at length in favor of the defendant companies. It will be remembered that Matthias Arnot of Elmira brought suit to test the legality of the combine, his case being entered in the courts here about a year ago. Hon. W. W. Hart was appointed master, and he took a large amount of testimony. The case was decided by him in favor of the defendants and the exceptions thereto were argued before Judge Metzger on Dec. 31. The decision rendered will be followed by an appeal to the supreme court.

President McLeod's Opinion.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—President McLeod, in speaking of the decision, said: "This is obviously a triumph for the city of Philadelphia and for the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company. It means millions of dollars annually to the commerce of this port, for greater extension of facility and for expanding production, further developments of her general business intercourse and higher prestige as a metropolis."

Bonding's Reported Profits.

Trouble For Users of Trolley.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Jan. 27.—Notices have been served on the Haverhill leading street railway companies in the country now operated by the overhead single trolley system to cease and desist infringement of patent rights. Sherman of Lowell, now dead, in 1876, which, it is asserted, covers every device for connecting the car with the overhead wire.

CORRESPONDENCE.

INTERESTING FACTS NOT GENERALLY KNOWN.

A Series of Washington Letters Giving Many Historical Events of the United States in a New and Interesting Manner.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 27, 1893.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Viewed from this distance from the scene of action, the present disturbances along the Rio Grande have begun to present a serious aspect, especially to those who recall the history of our southern boundary.

The Mexican government now confronts what may prove to be the most formidable attempt at revolution that has been made since that day in 1876 when Porfirio Diaz, disguised as a coal heaver, debarked at Vera Cruz from the New Orleans steamer to summon his revolutionary army and to fight for the presidency of the republic. From that year to this, he or his candidate has been president of Mexico; and both have been able until now to put down all uprisings against the government.

The Garza attempt at revolution last year, continued this year under new leaders, appears to be more than an outbreak of discontent, which in Mexico is liable to occur almost any time and almost anywhere. How much more it shall prove to be, we must look to the future to disclose.

A series of incidents running back in time to the birth year (1824) of the Mexican republic, and even to a prior date, gives to the appearance of this latest revolt along the Rio Grande an added seriousness.

In 1819, when, under James Monroe's presidency and under John Quincy Adams' secretaryship of State, we bought the Floridas from Spain for $5,000,000 and some other considerations, and established the confine between us and the then Spanish colony of Mexico, we could have made the Rio Grande, as it is called now, that confine from the Gulf of Mexico to the source of the river. Spain offered us more than we accepted in that treaty.

Much against the judgment of Thomas Jefferson, then retired to Monticello, we cut off and gave away a large slice of the Mississippi valley; and we ran the confine along the Sabine and the Red rivers to the upper Arkansas, the crest of the Rocky mountains and the 42d parallel.

The reason why we accepted less than Spain offered was, the fear felt by President Monroe and by his cabinet that the New England States would object to further territorial extension to the South and West, and that thereby the question of the territorial extension of slavery, then a subject discussed throughout the country, would hinder the proposed admission of Missouri, and threatening to end "the era of good feeling," would enter into the presidential campaign the following year to the detriment of President Monroe's candidacy for re-election and of Secretary Calhoun's and of Andrew Jackson's aspirations later.

When Mexico won her independence, in 1821-2, we established with her the same confine.

In 1836, Texas seceded from Mexico, and set up as a separate and independent republic. Nine years later, she was admitted as a State of the United States. Thereby we recovered the severed portion of the Mississippi valley, and laid claim to the territory made as part of our confine with Mexico.

For admitting Texas, and for insisting on the Rio Grande (instead of the Nueces river) for her southern boundary, we had to fight Mexico. As one result of that war, we got California and New Mexico. As another result, we got the upsetting of the Missouri compromise and the re-opening of the slavery extension question, by the admission, in 1850, of California as a free State; although its southern part extended away south of the Missouri compromise line of 36 degrees and 30 minutes, the southern boundary line of Missouri.

Very soon thereafter, the slave section of the United States began to turn covetous eyes southward, in the direction of a slave dominion stretching to the Isthmus of Panama, and taking in all the West Indies. Almost immediately also, began a series of attempts, I do not know at whose instigation, to realize that dream. I can refer here briefly to only two or three of the more prominent.

In 1850, Narciso Lopez, leader of a Cuban party whose declared aim was annexation to the United States, fitted out a filibustering expedition which made a landing in Cuba, but failed to maintain its foothold. Lopez fled to New Orleans, and there fitted out a larger and more formidable expedition which landed in Cuba and fought two or three battles, but ended even more disastrously than did its predecessor. Lopez and his chief lieutenant, Col. Crittenden, were captured, and, together with more than fifty of their men, were executed.

In 1853, President Polk's chief negotiations with Spain were for the purchase of Cuba. Ten years later, a proposition to give Spain $5,000,000 for Cuba was defeated in the U. S. Senate by an adverse vote.

In 1853, William Walker, a native of Nashville, Tenn., led a filibustering expedition from the United States against the Mexican State of Sonora, which adjoins our present territory of Arizona. He landed, proclaimed himself president of the Pacific Republic (of impacities, not on any histicose, criteia), but was defeated in battle and escaped back into the United States.

Two years later, he led an expedition against Nicaragua, captured that country, caused himself to be elected president, and annulled the then existing prohibition of slavery, making Nicaragua a sort of advanced outpost of the slave empire that was to be. In 1857, he was defeated and was driven out of the country.

The next year, he started from Mobile, Ala., against Nicaragua with another expedition, but was captured at the mouth of the Mississippi. He was tried in New Orleans for violation of our neutrality laws, but was acquitted; and in June, 1860, he sailed, at the head of still another expedition, from New Orleans against Honduras. He landed, was captured, tried and shot.

Let us go on from this point in another letter to-morrow. TIMO KANANDEL.

Horses Working on a Threshing Machine Burned to Death.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Referring to the recent fire at Liberty Corner, of which brief mention was made, I might add a little more of interest.

The Messrs. Siller, whose barn was burned, lost, besides the nine cows, harness, farm machinery, hay, feed and grain, the two horses on the threshing machine.

Just what started the fire is not known. They were threshing and had two horses on the tread-mill working it. All of a sudden flames burst out in the straw, and in an instant, it seemed, the threshing machine and the immense barn were in a blaze.

Determined, but unavailing, efforts were made to save the horses on the machine. The heat was so intense, the fire so furious, that the workmen had to flee for their lives. C. L.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Delaware is able to meet all her state debts and has more than $247,000 left over. Now let Delaware go in for good country roads and first class country school houses.

If Denmark feels hard toward Germany on account of Chancellor Caprivi's remarks about her, the plain thing to do will be for Denmark to cultivate an intimate friendship with Russia and France. Bismarck was famous for riding roughshod over people and nations when they could not help themselves, but he was scrupulously careful to keep on the friendliest terms with Russia and with nations that could fly to Russia for aid and comfort against Germany. Bismarck would have known better than to offend Denmark, because the father-in-law of Russia is not to be offended with impunity.

Not many men in the late war rose from volunteer private to major general, as Rutherford B. Hayes did. In politics, in the early part of his career, he was one of the most victorious of men. Three times in the contest for governor of Ohio he defeated the ablest Democrats in the party—first, Allen G. Thurman in 1867, next George H. Pendleton in 1869 and again William Allen in 1871. But he was never the same man after his presidential term. The incessant and bitter attacks on him, which continued from 1875 till his death, made so painful an impression on him that he retired from politics absolutely at the close of his term in 1881 and never afterward made a political speech. The death of his brilliant and accomplished wife some years ago was another blow from which he never recovered. Mrs. Hayes was his companion much of the time during his army campaigns. His death from neuralgia of the heart is such as might have come to a man who had suffered much from trouble of the mind.

Satolli, Apostolic Delegate.

The diplomatic corps at Washington is inclined to welcome Mgr. Satolli as an adopted brother, although he has no official relations with the United States government. His appointment as permanent apostolic delegate to the United States is the most important event in the history of the Roman Catholic church in this country in years. Mgr. Satolli will represent the pope in all matters of discipline and ecclesiastical law in America. In this Republican nation the American born and bred priests frequently had differences of opinion with the bishops, who were their superiors. These questions had to be sent to Rome for final adjustment by the pope.

There were so many that at length his holiness resolved to establish an ecclesiastical court of highest appeal here and have all differences settled on the ground. Being resident in the United States, the apostolic delegate could catch the spirit of American institutions and decide, as it would otherwise be impossible to do, what was the right thing. So that the American Catholic church will no longer be ruled from Rome. Mgr. Satolli will probably establish his headquarters at Washington.

It has been objected that he is a foreigner, and therefore cannot fully understand American questions. But he has shown himself thus far to be a man of great tact, as well as of quick and brilliant acumen. He is a man of great learning and experience. What Mgr. Satolli says goes, and will go.

Is Mormon Polygamy Dead?

It is hard to tell. President Harrison's amnesty proclamation, granting unconditional pardon and freedom from further legal prosecution to all Mormons who have lived monogamously since Nov. 1, 1890, and will continue to do so, implies that in the opinion of persons in high government quarters the many wived practice has been abandoned. In October, 1890, the sixty-first semiannual conference of the Latter Day Saints issued a manifesto to all Mormons prohibiting any member hereafter to enter into the plural marriage relation. They did this on the recommendation of Wilford Woodruff, president of the church. In September of 1890 Woodruff declared that Mormon preachers were no longer teaching that disobedience to the marriage laws of the United States was obedience to God. Woodruff recommended the abandonment of polygamy on the ground of its conflicting with the laws of the United States, and not from any change of heart. Leading Mormons have said in the most sincere and solemn manner that polygamy has been abandoned forever.

Nevertheless, if this be true, why mean the swarms of foreign steerage passenger women who still, up to the time of the closing of Castle Garden, continued to enter our ports from Europe, always under the wing of cunning faced, sharp eyed old Mormon elders, who watched them like a hawk lest any of them got away? The Wyoming, the ship that was detained so long at quarantine in New York bay last November, brought seventy-six Mormon converts—eleven men and sixty-five women. In addition to this the alleged old Mormon rascals who had the party in tow mingled freely with the steerage passengers in general and tried to persuade other women to join the Utah contingent and go off with them. Polygamy may be abandoned, as the Mormons say, but all the same these little facts have a queer look.

DEATH OF MR. BLAINE.

A Nation Does Honor to Her Distinguished Son.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION.

The Doctors' Account of the Ex-Secretary's Last Illness—A Private Funeral and Burial at Washington the Wish of Mrs. Blaine—Congress Adjourns.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Mr. Blaine's death at the last came painlessly and quietly, but not without premonition. The attending physicians have said repeatedly in these later days, since hope of recovery was abandoned, that when the end came it would probably occur with at least two or three hours' warning. This one announcement at least among many perplexing and contradictory statements has been verified by facts.

The physician of death was made evident to the family fully two hours before its actual occurrence. It was between 8 and 9 o'clock when the first dangerous symptoms were observed. The family had taken breakfast, and the trained nurse, Mrs. Price, had gone down for her breakfast also, leaving the patient temporarily alone. James G. Blaine, Jr., had put on his hat and coat preparatory to starting off for his day's duties in the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad company, where he is employed, when his mother suggested to him that it would be better to wait till the nurse came up. He promptly acquiesced. Mr. Blaine had passed a restless night and had been pronounced "not so well" even by his partisan physician. But beyond a perceptible increase of the languor which had marked his condition during the past few days there was no very alarming change to be noted. When the nurse returned from her breakfast, however, her experienced eyes at once saw that the end was drawing near.

The physicians were immediately telephoned for and arrived within a few minutes of each other. The powerful heart stimulant (strychnia) which had several times before brought the patient back out of the dark valley of death was powerless now.

Dr. Hyatt at 9:20 came out and said to the group of waiting newspaper men that he feared the end was at hand.

The Family at the Bedside.

In the meantime all the family had been summoned into the death chamber—Mrs. Blaine, the devoted wife; Miss Hattie Blaine, his unmarried daughter; Mrs. Damrosch, his married daughter; James G. Blaine, Jr., his only surviving son, and Miss Dodge (Gail Hamilton), his cousin.

In silent, tearful sorrow they witnessed the closing scenes. The patient lay so quietly that even the doctors were hardly able to say when he died. No word of consciousness, no look of recognition had passed. At 10:45 he lay so still that the window shades were raised to give more light to enable the physicians to determine if life still lingered. Fifteen minutes later he was proclaimed dead. The news was instantly flashed all over the world.

Young Mr. Blaine was in the act of writing a note to President Harrison to inform him of the event when the president himself arrived, accompanied by his private secretary and Secretary of State Foster. All the rest of the cabinet quickly followed, and the excitement throughout the city became general as the news spread.

Both houses of congress adjourned, and the former associates of the ex-senator and ex-speaker of both political parties united in eloquent tributes to his memory.

A public funeral was suggested, but the wishes of the family prevailed, and the ceremonies will be of a private nature. They will be held at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, where Mr. Blaine was a pew holder, on Monday morning.

Dr. Hamlin, who officiated at the funeral of Mrs. Harrison and her father, will conduct the services.

The physicians have officially made public the cause of death as Bright's disease, aggravated by tubercular disease of the lungs and followed by heart failure.

The President's Proclamation.

After the president returned to the executive mansion he prepared and issued his ex-secretary of state he issued the following proclamation:

It is my painful duty to announce to the people of the United States the death of James Gillespie Blaine, which occurred in this city Friday at 11 o'clock a. m.

For a full generation this eminent citizen has occupied a conspicuous and influential position in the nation. His first public service was in the legislature of his state. Afterward for 14 years he was a member of the national house of representatives and was three times chosen its speaker. In 1876 he was elected to the senate. He resigned his seat in that body in 1881 to accept the position of secretary of state in the cabinet of President Garfield. After the tragic death of his chief he resigned from the cabinet and devoted himself to literary work and gave to the public in his "Twenty Years of Congress" a most valuable and enduring contribution to our political literature.

In March, 1889, he again became secretary of state and continued to exercise the office until June, 1892. His devotion to the public interests, his marked ability and his exalted patriotism have won for him the gratitude and affection of his countrymen and the admiration of the world. In the varied pursuits of legislation, diplomacy and literature his genius has added new luster to American citizenship.

As a suitable expression of the national appreciation of his great public services and of the general sorrow caused by his death, I direct that on the day of his funeral all the departments of the executive branch of the government at Washington be closed, and that on all public buildings throughout the United States the national flag shall be displayed at half staff, and that for a period of 30 days the department of state be draped in mourning.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

To Be Buried at Washington.

Mr. Blaine's death occurred in the front room of the southwest corner of the third floor, where the patient had been uninterruptedly confined since the beginning of his fatal illness.

Interment will occur in Oak Hill cemetery, a beautiful resting place of the dead, situated on the slopes of Rock creek's bank in Georgetown. Although Mr. Blaine's fame and fame are inseparably connected with the state of Maine, but one of his family lies under its soil. His eldest son and daughter, Walker Blaine and Mrs. Coppinger, are interred in Oak Hill in a lot that the dead man himself selected and purchased many years ago.

When the body of Walker Blaine lay in the house awaiting interment Mr. Blaine, accompanied by a friend, walked over to Oak Hill and selected the lot in which his well beloved son was placed and which soon afterward received the body of Mrs. Coppinger. It lies in the eastern part of the cemetery, half way down the terrace on the western bank of the creek. The view from the plot is to the northeast, and within its range is Rawlins circle and Kalorama heights, the home of John Howard Payne, in one of the most attractive portions of Washington. No stone yet marks the graves of the children of the deceased ex-secretary.

The body of Emmons Blaine lies in one of the Chicago cemeteries, so that aside from the national character of the deceased, which makes the national capital the most fitting resting place for his remains, it more than any other can be called the family burying place.

The Doctors' Statement.

The beginning of Mr. Blaine's illness dates back some years. The earliest signs of ill health were manifested with and no doubt due to a gouty tendency which manifested itself in subacute attacks of gout, disturbances of digestion and progressive insomnium and anaemia. During the summer of 1892 the evidences of failing health were more decided, and on November after his return to Washington his symptoms again assumed an aggravated form. From this time, although there were periods of apparent improvement, he continued to grow worse from week to week. Toward the end of December the heart began to show signs of unusual weakness from cardiac degeneration and dilation, and on January 1 he had a severe attack of heart exhaustion. From this he rallied, but others of the same nature occurred on several occasions.

From the middle of January these attacks ceased, and the action of the heart was more uniformly good. There was, however, a daily loss of flesh and strength. On the day before Mr. Blaine's death there was no marked change in his condition. Each day he seemed somewhat more feeble than on the day before, and on the night before his death he did not seem to be in any immediate danger. Toward the morning of the 27th inst. his pulse was observed to be very feeble and his breathing more embarrassed. As a result of the failing heart action oedema of the lungs occurred, and he died without much suffering at 11 o'clock.

During the whole of Mr. Blaine's illness the digestion was well performed, and liquid food (chiefly milk) was taken in full quantities. His mind was generally clear, except when clouded by uraemia and disturbed brain circulation, and although unable to express himself in words, he recognized all the members of his family up to within a few moments of his death.

The statement of the physicians will not be supplemented (if any exception upon the body of Mr. Blaine, the members of the family being thoroughly satisfied as to the cause of death. The body will not be embalmed for burial, the family objecting to any disturbance of it.

The Cabinet Meeting.

It was the regular day for the meeting of the cabinet, and the members began to arrive shortly after the death of Mr. Blaine had been communicated to the president. Upon being informed of the fact they repaired to the house and left their messages of sympathy for Mrs. Blaine and the family. The cabinet assembled at 12:30 and remained in session only a few minutes, during which time a proclamation announcing the event was agreed upon and issued.

President Harrison said that the news of Mr. Blaine's death had made a profound impression upon him. While recognizing the fact from the statements of the physicians and members of the family that the ultimate recovery in Mr. Blaine's case was improbable, he was still wholly unprepared for it at this time; and the announcement had been a great shock to him. He felt unable under the circumstances to enter upon the consideration of any public business with the members of his cabinet, most of whom had been associated with Mr. Blaine in the official family relations, and therefore after the expression of regret and sorrow at the loss sustained by themselves and the country in Mr. Blaine's death the meeting of the cabinet was adjourned.

A Simple Funeral.

Mr. Blaine had a great repugnance to public exhibition of sorrow, and in accordance with his often expressed opinion Mrs. Blaine is determined to have a private funeral. It is understood further that no official notice be taken of Mr. Blaine's death, which request was communicated to Secretary of State Foster in a note from Miss Hattie Blaine conveying the information of the sad event.

The secretary, in conversation with Mrs. Blaine, pointed out that the custom of announcing the death of ex-members of the cabinet would require official promulgation of the fact, but at Mrs. Blaine's earnest solicitation it was finally arranged that no emblem of mourning additional to that displayed at the state department consequent upon the death of ex President Hayes should be placed on the state department building, and that those mourning signs should be removed at the expiration of 30 days, during which time they will be displayed in accordance with the president's proclamation because of the death of Mr. Hayes.

The funeral will take place Monday next, and the details of the service so far as arranged are as follows:

At 11 o'clock prayer will be offered by Rev. Tennis S. Hamlin, D. D., at the house. Only members of the family and their intimate friends will be present.

Immediately preceding the body will be borne to the Church of the Covenant. Here also the services will be of the simplest character, consisting of the reading of the Presbyterian burial ritual and prayer by Dr. Hamlin.

There will be no music save that of the organ, which will be played by Mr. Walter Damrosch, the dead man's son-in-law.

Seats in the church will be reserved for the president, vice president, members of the cabinet and their families, members of the diplomatic corps and the friends of the deceased.

These reservations will nearly exhaust the seating accommodations of the building. From the church the cortege will move to Oak Hill cemetery, where the interment will take place.

There will be twelve pallbearers selected from among Mr. Blaine's personal and official friends. None will be chosen because of their position, but naturally the largest number will be from the ranks of official life.

The arrangements for the funeral have been committed to Senator Harrison and Baron Fava, dean of the diplomatic corps.

Telegrams of Condolence.

The messages of condolence and sympathy received by the family were very numerous, and from men of both political parties and from all parts of the world. Among the number were the following:

Grover Cleveland—His brilliant statesmanship will always be an inspiration to the nation he has served so long and so well. Permit me to extend my sympathy on the death of your distinguished husband.

Robert T. Lincoln, Minister to Great Britain—We lose a staunch friend and deeply sympathize with you and your children in your great affliction.

William McKinley, Jr., Governor of Ohio—Please receive our sincere sympathy in the death of your noble husband. The people of Ohio share in your great sorrow and mourn the death of an illustrious statesman.

Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania—You have my heartfelt sympathy. The people of his native state were greatly devoted to him while living and mourn with you his death.

Roswell P. Flower, Governor of New York—My great respect and admiration for your late husband prompts me to send this word of sympathy in your bereavement. The country will mourn his loss as that of a brilliant statesman and true friend.

James S. Clarke—We send you loving sympathy from the sorrowing hearts of a household in which love of Mr. Blaine has long been a sweet and sacred thing.

Hon. B. H. Bristow—The death of Mr. Blaine is a national loss that will be recognized and deplored by all Americans regardless of political differences.

Vice President Stevenson—It shall ever retain most kindly memories of this great statesman, and his family have my profound sympathy in this, their hour of deepest sorrow.

Mr. Blaine's Survivors in Congress.

The ravages of time or the vicissitudes of political life are strongly accentuated by the fact that of the 356 composed of 332 members today, there are but 12 members who served in the house with Mr. Blaine in the 44th or prior congresses. These are Holman, O'Neil of Pennsylvania, Harmer, Hooker, Blount, Burrows, Springer, Forney, Culberson, Bland, Henderson of Illinois and Reed.

Ever since the Sunday night, almost six weeks ago, when it was noised about the city that Mr. Blaine was dying, public inquiries have been made at the big red brick house on Madison place. For weeks the newspapers of the country have had representatives lounged within a stone's thrower of the house.

Press Opinions.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The following are some of the editorial opinions expressed upon the death of the ex-secretary:

The Tribune: The greatest statesman of united times is dead. With him the historic dead of a grateful republic. Mr. Blaine was loved, trusted and followed because in feeling, conviction and instinct he was known to be an American among Americans.

The Sun: In the history of the republic there is no other statesman who ever gained and kept so strong a hold upon the affections of the people. All in all, who is there among the political characters of the last 25 years of whom it can be said more truly than of Blaine that he was a great man?

The World: Mr. Blaine's death removes from the scene of his triumphs, his trials, his hopes and his disappointments one of the most brilliant and interesting figures in American history. Mr. Blaine was wanting in some of the higher attributes of leadership. He compelled admiration, but he did not inspire confidence.

The Times: It would be a grave injustice to treat Mr. Blaine purely as a politician, or to deny that he possessed both some of the gifts and some of the aspirations of the statesman.

The Herald: History will vindicate his right to most honorable distinction, for it would be impossible to recite the events which threw this nation into chaos in the earlier sixties or to name a man who molded public opinion during the five years when the country multiplied its superhuman courage and rebuilt the Union on the graves of a million heroes, or to review the slow processes which, like a hot fire, welded the discordant parts into a harmonious whole, without referring to James G. Blaine as one of the foremost in the group of giants whose work is recorded in that strange chapter of our history.

Advertiser: No eulogy can exalt his patriotism, brighten his fame, make more appeared the purest love he held in the hearts of his countrymen, add to the number of those who mourn his loss in a nation where all are mourners, nor lessen the sincere grief which is thus brought to millions of hearts.

Mail and Express: For 36 years he was the idol son of Maine, a man of splendid ambitions, whose proudest hopes turned to ashes, but who loved and served his country.

Evening Post: It is thus chiefly as a melancholy warning that the name of James G. Blaine goes down to history.

New Orleans Picayune: With the death of Blaine falls the foremost man and the latest figure of the Republican party. If any man of his political faith and in his day could claim to be a statesman, it was he who has just quitted his mortal career.

Charleston Journal: Among the modern leaders of American party politics, James G. Blaine stood easily first. Peace to the ashes of the noble patriot. All honor to the name of a great American. At last the Plumed Knight has joined the knightly throngs whom the ages have assembled on the shores of time.

Atlanta Constitution: The people, regardless of party, instinctively knew that at his best Mr. Blaine was a representative American, a man ardently in love with his whole country and its institutions.

His British Enemies.

LONDON, Jan. 28.—All the morning dailies comment editorially upon Mr. Blaine's death. The Daily Chronicle: He typified the period in which he lived, and the best we can hope for his country and the world is that the class to which he belonged, whether intellectual and interesting like himself or sordid and despicable like most of its members, may soon pass from actuality into history.

The Daily Telegraph: It is probable that his strades against England had as motive the desire to win Irish votes, but in his character and policy there was so much sincere patriotism that it is difficult to estimate his qualities and idiosyncrasies aright.

The Times: It was on the moral side that he most conspicuously failed. If he had been more gifted with prosperous instincts and capable of wider political aims, he would have had more chance of permanent success.

The Daily News: The splendid fabric of his life could only be crowned by the presidency, and he probably would have made any sacrifice or vital energy to obtain it if there had been left to him but a single day to enjoy his triumph.

OSHAWA, Ont., Jan. 28.—Jake Gaudaur has issued a challenge to row John Teemer for the championship of America and $1,000 a side, the race to be shell, at Pullman, Ills., or on any fair course in America, the race to be rowed on May 30.

Prohibition Sought in New Hampshire.

EXETER, Jan. 28.—Ex-Governor D. H. Goodell and others have drafted a bill for the prohibition of the manufacture of intoxicating beverages in this state, which will soon be presented to the legislature.

Put Up His Own Bail.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Colonel William B. Hayes, ex-sheriff, was held under $10,000 bonds on a charge of perjury, deposited $10,000 cash with the city chamberlain.

Great mental agony is endured by parents who see their children suffering from diseases caused by impure blood, and for which there seems no cure. MENDHAM, N. J., Jan. 28.—General Abner Doubleday died at his home near Morristown from Bright's disease. He had been very feeble for more than two years, but death came suddenly. He leaves a widow.

General Doubleday's record as a soldier was a splendid one. He served with distinction in the Mexican war and the rebellion. He aimed the first gun fired in the war from Fort Sumter. At Gettysburg he had command of the field on the third day of the battle, after General Reynolds' death, until General Hancock arrived to relieve him. He was appointed brigadier general of volunteers Feb. 3, 1862. He took six flags at Antietam after hard fighting and also engaged in the battles of Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. In 1865 he was made brigadier and major general in the regular army.

Since the War.

After the war he was stationed in the west. While at San Francisco he drafted and secured the first charter for a cable railroad in this country. He was retired from active service in 1873.

General Doubleday was born at Ballston Spa, N. Y., June 26, 1819. He was graduated from West Point and was first assigned to the Third artillery, where he early developed his genius for the art of war.

His father, Ulysses F. Doubleday, who in his later years was well known as a bookseller in John street, New York, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and his grandfather fought at Bunker Hill and Stony Point and was imprisoned during the revolution in the "torture ship Jersey at the Brooklyn navy yard.

Italian Bank Troubles.

ROME, Jan. 28.—Signor A. Monzilli, director of the bureau of industry and commerce, has been arrested for complicity in the bank frauds. Summonses have been issued by the examining magistrate for 30 men implicated in the scandal. In the chamber of deputies Signor Colajanni made a violent attack upon the government. He reminded the deputies that he had directed attention to the scandalous practices of the banks. This was in 1889, when Signor Giolitti was minister of finance. Signor Colajanni then adduced evidence that the bank had been used for political purposes. He knew, he said, that the government had drawn on the National bank for funds with which to pay election expenses. He said, also, that the scandal was cropping out, had tried to direct the resentment of the public against the Banca Romana in order to shield the National bank.

Charges Against Bishop Wigger.

BAYONNE, N. J., Jan. 28.—Father Thomas H. Killeen, pastor of St. Mary's church, who brings against Bishop Wigger of Newark the charge of having done all in his power to foster Cahenalyism in the diocese of Newark, declares that he has acted entirely upon his own authority. Father Killeen said: "The whole trouble arose in January, 1892, when Bishop Wigger completely abolished the little church of St. Stephen in Bayonne, which I had built after much labor to facilitate the means of worship of parishioners. Bishop Wigger took the keys of the church away from me under protest, and compelled about 600 of my English speaking congregation to attend St. Henry's church, over which the bishop had placed a German priest.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Jan. 28.—The strike situation at the Brooks works is unchanged. There is no disposition among the strikers to be riotous in any way. They are quiet and orderly, but are determined to hold their own, believing that their demands are just. PANAMA AFFAIRS.

Charges Formally Made by M. Franquevilles, Magistrate.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—M. Franquevilles, the examining magistrate, has found a true bill of accusation on charges of corruption in connection with the Panama Canal company against Ferdinand de Lesseps, Senator Albert Grevy, brother of the late president of the republic; ex-Minister Charles Baihaut, ex-Deputy Gobron, ex-Deputy Sans-Leroy, M. Blondin, Charles de Lesseps, Henry Cotte, Marius Fontane, ex-Minister Rouvier, Senator Beral, Senator Dreyfus, Senator Hemard, Deputy Dogue de la Fauconnerie and Deputy Antonin Proust.

In order to prevent any general revival of the recent insinuations and mud throwing, the government is trying to keep the matter as quiet as possible. Should the chamber of indictments not confirm the true bills, M. Bourgeois will propose that M. Franqueville's report be considered conjointly by the chamber of indictments and the chamber of correctional appeals, whose decision would be regarded as invested with exceptional authority.

Magistrate Franquevilla absolves from accusation Deputy and ex-Minister Jules Roche, Senator Thevenet and Deputy Emanuel Arene on the ground that there is no evidence warranting their prosecution.

A FORGERY FOR $80,000

Poorly Conducted Negotiations Fail to Secure the Booty.

CERTIFIED BY A BANK CASHIER.

A Clerk of the Royal Fire Insurance Company Tries to Get Away by the Inexperience of a Youthful Accomplice, Who Attempts to Secure Cash at a Hotel Clerk.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—The true name of the clerk of the Royal Fire Insurance company who forged a check for $80,000 on the Merchants' National bank is George M. Nesbett.

The youth who attempted to cash the check at the Kenmore hotel, Albany, is Doris P. Sturgis, son of Appleton Sturgis, insurance broker, who lives at 90 East Tenth street.

Nesbett is 26 years of age and unmarried. In appearance the young man would hardly strike one as capable of a nerve so colossal as to attempt to procure $80,000 in such a manner, but his confession in writing sets at rest all doubt in the matter.

The Forged Check.

Nesbett has been for some years a clerk in the employ of the Royal Insurance company. The check was drawn to the order of James Woodward and was presented at the Merchants' National bank, 30 Wall street, by a young man who wanted it cashed. Assistant Cashier Baldwin declined to cash the check, as he did not know the youth, but as it was drawn on a regular check blank of the company and was accompanied by a note from one of its officers, Mr. Baldwin gave it to the paying teller to certify.

Trying to Negotiate It.

The next appearance of the check was at Albany, whither the accomplice of the young forger went, hoping there to turn it into money. He presented it to the clerk of the Kenmore hotel and asked for a deposit on it. The clerk, with commendable cautious caution on the part of the hotel clerk, and a messenger was sent to the office of the Royal Insurance company in Albany to make inquiries.

Meantime the youth took alarm, and taking the check with him departed. He was next seen in the courts of New York, where, with his father, Appleton Sturgis, he gave himself up.

Mr. Sturgis is greatly distressed over his son's arrest. He said that the young man knew absolutely nothing of business affairs and was merely the tool of Nesbett. "Why," said he, "for a boy to negotiate a check for $80,000 was a monumental instance of sublime stupidity."

Sturgis is 18 years of age, tall and slender, with dark hair and eyes.

Nesbett, in his confession, says it was agreed that he and Sturgis were to divide the proceeds should the latter succeed in cashing the check at the bank.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

PLAYING CARDS.

A Brief Story, Historical and Otherwise, Dating Back to the Thirteenth Century.

The invention of playing cards has been variously attributed to India, China, Arabia and Egypt. There seems to be but little doubt that they originated in Asia and were introduced into Europe by the Saracens about the close of the Thirteenth century. Thomas says in his dictionary of fugitive facts that there is historical mention of the game of cards in Germany in 1275, in Italy in 1350, but not in France un till 1393. An active trade in cards sprung up in Germany as early as the Fifteenth century, where they were manufactured for other portions of Europe. One hundred years later we find the manufacture of cards a flourishing business in England, and under Edward IV their importation was forbidden, thus protecting the home industry. Owing to their supposed immoral influences they were at times prohibited by various European governments.

The marks upon the suits of cards are believed to have been chosen to represent symbolically the different classes of society. Thus, the latter stood for the clergy, clubs for the soldiery, spades for the serfs and diamonds for the merchants. In the early French cards the kings were pictures of David, Alexander, Cæsar and Charlemagne, representing the monarchs of the Jews, Greeks, Romans and French, the queens were Argine, Esther, Judith and Pallas. The number of the cards, five and the Knave, were probably based on similar ideas. The suits on the earliest German cards were designated by hearts, bells, leaves and acorns. Italian cards had swords, batons, cups and money. The court cards at first were the king, chevalier and knave.

The queen was first introduced for the chevalier by the Italians. The English cards in the Seventeenth century were embla zoned with heraldic designs, the king of clubs bearing the coat of arms of the pope of Rome, and those of hearts, diamonds and spades being adorned respectively with the armorial devices of the kings of England, Spain and France. The club of modern cards derived its form from the trefoil, a French design. A pack of Hindoo cast cards in the possession of the Royal Antiquarian society of England is supposed to be fully 1,000 years old. It consists of eight suits of divers colors. The kings are mounted on elephants; the viziers, or second officers, upon horses, tigers and bulls, and some of the common cards have such curious marks as a pineapple in a shallow cup, and a something like a parasol without a handle and with two broken ribs sticking through the top.

Why the Woman Faints.

Walter Besant thinks that the reason why men have never, even in the most unreformed times, fainted so readily as women is that they are slower of imagination. Disaster falls upon a family. Instantly the wife and the daughters are endowed clearly what it means—in a moment of time they see the whole change—the train of miseries that the disaster will bring, the change to poverty, the loss of luxuries, social consideration, friends, dignity, self respect, all. Amelia found her husband in the spunging house; she saw at once all that it might mean for herself and her children, and she swooned away. The man, slower of perception, takes Swelling Words.

William Wirt when a young man wrote a piece in which the most eminent lawyers of Virginia are introduced and their peculiarities humorously exaggerated. Among them was one who had been minister to England and was remarkable for using swelling words.

He is represented as conducting a cause in the county court, and in asking the clerk to call some one into court, thus addresses him:

"Mr. Jones, have the benignity to vociferate Peter Jolley into court."

The clerk called out, "Vociferate P. Jolley! Come into court!"

While examining a loquacious female witness the lawyer loses his patience and exclaims:

"This old woman ought to be deposited into instrumnity!"

"You may go to Tue Eternity yourself, but I reckon you'll have none of my company," retorted the angry woman.—Youth's Companion.

Between Two Dangers.

Freddie Gray and his Aunt Helen, who was visiting the Grays at their summer home, were one day crossing a pasture together. When they were half way across, the lady noticed two cows at rest paused doubtfully.

"I don't know about going past those cows, Freddie," she said.

Freddie tightened his hold on her hand encouragingly.

"Don't be afraid of them, Aunt Helen," he said. "They won't hurt us. The first time I came down here I was afraid of them. I didn't dare to go behind them, and I didn't dare to go in front of them. And I didn't want to climb a fence and never go through the pasture at all. So I thought of a way to get by," and she three-year-old sage looked brightly up into Aunt Helen's face, "I just crawled under them."—Youth's Companion.

in the truth more gradually; often he never takes it in at all, because, being a man, he looks forward to the impossible and thinks he can succeed twice. Only one disaster can be met twice manfully, and that is when his doctor tells him he must die. Then—as physicians have told—he swoons away; he falls down in sections at the doctor's feet. Yet you may tell even a young and happy woman that she must die, and she will not faint. Amelia in the age of swoons would not have failed at rendering this intelligent guess. Why?

Rubens as a Child.

From a child almost Rubens was an artist. There are some interesting records of his schooldays at the Jesuits' college at Cleves, where it is said he acquired the art of illuminating missals. At the Japanese gallery in New Bond street there are eight of these missal illustrations. They are signed and are of beautiful finish. There is not a touch in them that recalls the dashing Rubens, but there is that sense of color—a mixture of bright scarlets and rich blues—that became a keynote with him later. The stories told in these little paintings no bigger than the palm of your hand are: The visit of the wise men, the presentation in the temple, the circumcision, the flight into Egypt, the meeting of Martha and Mary, and the assumption.

To Freeze Out.

"To freeze out" is popularly supposed to be American slang, meaning to put out or drive away by a cold reserve. It is of frequent use in the sense of to exclude through the game of freeze out poker. This slang, however, is by no means confined to Americans, in witness whereof I quote a verse from an English song entitled "The Old Fashioned Bear:"

I called on Jane and Mary Bung.
I thought I was bound to blaze,
But the very first call they froze me out
With their new converted ways.

Horticultural Curiosities.

That remarkable curiosity, the dwarf palm tree of Japan, is represented on the World's fair by a specimen of the estimated age of 100 years. Another unique exhibit is a traveler's tree from Madagascar, so called because it supplies water to thirsty travelers. Still another curiosity consists of two Australian ferns grown together throughout two feet of the lower part of the trunk and then separating into two distinct trees of different species.

Halcyon Days.

What are the halcyon days? They are the seven days before and the seven days after the shortest day. The halcyon, or kingfisher, is supposed to be breeding at this time, for which reason the sea, for this fortnight, very considerately preserves a perfect calm. It is a curious belief. Lucian makes Socrates speak of this halcyon being stowed upon the halcyon by the gods. The Greeks called this fortnight the time of wind hiding.

Pitch, Tar and Turpentine.

Pitch is the substance obtained by boiling tar in an open pot or in a still until the volatile and liquid portion is driven off. Tar is obtained from pine wood by the process of charring. Turpentine is an oily resinous substance flowing from the pine and other coniferous trees.

Lovers of Burns will be interested to know that the famous Tam O'Shanter inn at Ayr was recently sold by public auction for over $15,000. The property originally belonged to the Weavers' incorporation.

CURIOUS FOLKS

SHADOW PICTURES.

The Fascinating Art of Producing Figures on the Wall.

There are probably few of our young readers who have not amused themselves or been amused by the production of the familiar "rabbit on the wall." Fewer still, however, have any idea of the variety of figures that can be produced by the same simple means—the use of the hands with only the additional requirements of a good light and a proper screen. The first may be obtained by the use of an ordinary lamp, preferably with a duplex burner, but with not too large a wick, the smaller the actual flame the clearer being the definition of the figures.

By the way of screen, the simplest plan is to project the figures, nursery fashion, on a patch of white wall, but it is far better to construct a proper screen, which may be done as follows: Take a large sheet of stiff millboard and cut out of its center a portion fifteen inches square. Then paste over the millboard a tightly stretched piece of stout cambric, or, still better, clear white printing paper. This will serve in the center a translucent square, the margin round being opaque and serving as a sort of framework, under cover of which you can place your hands in shape or make any other needful preparations. If you propose to indulge in elaborate artistic effects (such as a lawyer arguing a case, a preacher in his pulpit, a dancer on the tight rope, etc.), you may add behind the lower part of the screen a little shelf to receive the specially shaped bits of wood or cardboard to be held between the fingers as additional appliances that will be necessary.

The screen thus formed may either be suspended from above or propped up in any way most convenient upon a table. At a little distance behind, preferably upon a separate table, your lamp will be placed. The proper distance between lamp and screen, so as to throw shadows of the precise size desired, must be ascertained by experiment beforehand.

THE GENTLEMAN WITH ANOTHER ASPECT.

This done, you may proceed to exhibit your shadows. It is hardly necessary to remark that a good deal of practice will be needful before they can be produced with ease and certainty.

Suppose, for example, that you hold your hands as shown in the first diagram, and you have a gentleman of uncertain nationality, whom you may introduce as a negro or a Chinaman at pleasure. Throw out the thumb of one hand and the forefinger of the other, and you have not only altered his whole expression, but provided him with a broad brimmed hat in addition.

Whipping an Elephant.

It seems a strange thing to whip an elephant, and the reasons why it is done, and the following story from the notes of an old soldier in India shows that it is quite a very severe punishment:

While the party was in camp a mahout went with his elephant to cut forage. The mahout punished the beast for disobedience by a blow on the skins, which so enraged the elephant that he seized the man with his trunk, dashed him to the ground and trampled him to death.

No second had he killed his keeper than he repented, removed and bolted for the jungle to hide himself. Six other elephants, guided by their mahouts, followed him. On being driven into camp he manifested and was led into camp a prisoner, and chains were placed on his legs.

Then came his punishment. An elephant was placed on either side, each holding a heavy iron chain. As the dead body of the mahout was laid on the grass before him the elephant roared loudly, being perfectly aware of what was to follow.

A mahout ordered the two elephants to punish the murderer. Lifting the heavy chains high in the air with their trunks, they whipped him with them ten times, until he made the camp echo with his roars of pain. He was then picketed by himself and as few chain attached to his hind leg, which he dragged after him on the march.

A Mother Bird's Care for Her Babies.

A pretty story is told of a canebrake by a gentleman who last summer said a hanging bird build near his room for they nest where she reared a family. One day, when there was a shower of rain coming up, just as the first drops fell the mother came fluttering home, seized a large leaf which grew on the tree near her nest, drew it over the nest in a way that completely covered it, then went back to whatever work she had been about when the coming storm disturbed her. The gentleman took from the window wondered why the leaf did not blow away and finally reached out and examined it. They found it hooked to a tiny stick that held it just below the nest, as if it had been built in for that purpose. The storm lasted but a few minutes, and after it was over home came the mother; unhooked the green curtain she had so carefully put up and found her babies perfectly dry.

The Lost Doll.

I once had a little doll, dears,
The prettiest doll in the world.
Her cheeks were so red and so white, dears,
And her hair was in curls nicely curled.

But I lost my pretty little doll, dears,
As I played in the heath one day,
And I cried for more than a week, dears,
But I never could find where she lay.

I found my poor little doll, dears,
As I played in the heath one day,
Folks say she is terribly changed, dears,
For her paint is all washed away.

And her arms trodden off by the oxen, dears,
And her hair and her dress torn and gray,
Yet for old sake's sake she is still, dears,
The prettiest doll in the world.

AN ARTISTIC GOWN.

It Can Be Made at Home for Eighteen Dollars or Thereabouts.

This artistic gown, while it is not materially new or distinct from the many prevailing styles of the Figaro jacket combinations, is still sufficiently artistic to recommend itself to the taste and skill of the home woman who has the courage to construct her own gowns.

CAN BE MADE AT HOME.

Brown and red will be found to be an artistic combination. The red should be in silk or in crape and form the sleeves and vest, and the brown in wool goods for the skirt and jacket. In shades of brown and tan it would also blend handsomely. The frogs and passementerie with which the jacket and skirt are trimmed should be bridesmaid braid work or a combination of either gold or silver, with the silk groundwork of the trimming. The counters of many of the large stores contain bargains in this line at this season. A very pretty trimming may be designed in braiding with fancy braids. In this case the best way is to work the garment into shape and then have it stamped. In this way the design on the skirt and also the back of the jacket may be inexpensively carried out. This work is something to be done at leisure times, and not under the supervision of the dressmaker employed.

To make this gown the following expenses are in order:

Four yards wool goods at $1.25	$5 00
Three yards of silk at $1	3 00
Findings, etc.	1 00
Braid, etc.	2 00
Dressmaker, three days, at $2	6 00
Total	$17 00

Pretty House Decoration.

Every woman craves a window seat, but unfortunately for many of us the construction of our homes does not allow for this charming resting place. The arrangement shown in the cut, however, is so devised as to be attached to a window of any sort, and can be put together quite readily by any one skilled in the use of hammer and nails.

First purchase a sunscreen length or fretwork to extend from the floor to the top of the casing at each side and between the two at the bottom, save the

A WINDOW SEAT.

New York Recorder. Then with it make a deep frame that will set close against the casing and so form the recess necessary for the seat.

With strong, smooth boards fit in the box and upholster it with hair, after which cover it neatly with whatever material you may prefer and pile up all the pillows you can afford.

To one side of the frame attach rests for two shelves and to the other for one. To all then screw fast smooth pine boards and stain them to suit the tone of the work. Lastly fill the shelves with growing palms and with your favorite works, and then when you have an hour to spare you will be enabled to enjoy a perfect rest.

The White Petticoat Must Go.

Silk petticoats for evening wear are, if possible, more elaborate than ever. One model is of green and crimson shot silk, the lower edge alternately frilled with red and green silk. Narrow ruffles of rich black lace fall over these, the upper edges of both being threaded in and out with bebe ribbons in the combined colors. Another of pink and silver shot taffeta silk is similarly made and trimmed with Fedora lace. The description of one such handsome article of dress will give the idea of scores more or less elaborate. Silk skirts simply made and lined with cotton flannel or delaine for warmth are superseding the striped and plaided woolen that have been the staple fabric for winter skirts for many years. Another variety shows the outer material of cashmere in dark or bright colors and the lining of the taffeta silk. Skirts of this description produce the desired fashionable rustle and swish as the wearer walks about.

Something Useful.

The Russian blouse had a good run in Paris last year. It was not much taken up by English ladies then, but they have fully made up for their negligence now. English maids and youthful matrons patronize the Russian blouse. They look askance at empire and restoration muslins and walking dresses. They consider these styles charming for indoor and evening dress, but for walking purposes the Russian blouse is the thing.

PETER HURLICH DEAD.

HE DIED SATURDAY NIGHT AT TEN O'CLOCK.

After Living Thirty-Eight Hours with a Bullet in His Brain—He Did Not Regain Consciousness—A Post-Mortem Examination Held Yesterday.

Peter Hurlich, the Dunellen tailor, who shot himself with suicidal intent, Friday morning, died at ten o'clock Saturday night. He was unconscious up to the time of his death.

It seems that he fired three shots. One of the bullets was found imbedded in the woodwork of the room in which the shooting took place, by a member of the family. The second one was found in the man's head, just over the right ear, by Dr. Field, as told in Saturday's NEWS. It had entered the skull and after going about two inches was stopped by a bone, which it was pressing down on the brain when found by the doctor. In removing it he also took out a piece of bone as large as the bullet itself, which had been shattered by the ball.

The third bullet was the one that caused the man's death. It entered at the right side of the head, passed through the right brain and lodged in the left one. Dr. Field followed the bullet's course and probed for it without success.

A post-mortem examination was held yesterday afternoon by Drs. Field and Gaston of this city and Dr. Brakely of Dunellen. The skull was cut open and the last bullet found in the left brain.

Hurlich lived thirty-eight hours with this bullet in his brain. The only words he uttered, after he committed the act, were—"What are you going to do about it."

Hiscaw was an unusually pathetic one. As has been told in THE NEWS his store had been twice robbed, leaving him discouraged and without resources. In his extremity he borrowed money, giving in payment a note. He had paid the amount all but about $120. It is said that for the non-payment of this amount he was threatened with arrest. His two well-to-do brothers offered him financial aid, and one of them had sent him $20. He offered this amount to his creditor the night before he shot himself, but it was refused, the entire amount being demanded. Hurlich then offered to go to New York and get the money, but the creditor, who was waiting at Hurlich's home, thinking he wanted to escape, would not let him go for the money.

He consequently remained the $20 so his brother and in desperation committed the rash act. Mr. Hurlich had always been industrious. He bore a good reputation and had many friends.

He tried to borrow a revolver Thursday night at Taylor's Hotel, saying he wanted to shoot some cats. They did not have one so he then went to a switchman employed on the railroad nearby, and told the same story. The man had a revolver but said he needed it himself. He did not, however, suspect Hurlich's real object.

Mr. Hurlich then went to one of his neighbors, a shoemaker, and succeeded in getting a weapon, again telling the cat story. The man obligingly placed the three cartridges in the revolver, and then showed Hurlich how to use the weapon. He knew nothing of the rash act until Hurlich's wife rushed out of their home next morning shortly after the deed was committed, and frantically told what had happened.

"DAVID AND JONATHAN"

A BRILLIANT SERMON BY AN ELOQUENT SPEAKER.

The Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church, Preaches to Odd Fellows—A Large Number of Members Present.

Last evening in the Park Avenue Baptist church, the pastor, the Rev. J. W. Richardson, preached a special sermon to the Odd Fellows. The members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, and Queen City Lodge, No. 226, met in their respective lodge rooms and marched to the church in a body. The speaker's theme was "David and Jonathan."

After an exposition of the text, which was from I Samuel 19:1-3, and a description of the times, the speaker said:

"David and Jonathan are star and star coming into conjunction in the sky of fraternal love. We see here true friendship defending a brother from the brutality of the king. This incident teaches one of the phases of true Odd Fellowship. The order has no connection with sham teaching. Those two characters are chosen as the exponents of certain grand principles which are inculcated to every man who unites with the order. Shams are despised. The prompt recognition of true manliness is taught. In those days, the lines of social caste were based upon different circumstances than those which now prevail. To-day good clothes, a genteel vocation, and the airs of the aristocracy too often give an individual a standing in the community. That is why society is filled with mere adventurers. So it was then. The tiller of the soil; the weaver and the worker in iron had no social standing; while a shepherd was spurned. The warrior was the gentleman. But when David appeared on the scene, despite his vocation and family connections, Jonathan saw in him the lines of a sublime manhood and so took him to his heart. So the use of this incident by the order, is to teach Odd Fellows to look for the man, rather than the money, to search for the character rather than the clothes.

"The brothers are taught to esteem character wherever found. There may come the man with the gold ring and goodly apparel; but like Jonathan they are to look for that which merits love and respect, regardless of all external appearances. Odd Fellowship declares the necessity of ignoring those small social considerations that divide men in the outside world. That within the sacred precincts of the lodge room there be no division between the union of men in the firm bonds of a true manliness. We find such manliness there: Odd Fellows who spurn to do a mean thing: who are constantly on the alert to say 'Courage, my brother.' There are Odd Fellows who have drunk so deeply into the real meaning of these principles, that they are permeated with their manly spirit. You may find them, those, who after a hard day's work at the store or office, go to the home smitten with disease, there to watch through the hours of the night with some sorely wounded David. I have seen hard work'ing Odd Fellows, with whom it was a great struggle to make both ends meet, push their hands down deep into their pockets, and, of their little, contribute liberally to assist some Jonathan upon whom the displeasure of adverse circumstances rested. This is the budding and flowering of true manliness. True, there are narrow, selfish men, who profess Odd Fellowship. But their unhappy lives do not contradict the principles of the Order, anymore than hypocrites prove the doctrines of the church false. Oh, remember friends, that wherever wheat grows tares will also be found. There are also spots on the sun, though we own it is foolish enough to say that the sun is all spots. Like the church of Christ which exists and thrives, and throbs with the greatness of its undertakings because of His divine life and truth in the hearts of true Christians; so with the Order. It is because the spirit of its lessons as sublime as this of David and Jonathan, exists in the hearts of those who are true, manly, consecrated Odd Fellows.

"You, my brothers, intense reality should be the characteristic of our relations to each other. Rise to a just conception of the meaning of the symbols. That you are called upon to respect each other as brothers. That we are to look at things from a brother's standpoint also. Oh, it is a noble work to be engaged in the divine effort to uplift and purify the souls and aims of men. We honor the missionary and teacher because of this. But not one whit less honorable are the efforts of that Odd Fellow who tries to bless his fellow members, and through them the outside world. The world to-day needs great hearts, sympathetic men, who shall be quick to discern the feelings and necessities of others. It is your privilege to give David and Jonathan to the world.

"It can not be a matter of indifference to us where our brother stands. Is some David in danger? Does some Saul seek to sink a sword into his happiness? Is there a dagger for his reputation? Then you may make out of your sympathies and encouragements a shield of steel for the heart of poor David. When you see some David imperilled by the wiles of an indulging liver, or outside the principles of the Order for him. Lovingly, patiently, warn him and reason with him, and endeavor to lift him up and save him. I am thankful that so many imperilled Davids, through the faithful efforts of Jonathans who truly represented Odd Fellowship, have been rescued from moral danger. I have seen it.

"Oh yes, the symbols teach the truest kind of brotherly love. The Order makes no war on creeds or churches. It does not desire the place of the church. But it does teach men the immortality of the soul, and to prepare for a higher life. It seeks to lead men nearer to a conception of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of men. The Order implores humanity, and the men of all classes and creeds, and it endeavors to make its rites and symbols stepping stones to something higher. Masonism has received within its courts an Association that taught him to grasp the extended hand that helps to Christ and heaven.

Then the pastor urged the great body of men who sat before him to become acquainted personally with Christ, the great Elder Brother. In spite of attendance and interest it was a most profitable service.

"THE YOUTH OF JESUS."

An Interesting Illustrated Talk by Rev. Dr. Haribut.

Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Haribut illustrated by a most interesting talk and numerous stereopticon views of paintings and photographs, last evening, in Vincent Chapel, the "Youth of Jesus." The illustrations included views of oriental cities and homes, and aside from the religious thoughts developed, upon the congregation they made the life and the country here doubly attractive. The congregation seemed greatly pleased, and, at the close of the talk joined heartily in singing a hymn displayed on the screen.

Friday afternoon, Agnes Forsberg's mother was arrested in connection with the disorderly house matter, for which Agnes was fined $25. She was taken before City Judge Coddington who, after hearing her story, suspended sentence on her. She was not arrested before because she was suffering from nervous prostration.

ALFRED PRESTON WHITE, A BLACK, MUST PAY.

For What Mrs. Johnson Terms Base Ingratitude—He was Her Boarder, and is Charged with a Heinous Crime.

Alfred Preston White, colored, nineteen years old, was arrested Saturday night, at nine o'clock, by Marshal Pennborn, charged with carnal abuse upon twelve-year-old Ethel Johnston of Manning avenue, North Plainfield. The extreme penalty is $1000 fine and fifteen years' imprisonment.

The warrant was issued Saturday morning upon complaint of the girl's father, Benjamin Johnston.

The marshal would not serve the warrant without having a doctor's certificate. Dr. Charles H. Cooley was summoned. He examined the girl and pronounced the charge true. She is soon to become a mother.

White has always borne an excellent reputation and graduated in 1890 from the Plainfield High School with high honor. On that occasion he delivered an essay in Music Hall at the commencement exercises. His subject was entitled "L'Ouverture," whose glory as a heroic the negro race he eloquently recounted, and was most vigorously applauded, especially as he was the only one of his race who ever graduated from the High School.

Since his graduation he has been employed as draughtsman in the Pond Machine Tool Works and was well thought of by his employers.

His mother is a respectable colored woman and has been for years housekeeper for the family of William Moore, corner of Broadway and Fifth street.

The young man was arrested on the street, while walking in company with his mother and an uncle. He was taken before Justice Nash and placed under $3,000 bail. He was afterward taken before Justice Crossley of North Plainfield and the bail was reduced to $1,000. Having no bondsmen he was locked up.

Yesterday a number of the young man's friends—including some of our most prominent citizens—visited him in jail, among them being the deacons of the church of which he was a member.

There seemed to be no lack of sympathy and that of sorrow for him.

White offered to marry the girl, but her parents considered her too young, though she is of extraordinary development for her years, maturing four or five years earlier than customary. Such a marriage, too, would be illegal, because she is a minor.

She attended school until last Wednesday. It having been found impossible to have a marriage take place Prosecutor McClure, consenting as counsel for the girl's parents, in connection with Borough Counsel Reed, who was induced by prominent citizens to intercede for the young man, this morning, visited the office of Justice Crossley and, after explaining all the circumstances, had the bail reduced to $600. Young White's mother went bail, in that sum, for his appearance, when wanted, and he was released to await the action of the Somerset County Grand Jury.

He boarded with the Johnston family for several months last Fall, when the offense is said to have occurred.

The girl is an only daughter, and her mother expresses herself very bitterly toward the young man, charging him with base ingratitude in return for her taking him in as a boarder into her home. She says also that he has agreed to pay $600 and expenses in consideration of the charge not being pressed against him. Mrs. Johnston was formerly the janitress at the depot. It is said that, although married to an African, she is not one, her father having been a Portuguese and her mother an Indian.

CRAZED BY CIGARETTES.

An Elizabeth Man Taken to the Asylum and Likely to Die.

Samuel A. Whitley, a telegraph operator here, became violently insane Saturday morning from cigarette smoking, and he had to be taken to the insane asylum. He fought with half a dozen policemen, and had to be put into a straight jacket before he could be got under control.

He was found lying on Spring street, and was taken to Police Headquarters, suffering, as was supposed at first, from delirium tremens. During the day insanity developed. He made frantic efforts to butt his brains out against the cell door.

Whitley is forty-five years old, and has been at the telegraph business since he was fifteen. He has always smoked the very strongest kind of tobacco, which he has rolled into cigarettes and inhaled the smoke. The physicians who saw him say that there is no doubt that his malady is due to his pernicious habit. They do not think he can live.

Edsall's New Stores.

Seely Edsall, the enterprising dry goods merchant on Front street, has signed a lease for a term of years for one half of the ground floor and basement of the mammoth Babcock building now being erected corner of Front street and Madison avenue.

The store Mr. Edsall will occupy for his extensive and rapidly increasing business will be sixty feet deep by the depth of one hundred and seventy-five feet, all in one open unobstructed salesroom.

This will afford ample room on the first or ground floor for the various departments he wishes to carry, viz.: carpets and fancy goods, millinery, upholstery, shoes and crockery, on the first floor, and house furnishing goods, all clothing, etc., and work rooms in the basement. The store will be newly fitted up with the latest improved system, tasteful toilet, cloak and waiting rooms, and all the modern conveniences for doing a first-class business. The immense structure when completed, Mr. Babcock says, will not be surpassed by anything between New York or Philadelphia, and Mr. Edsall says that he intends that the same shall be said of his store, when it is ready for occupancy, and is opening, which will be about October next. Mr. Edsall has done much for the business interests of Plainfield, and the new enterprise will be rather surprising in its magnificence. It means, however, to be prized because of the prestige for success of this popular house.

An Insane Man in Bathing.

Saturday morning the crew of the Life Saving Station No. 1, at Long Branch, found a man bathing in the surf. They thought the man acted strangely, and considered it queer that he should go bathing at such an unseasonable weather.

He was pulled out of the chilly water and placed in charge of Overseer of the Poor D.C. Newing. He proved to be August Wyberg, carpenter, who was recently an inmate of the State Insane Asylum, but who made his escape from that institution by following a funeral procession from the grounds. He walked to Long Branch, and, as his mind appeared to be still impaired, he was ordered to remain there.

He will be sent back to the asylum.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Everybody will try to travel to Europe by the German lines if it is true that they have adopted an absolutely smokeless fuel, for the smoke and cinders from a ship's funnels are the worst nuisance to deck promenaders on an ocean voyage. The Berlin Raschlosverbrennungsgesellschaft makes the fuel. It ought to be able to make anything. Coal dust is mingled with air by a certain kind of treatment, and the mixture is used for firing furnaces. It is claimed that by the use of this fuel there is no smoke, neither any wear of boilers. The Raschlosverbrennungsgesellschaft ought to have a fine show of its smokeless fuel on exhibition at Chicago.

Never but once before since the white man settled the country was the Mississippi frozen from shore to shore and an ice gorge formed at Memphis. The suffering this winter in the smaller towns along the Ohio and Mississippi rivers is unprecedented. Many of them have no railroad connections and are dependent altogether on the river for supplies of fuel, clothing and groceries. The suffering is something appalling, and the worst of it has been that there was no way of reaching the sufferers quickly and giving them aid. The winter of 1892-3 will be remembered for half a century on account of its severity. Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia and North Carolina are accounted warm states in the popular judgment, yet for the first time in the memory of the grown persons they have suffered in common with the states farther north from zero temperature and ice gorges.

The Cooked Food Movement.

In spite of many obstacles and discouragements it is making progress, and in most of the large cities there are bright, cheerful "kitchens," so called, where supplies of food all ready for the table can be obtained at reasonable prices. The movement to deliver such food hot from wagons does not meet with great success so far. The chief progress has been made in establishments where the families come for food and carry it away in vessels of their own. The undoubted field for delivery service could be made a success.

The plan began in some places as a philanthropic measure—a plan to supply families in tenement houses and poor districts with food of good quality, cooked in the best manner, at a moderate price. The result showed that comparatively well to do people appreciated the plan better than the thriftless and the very poor. It is a vast saving of time, trouble and fuel to send to a nearby kitchen and get a supply of soup, meats, vegetables and plain, wholesome desserts for a family. Women engaged in business find such establishments invaluable. It will be the method of cookery in the future. Such a kitchen could succeed in any town, the only requisites being that the food should be exquisitely clean and of good, wholesome quality. Dainty deserts and lobster salads might be left out for ladies to make at home if they wished or procure from a fashionable caterer.

About Divorce Laws.

If you think you will ever want a divorce from any cause whatever, do not go to South Carolina to live. That is the one state of the Union in which there is absolutely no divorce allowed. The only way in which married people there can get apart is to run away from each other and hide. In all the other states divorce is allowed for Scriptural cause.

As one goes west divorce laws become more liberal. In forty-one of the forty-four states divorce is permitted for extreme cruelty, and in thirty-three states for intemperance. In all but nine of the states a term in the penitentiary will release the prisoner's husband or wife from the matrimonial chain, while in twenty-two states and territories gross neglect will secure a divorce if it is proved on the husband or wife. The term "neglect," too, is as elastic as people's conscience and can be stretched to cover anything from abandonment outright to a failure to take a wife to an evening party.

Nebraska and the Dakotas are perhaps more liberal in their divorce laws than any other states in the time required for residence before the suit is commenced. A residence in Nebraska for six months will entitle an applicant for divorce to commence action, while in both the Dakotas the applicant need only reside within the state ninety days. For some reason persons who wished to be untied have gravitated to Sioux Falls, D., in large numbers, forming what is called the divorce colony, thereby scandalizing citizens of that promising young state who do not believe in divorce.

In 1892 ninety divorces were granted in Sioux Falls. The applicants were mostly women. The churches and the ladies of the W. C. T. U. in South Dakota endeavored to have the divorce industry stopped, at least to a great extent. Powerful pressure was brought to bear on the legislature to lengthen the term of residence to at least a year.

The Sioux Falls lawyers, however, as well as various other citizens, asked this question. Why should the legislature, on merely sentimental grounds, drive out of South Dakota and into North Dakota and Nebraska a business which brings to Sioux Falls over $100,000 a year? So the legislature defeated the bill to lengthen the term of residence to a year.

HAWAII WANTS TO COME

Commissioners Here to Ask For Annexation.

THE DUSKY QUEEN DETHRONED.

She Thought to Adopt Arbitrary Measures Destructive to American Capital. The Revolution a Peaceful One—She Will Present a Protest at Washington.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30.—AN Hawaiian steamer arrived with the news of a revolution at Honolulu and having on board a commission, headed by L. A. Thurston, with a petition to the United States government to annex the Hawaiian islands to the United States. Queen Lilliokalani has been deposed because of her attempt to promulgate a new constitution depriving foreigners of rights of citizenship. Seventy-five per cent of the business in the islands is owned by American residents, and hence the demand for annexation.

England Refuses Recognition.

The new government called on volunteers, who assembled, armed, to the number of 500. The old government surrendered without striking a blow, although it had about 400 men under arms and a battery of Gatling guns. The provisional government notified the representatives of foreign governments of the change and asked recognition. It was at once granted by all powers except England.

The United States ship Boston landed about 300 men, who have taken up quarters on the island and will remain there until recalled by the government.

The Reason For the Overthrow.

In 1887 almost absolute power was given the king of Hawaii. He could appoint and dismiss his ministers at will, and no restrictions were placed upon him. This of course could not last, and the people took this power away from King Kalakaua and adopted a new constitution, which the sovereign was obliged to sign. The native element has always chafed under the limitation which was placed upon their ruler.

Yielding to these mutterings of discontent, the queen attempted to put the old order of things in force. There are too many Yankees and Englishmen in the kingdom, however, to submit to this, and as a consequence she finds herself dethroned and her country practically a republic.

The Queen's Manifesto.

I, Lilliokalani, by grace of God and under the constitution of the Hawaiian kingdom, queen, do hereby solemnly protest against any and all acts done against myself and the constitutional government of the Hawaiian kingdom by certain persons claiming to have established a provisional government of and for this kingdom. I yield to the superior force of the United States of America, whose minister plenipotentiary, his excellency John L. Stevens, has caused United States troops to be landed at Honolulu and declared that he would support the said government.

Now to avoid any collision of armed forces and perhaps loss of life, I, do under this protest and impelled by said force, yield my authority until such time as the government of the United States shall, upon facts being presented to it, undo the acts of its representative and reinstate me in the authority which I claim as constitutional sovereign of the Hawaiian islands.

Charles L. Carter, one of the commissioners to Washington appointed by the provisional government, made the following statement:

Want to Come In as a Territory.

"The object of our visit to Washington is to have the United States take possession of the Hawaiian islands. We want to join the Union—not as a state, however, but under a territorial form of government. A government like that of the District of Columbia, with the addition of a governor appointed by the president, is preferable for many reasons.

"There is such a large number of Chinese and other cheap laborers on the islands who cannot be trusted to vote intelligently that if universal suffrage were declared, the whites, who represent almost the entire business interests of the country, would be outvoted and powerless.

"An entire new system of government must be built up, and the only way is to have the United States take charge. It must come to this, or the whites must leave the islands. Their interests are too great, however, for them to give up without a struggle, and the revolution was the result. The new constitution which was brought out by the queen granted her almost absolute power and disfranchised the white voters. The natives themselves, as a rule, are not in favor of the ex-queen's plans. She is supported by a certain clique of about 20 persons who are anxious for political power.

What Hawaii Is.

The kingdom of Hawaii consists of 15 islands in the north Pacific, only eight of which are inhabited. They are about 2,100 miles from San Francisco. The population is about 80,000, and the total area is 640 square miles.

Of the population in 1890, 34,436 were natives, 15,301 Chinese, 12,360 Japanese, 8,602 Portuguese, 1,928 Americans and 1,334 British. Nine-tenths of the trade of the islands is with the United States. The exports consist mainly of sugar, rice, bananas and hides.

Honolulu, the capital, on the island of Oahu, is lighted by electricity, and nearly every leading family in the town has its telephone. In 1890 205 vessels visited the islands. The naval and military forces of the islands consist of the household guards, fixed at 65 men. There are no volunteer military organizations.

The Royal Line.

David Kalakaua, the fourth and probably the last king of the Hawaiians, was born in Honolulu on Nov. 16, 1836. He was educated in the royal school at Honolulu.

He married the Chieftainess Kapiolana in 1863, and after the death of Prince Lunalilo on Feb. 3, 1874, he announced himself as candidate for the throne. Prince Lunalilo having failed to proclaim himself a successor, Emma, the widow of Kamehameha IV, the queen dowager, was also a candidate. Kalakaua was elected by an extra session of the legislature.

Queen Emma's partisans attacked the legislature, but were dispersed by marines from the American and British warships in the harbor, and the king was installed.

Queen Lilliokalani is the eldest sister of King Kalakaua, who died Jan. 20, 1891, in San Francisco. She succeeded him on the throne. Her husband, John O. Dominis, long resided in Hawaii. John Dominis accompanied Queen Kapiolani, Kalakaua's consort, and the destroned Queen Lilliokalani to this country in 1887.

Of Far Honolulu.

United States Engaship Mohican, with Admiral Skerrett on board, has gone to sea on her way to Honolulu. The Hanger is expected to leave the yard at any moment, and the Adams will leave there Tuesday morning. Since the news of the completion of affairs in the Hawaiian Islands there has been marked activity in completing preparations on the coast defense vessel Monterey. One hundred and fifty men are working on her night and day.

The News at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The Hawaiian revolution has been an absorbing topic of discussion in the face of the dispatches. It is best stated to have been sent by the deposed queen it was expected that the specially chartered steamer which brought the news of the revolution would also bring some dispatch from Minister John L. Stevens or Consul General H. W. Severance to the state department. If any such advices were brought they were apparently in telegraphic form or were in such a shape as not to be suitable for publicity at the present time. A detailed report from these officers are on their way by mail they may be expected to arrive in Washington about the same time as the annexation commissioners on Friday next. In the meantime some of the members of the committee on foreign relations are expressing their sentiments with remarkable freedom.

Senator Morgan makes no secret of his desire to acquiesce in the request of the committee and annex the Islands. More significant even than this, however, is the statement that Senator Sherman, the chairman of the senate committee on foreign relations, to whom the queen's commission spoke to the same purpose. Mr. Butler of South Carolina said to a reporter: "Of course there can be no question of the great desirability of the islands as a naval station. Unless they are purchased, as were Alaska and Louisiana, it will be necessary for congress to pass a regular act of annexation, as in the case with the republic of Texas."

As John Bull Views It.

LONDON, Jan. 30.—The Daily Graphic says of the Hawaii revolution: "Beyond dispute the queen's government in Hawaii, but except the lurid stories published in San Francisco nothing occurred to our knowledge to justify the queen's deposition. The revolution was the result of the work of a section of immigrants numbering at the outside 1,500. The fact that revolutionists were in so great a hurry to get power away from King Kalakaua must wears an ugly look." The News says: "The overthrow of the queen appears to be an American coup. Hawaii being the key of the whole group, the Americans, once they possess it, would not find difficulty in making themselves masters of the others. Europe, however, has interests in the same quarter, Honolulu being the only coaling station on the mail route between San Francisco and Auckland."

Kansas Populists Hold the Fort.

TOPEKA, Jan. 30.—There is considerable talk about the Populists taking possession of the house of representatives during the Republicans from entering. The Populists took a recess, and the threat has been made that they would assert possession of the hall and camp there and not allow the Republicans to enter unless they agree to surrender and recognize Dunsmore as speaker. They openly avow will, of course, have their officers in charge of the doors, and it is well known that there is quite an element in the Populist house ready to try this scheme. Several Populists were questioned about the matter, but they would say nothing. Speaker Dunsmore said that the Republicans had not played their best cards yet and that when they did the Republican obstructionists should stand from under. Should an attempt to keep out the Republicans be made, he would follow, and there is no telling where it will end.

Erie Car Works Closed.

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 30.—The Erie car works, limited, a plant representing $600,000 investment, was seized by the sheriff upon two executions aggregating $108,000 in favor of Erie banks. The plant covers 10 acres of land and comprises car works and car wheel works; also a large Martel furnace and machine shop. The failure is said to be enterprise is alleged to have been the cause of the failure. The Erie plant had a large contract for cars for the Pennsylvania Railroad company under construction.

The United States Will Go Around.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., Jan. 30.—Everything was in readiness for laying the pipes of the United States Pipe Line company through Susquehanna county and thence eastward, but owing to the opposition of the Standard Oil company and the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad company, the company has changed its plans. It will reach the seaboard by the way of Athens, Wilkesbarre and New Jersey.

The Exclusive Trolley Patent.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Jan. 30.—O. S. Kelley has sold his patent on the overhead electric trolley system to the General Electric company of New York city. A man named Green is the inventor of the patent held by Mr. Kelley. Green was poor and Mr. Kelley has practically put him finds for 30 years to prosecute his claims. The patent covers all systems using an overhead trolley.

Machinery Hall Roof Goes Down.

WHAT CARNEGIE SAYS.

Homestead Troubles Banished as a Horrible Dream.

NONE KNOW FRICK BUT TO LOVE HIM

The Wealthy Manufacturer Could Not Control Any Words Not If He Could. Adds Forces His Pittsburg Investments He Is a Poor Man.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 30.—Ever since the arrival of Mr. Andrew Carnegie from Europe he has been besieged by newspaper men for an expression upon the recent troubles at Homestead, but he steadfastly refused to be interviewed. In conversation with a reporter, however, Mr. Carnegie talked freely on the subject.

"I did not come to Pittsburg," said he, "to rake up but to try to bury the past, of which I know nothing. That is beyond recall. It should be banished as a horrible dream, and the thing that it teaches laid to bear for the future. For 38 years our concerns have run with only one labor stoppage at one of its numerous works, and I trust and believe that even this record will be fully equaled in the 38 years to come. When employer and employed become antagonistic, each considering the other its enemy, it is a contest between twin brothers. There is no genuine victory possible for either, but defeat for both capital and labor.

"I desire now, once for all, to make one point clear. Four years ago I retired from active business. No consideration in the world would induce me to return to it. A great error of our countrymen is that they confuse the incoming cares incident to business until they break down in the harness, when they should be in their prime, and die still striving for dollars. I believe in retiring early and giving younger men a chance. I have sold portions of my interests and am gradually selling more to such young men in our service as my partners find possessed of executive ability and desire to interest in the business. I am not an officer in the company, but only a shareholder.

Could Not and Would Not.

"To the numerous appeals which I have received urging me to give instructions in regard to recent troubles I have paid no attention. I have not power to instruct anybody connected with the Carnegie Steel company, limited.

"The law under which the company is chartered requires a majority, not only in interest but in number, of shareholders to effect a change. If I desired to replace the present officers, therefore, it would be necessary for me to obtain the consent of all of the shareholders and also seven members willing to act as their successors. I could not find one shareholder out of the whole number who would refuse to sell, of course, and stand by the present officials. They will be unanimously re-elected. I do not believe in rubber stamp proxies or voting power, even if I could, and this provision, which has always been a feature in our partnerships, I think is only fair to those I could otherwise control. I have played their best cards yet and that when they did the Republican obstructionists should stand from under. Should an attempt to keep out the Republicans be made, I will follow, and there is no telling where it will end.

Erie Car Works Closed.

ERIE, Pa., Jan. 30.—The Erie car works, limited, a plant representing $600,000 investment, was seized by the sheriff upon two executions aggregating $108,000 in favor of Erie banks. The plant covers 10 acres of land and comprises car works and car wheel works; also a large Martel furnace and machine shop. The failure is said to be enterprise is alleged to have been the cause of the failure. The Erie plant had a large contract for cars for the Pennsylvania Railroad company under construction.

The United States Will Go Around.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., Jan. 30.—Everything was in readiness for laying the pipes of the United States Pipe Line company through Susquehanna county and thence eastward. But owing to the opposition of the Standard Oil company and the New York, Lake Erie and Western Railroad company, the company has changed its plans. It will reach the seaboard by the way of Athens, Wilkesbarre and New Jersey.

The Exclusive Trolley Patent.

SPRINGFIELD, O., Jan. 30.—O. S. Kelley has sold his patent on the overhead electric trolley system to the General Electric company of New York city. A man named Green is the inventor of the patent held by Mr. Kelley. Green was poor and Mr. Kelley has practically put him finds for 30 years to prosecute his claims. The patent covers all systems using an overhead trolley.

Simply Awful

Worst Case of Scrofula the Doctors Ever Saw

Completely Cured by HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA.

"When I was 4 or 5 years old I had a scrofulous sore on the middle finger of my left hand, which got so bad that the doctors cut the finger off, and later took off more than half my hand. Then the sore broke out on my arm, and on my neck and body, and it also appeared during the night of one eye, also on my right leg. I was in a Sad Plight. Worst Case of Scrofula

they ever saw. It was simply awful! Five years ago I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. Gradually I found that the sores were beginning to heal. When I had taken two bottles, was declared: Just think of what a return I got for that investment! A dozen bottles made a complete cure. For the past 4 years I have had no sores. I

Work all the Time.

Before, I could do no work. I know not what to say strong enough to express my great thanks to Hood's Sarsaparilla for my perfect cure." GEORGE W. TURNER, Parnell, Oak Co., Sanford county, Fla.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Senator Chandler's Immigration Bill. Forecast of Congress.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The most notable event of the week in congress will probably be the disposition of the antioption bill in the senate. By agreement the final vote upon the bill will be taken at 3 o'clock Tuesday. It will then in all probability be sent back to the house, with its many amendments, so entirely different measure from the original Hatch bill as passed by that body. The first two of the regular annual appropriation bills are now on the calender of the senate—the army bill and the fortifications bill—and it is expected that the District of Columbia appropriation bill will be added to the list early in the week. It is the expectation of the managers to also call up the Cullom bill making amendments to the interstate commerce laws to meet recent judicial decisions. As introduced this bill contained the important pooling clause which was afterwards stricken out by the committee on a very close vote, and it is possible that an effort will be made when the bill is under consideration in the senate to restore this provision to the bill.

The house leaders intend to keep at work on the appropriation bills to the exclusion of all other business. As soon as the sundry civil bill is passed the general deficiency, the consular and diplomatic, the military academy, the pension and the postoffice appropriation bills, all of which are now on the calendar, will be taken up, probably in the order named, and sent over to the senate. There should not be much delay in passing the first three of these bills, unless an attempt to exploit the condition of the treasury should involve the house in a general financial debate. The pension and postoffice supply bills are quite likely to be the subjects of considerable discussion, owing to some radical changes in methods proposed by the former bill and to heavy increases of appropriations proposed by the latter bill.

Mr. Chandler reported a bill concerning immigration. To the excluded classes are added all persons physically capable and over 12 years of age who cannot read and write with reasonable facility in their own language, except aged persons who are the parents or grandparents of eligible immigrants, persons blind or crippled or otherwise physically imperfect, so that they are wholly or partially disabled from manual labor, unless it be shown that they are sure of abundant support; persons belonging to societies which favor or justify unlawful destruction of life and property.

MR. CLEVELAND'S MANIFESTO.

After Feb. 4 He Will Remain at Lakewood Undisturbed, He Hopes.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 30.—In an interview with a representative of the United Press Mr. Cleveland said: "The date is now at hand when I must have more time to myself than I have had since the election. Thus far the most of my time has been devoted to interviews which have been by no means unpleasant nor unprofitable, but other things are now pressing upon me which require my uninterrupted consideration. I wish, therefore, you would say for me through the press that I shall be at my office in New York every day, with perhaps one exception, during the week commencing with Jan. 30, and that after Feb. 4 I shall remain at Lakewood, where I hope to be undisturbed in the work which will imperatively demand my attention. I also especially desire it to be understood that from now until March 4 letters should be addressed to me at the Mills building, New York."

William F. Harrity, chairman of the Democratic committee, and William W. Hensel, attorney general of Pennsylvania, called on Mr. Cleveland. It was given out that William Bissell of Buffalo, the former partner of Cleveland, is to be attorney general.

The Dead Postmaster General.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—Mr. Wanamaker, in a general order, gracefully records of his predecessor the fact that "Mr. Campbell was postmaster general during the administration of President Pierce—from 1853 to 1857—and at that early day in postal development left the impress of his ability by the inauguration of the registry system, one of the great arms of the postal service. His term of office was also signalized by a farther reduction in the rates of postage and by improvements in the interchange of mails with foreign countries."

Russell Harrison Railroading.

MARION, Ind., Jan. 30.—Russell Harrison is president of the Queen City Railroad company, which had contracted with the Delafield Construction company of New York for the construction of five miles of road. The Delafields were to operate the road for a time at its completion. Harrison alleges faulty construction and unsatisfactory operation of the road. A damage suit for $15,000 has been filed.

LAST HONORS TO BLAINE

A Mourning Congregation of Notables at Washington.

BURIED WITHOUT OSTENTATION.

In Accordance With the Expressed Wishes of the Dead Statesman and of His Family the Funeral Was Private—Sorrowful Crowds Gather In the Streets.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—The body of the late ex-Secretary Blaine was removed to the parlor on the north side of the second floor of the residence. The windows of this room open out upon Lafayette square, one of the most delightful spots in Washington. Across this plot of ground stands the state, war and navy building, where the dead man achieved his latest triumphs in statecraft and diplomacy. A number of Mr. Blaine's friends called at the house and took a last look upon the face of the departed. The expression of the face was peaceful, and the lineaments of that well known countenance showed but few traces of the ravages of the disease that carried him off. The casket was almost buried under the mass of floral tributes which have been received, many of them from a distance. The first prayers of the funeral services were said by Rev. Dr. Tennis S. Hamlin, D. D., of the Church of the Covenant at 11 o'clock.

Notwithstanding the fact that the funeral was a private one, the attendants upon the service were as truly national in their representative character as if a president were being buried. The state of Maine sent a delegation of 14, headed by Governor Cleaves; Massachusetts a delegation of 5 members. The Union League club of New York sent 25 of its members to represent the organization, and the Union League club of Philadelphia 20. From various other points in Pennsylvania came several delegates of various societies and organizations. Altogether 100 or more of these representatives were present. Personal friends to the number of 65 were present from various parts of the country. Mrs. Garfield was there and others from cities as widely separated as Portland and Omaha. The Maine delegation was invited to attend the services at the house. Not more than 40 or 50 persons were present.

Services at the Church.

The services at the church as well as those at the house were strictly private and no one was admitted who had not received an invitation. The fact is stated that this was necessarily very much appreciated the desire and the regret of the people who would pay a tribute of respect by their presence to one who is at has been so closely identified with the history of the country.

But the limited seating capacity of the church and the large number of the delegations and officials to be provided for left no room for the general public.

The first eight rows of seats in the main body were occupied by the family, the relatives and the pallbearers. Behind them in order were seated the president, vice president, cabinet officers, Speaker Crisp and members of the supreme court, with their families. In the rear of these were senators and representatives.

On the south side of the church were seated the members of the various delegations and on the north side the personal friends.

The pallbearers were Senators W. P. Frye and Eugene Hale of Maine and John T. Morgan of Alabama, Representatives Thomas B. Reed and C. A. Boutelle of Maine, Robert R. Hitt of Illinois and Henry H. Bingham of Pennsylvania; General Thomas Ewing of Ohio, John Hay of Washington, Joseph H. Manley of Maine, Albert P. Jenks of Brooklyn, P. V. P. Ely of Boston.

The Burial Place.

The last sad rites over James G. Blaine were simple in the extreme. This was in accordance with the wishes of Mr. Blaine, expressed to his wife not many days before he died. In fact, it was among the last requests made by the dying statesman. All Washington is in mourning.

The spot selected for the burial is one of the prettiest in the capital. The ground is sloping and extends from the top of a hill to the frozen waters of Rock creek far below. Trees abound, most of them older than the city itself. By the side of the grave is the grave of Walker Blaine, the dead statesman's favorite son, and next to it is the grave of Walker's sister, Mrs. Coppinger, of Washington.

To the right the tops of the old houses of the city can be seen, and towering above them all and ever visible the sky piercing Washington monument.

Mr. Blaine's Wealth.

Mr. Blaine left a will bestowing all his property upon Mrs. Blaine and making her executrix without bonds. The total value of the estate is estimated at $600,000.

Honey Brook Mine Afire.

HAZLETON, Pa., Jan. 30.—The situation at Honey Brook is most alarming. The fire in No. 6 mine is still raging beneath the town. Everything is being done to counteract the effects of the flames and if possible to extinguish them. Throughout the village gas and steam is constantly issuing from the crevices in the earth. The odor is almost unbearable.

Interesting particulars of the methods and schemes of the Whisky trust have come out in consequence of the failure of the managers to corner their own stock and their own products.

Representative Outhwaite of Ohio denounced the landing of the sailors from the cruiser Boston at Honolulu.

A canvass of the situation in Washington shows that there is little chance of the antioption bill becoming law.

Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, in a sermon in the Calvary Baptist church, said that Democrats had told him ballots had been changed during the presidential election of 1884 to give Mr. Cleveland an apparent plurality over Mr. Blaine.

Labor Situation at Brockton.

BROCKTON, Mass., Jan. 30.—The latest developments in the labor war between the Knights of Labor and the Mostert union indicate the most bitter contest ever seen in the ranks of organized labor. The sensation of the whole proceeding thus far was the withdrawal of the boxed several workmen delegates from the Central Labor union. Their request was unanimously granted. This assembly is the one concerned in the Crawford shoe boycott, and in contrast with its action is the refusal of the lasters of the K. of L. to also withdraw its delegates.

Appreciative.

Persons in public office sometimes become very skilful in making themselves generally agreeable, but the best of them may err in thinking that practice has made them perfect in this respect. This story is told of a famous French minister of finance who, with good intentions, once amusingly failed to say the right thing:

The government was needing money, and a would be wit suggested to the minister that a tax might be put upon wit. "Every one would pay it voluntarily, because no one would wish to confess to being stupid," he said.

"Many thanks, sir," replied the minister affably. "If I adopt your plan I shall certainly exempt you from the tax as a token of appreciation."—Youth's Companion.

the inside, and allow one-half inch for hem, and for the outside take a piece of pale gold silk twelve inches long and allow one half inch for hem. The two parts are joined together at all their edges, and between them put several layers of wadding to produce a soft effect. The cotton is thickly sprinkled with sachet powder, and the edges are followed with a row of thick silk cord, the latter being formed in a coil a little back of the right upper corner, which is reversed. The upper side of the case is embroidered with a word and floral design in shades of blue, green and yellow. The case is closed with ribbon ties. Of course any other choice color may be used, and the material may be of silk, surah, velvet, plush or any other pretty figured silks.

But how can a girl best gain the love and respect of others? This is an all important query, and it is best answered by a concrete illustration drawn from real life. Miss A. has a face whose form and magnificent face are always the same, with a cold, distant aspect which even her undoubted beauty does not redeem from repulsion. Miss B. is not handsome, but is yet so lovely, but she meets one heart to heart, and her continued pleasantness has a charm which draws around her a devoted circle of appreciative friends. She is her father's confidante, her mother's joy, the recipient of her brother Jack's love troubles and sister Nellie's struggles with French.

great injustice is being done to them, simply because brothers and husbands do not understand that they can have ambitions and yearnings equally commendable with their own. Pay of Teachers and of Cooks.

A year or two ago there was published a list of questions concerning domestic service in the United States. They were prepared by Miss Lucy Salmon, the professor of history at Vassar college, and among other interesting facts gleaned from the answers to these questions are these: By a comparison made between the wages received by teachers in the public schools of Cambridge and cooks in the neighboring city of Boston it is found that 56 per cent. of the teachers in the former city earn $200 a year. If the very small sum of $260 were deducted for board for one year, this would leave a balance of $260 for clothing, travel, books, lectures, charity, pew rent and the inevitable rainy day.

The average wages of the Boston cook are, according to 574 returns, $4.65 weekly, or $241.80. As the cook has no outlay for food, fuel, light or laundry expenses, it is estimated that this added money value would amount to $275 and bring her wages up to $506.40. The difference in the amount of money left the teacher after paying necessary expenses and that received by the cook, who has no such outgo, would therefore be only $103.

The teacher must dress better, as becomes her position; she must attend lectures to keep in touch with improved methods; she is urged to subscribe from her pittance to journals of education, and has the next car fare to pay daily in stormy weather. By adding two of the tables in the report it is seen that the Boston cook is probably in possession of more money at the end of the year than the average teacher in Albany, Atlanta, Baltimore, New Orleans, Paterson, Rochester and Syracuse.—New York Post.

standing on a shelf outside our kitchen window, some molds of jelly cooling for the night's dinner. They were uncovered, the jelly were sent out of reach of cats and in full view of the cook's watchful eye. But he questioned me about them, and asked if it were our usual custom to leave jelly thus unprotected. I was obliged to reply that, so far as I knew, it was.

"Then he said: 'Don't you know that when you leave jelly, some piece of glass taken from some broken window pane.' And we have always done that since then."

It is to be feared that kitchen process are shorn of illness more often than is imagined. In many city houses the little kitchen annex, where stands the refrigerator, and the various articles are kept, is directly against a drain and a closet.

Yet here stand daily uncovered milk, butter, often custards and puddings, and vegetables which are absorbents. The average cook is absolutely ignorant of sanitary cause and effect, and the eternal vigilance of the house mother is the family's chief safeguard.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Where Artistic Nature Is.

Mr. Edmund Gosse, the English critic, says that "the artistic nature is not strongly developed in woman." Yet it is developing in her for all that, Mr. Gosse, and the process is well put by the thought developed. The artistic nature of woman never had a fair show until our time. Now at last it has a fair show. Woman has the opportunity of cultivating it, manifesting it and enjoying the fruits of it. There are great institutions in which she can study all the arts and in which she is studying them. She can study them unhampered by the presence of man or under the stimulus of rivalry with man. She can present her productions to the world without obstruction, sure of a fair judgment upon them. It is a glorious age for woman. All fields are open to her. When she offers us any work of art we welcome it with pride and exult in her triumph.

It has often been said that the Nineteenth century is woman's century, but it is our opinion that the Twentieth century will be a very merry time for two or three generations of womankind. When Mr. Edmund Gosse, of England, writes, he certainly cannot be thinking of the American woman, the proud souled, all conquering and incomparable American woman. We have in our country at this time thousands of women earnestly engaged in the study of the arts, and this fact alone furnishes ample evidence that the genius of the American woman is strongly developed.—New York Sun.

in silver linings, and likes to point them out to others. A week of rain or fog, an avalanche of unexpected guests, a discharged servant, the unbecoming bonnet or any other of the thousand minor inflictions of everyday life have no power to disturb the deep calm of her soul. The love light is still in her eyes, whether the days be dark or bright. It is she who conquers the grim old uncle and the dyspeptic aunt. The crossest baby reaches out its arms to her, and is comforted. Old people and strangers always ask the way of her in the crowded street. She has a good word to say for the man or woman who is under the world's ban of reproach. Gossip pales her, and she never voluntarily listens to it. Her gentle heart helps her to see the reason for every poor sinner's misstep, and, consequently, every fault. She might not serve with acceptance on the judge's bench, but she is a very agreeable person to know.—Harper's Bazar.

Jules Verne's Wife.

The wife of Jules Verne was married at the age of twenty-four; her maiden name was Dufrayse. Her father was an army officer of an ancient family of Perigord. Her marriage has proved an exceptionally happy one. She is the mother of two daughters, and of a son, Michel Verne, who is the youngest of her children and is thirty years of age. Her eldest daughter is thirty-eight, and her younger one is thirty-six. All are married, and Mme. Verne is the happy ancestress of six little grandchildren.

It has been reported that Jules Verne has been largely aided in the preparation of some of his novels by his intelligent and devoted wife. She herself has hastened to deny the rumor, declaring that she has never taken part in any fashion in the literary labors of her husband. "While fully appreciating" (I quote her own words on the subject) "the happiness I enjoy in being the wife of such an intellectual man, to whose career success has not been lacking, I have shared, therefore, the joys and not the fatigues of his existence as an author."—Lucy Hooper in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Pillow of the Italian Peasant.

The Italian peasant girl as soon as she has learned to spin and sew begins to make her wedding trousseau. Some place by place in grass, and she has put into it all her finest stitchery and sweetest thoughts. As soon as she is a bride she makes a bed of fine muslin. This she begins to fill with rose leaves. Each year adds its share. When she dies, perhaps an old woman full of years, it is this rose pillow that her head rests on. In the long centuries of care and preparation for the great events of life, such as marriage and death, there are time and self for this blending of fancy which we, stumbling, hit and miss, through life, do not furnish.—Chicago Times.

Extravagant Tablecloths.

The Paris fashionables are becoming most extravant with regard to their tablecloths for dinner, more so than as to what they place upon them in the eatable and drinkable way.

The fashion is to embroider the tablecloth with the most splendid and expensive lace, into which the coat of arms of the host and hostess are worked; the same with the serviettes. Those persons who have not a coat of arms and accept the general fashion for this rich embroidery work adopt the Louis XV pattern, under which majesty they thus elect to be classed.—Boston Globe.

For Human Hair.

If the flowers in your window box seem blasted, or are of a faded, sickly color, cover the earth around the roots about half an inch deep with pulverized charcoal. The roses that blossom in the next few days will have a fine, lively rose color. Charcoal always gives great vigor to the red or violet colors of flowers. White petunias become varied with red or violet tints; violets become covered with irregular spots of a bluish or almost black tint, but yellow flowers are insensible to its influence.—New York Recorder.

Jean Ingelow's London Home.

Jean Ingelow's London home is a veritable bower, hidden from the street by trees and shrubs, and surrounded by a half acre of ground, every inch of which is made to produce some useful or beautiful form of plant life. This garden receives the poet's constant personal care in summer, and in winter all the moveable plants are brought into a conservatory, where in a world of blossoms Miss Ingelow receives her callers and serves them with the genuine English beverage in pink eggshell cups.

Why Woman Is Behind Man in Music.

A German philosopher asserts that physiologically woman is more musically constituted than man, and that the lack of opportunity and means of developing her power has stifled the genius of genius in many women. The pathetic story of Fanny Mendelssohn bears out the theory, for had her parents, instead of preaching down their daughter's genius, encouraged and fostered it, there might have been a woman composer great enough to refute the charge of lack of originality in women.

To Cure for the Complexion.

The desultory way in which many women care for their complexions yields poor results. It requires care to keep perfectly clean hands, and women can't expect to erase wrinkles, callousness and black spots by occasionally dabbing their faces with some advertised water under a high sounding name. A little care given every morning with a pure cosmetic will give lasting results, but the treatment must be as regular as combing the hair.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Miss Bethan-Edwards is about the medium height, middle aged and slender in figure. She is fair complexioned, has hazel eyes and a mass of thick, dark hair, grey over the temples and worn in a twist at the back, the ends dispersed neatly round a small and compact head.

The best success in indoor plants growth is obtained by a uniform temperature of 60 to 65 degs. at night and from 65 to 75 degs. during the day. A higher temperature is only needed by semitropical flowers.

The greatest art of a true housekeeper is to conceal her art—to make her home an abiding place of peace, on which the demons of unrest and fidgetiness never enter.

Teach boys and girls the actual facts of life as soon as they are old enough to understand them, and give them the sense of responsibility without saddening them.

The myrtle is symbolical of the fruitfulness of the bride, and is jealously worn by every German bride except in the case of women marrying for the second time.

Russian tea is made by simply floating a piece of lemon in place of cream. This is very refreshing and enlivens the nerves.

TO BE MOVED AT LAST.

THE FREIGHT HOUSE TO BE LOCATED ABOVE RICHMOND STREET.

The Oil Cloth Works Property Purchased as the Site by the Central Railroad Company—The Buildings to be Vacated Immediately.

At last the freight house is to be moved.

The Central Railroad Company has purchased that portion of the Oil Cloth Works on North avenue, above Richmond street, which adjoins the railroad, and the freight yard will be transferred there.

President Payne of the works, who lives at Providence, R. I., was in this city yesterday and gave orders to have all the machinery taken out of the building and transferred to the opposite side of the street, where the remainder of the plant is situated.

This will be good news to the commuting residents on the South side of the track, to whom the freight house has long been an eyesore.

The railroad company is to take possession of their newly acquired property as soon as the building can be erected.

The sale was completed yesterday.

THE NEW BABCOCK BUILDING.

To be the Finest Business Block in the City.

The new building to be erected on West Front street, on the old Laing Hotel site, by Mr. George H. Babcock, bids fair to be Plainfield's finest when completed.

The foundation walls were commenced last week.

The entire structure is to be of brick, four stories high, with elevators, fire proof stairs and all modern improvements. The whole building will be heated by steam and lighted throughout by electricity.

There will be six stores fronting on Front street, three of which will be occupied by Mr. Edsall, as told in yesterday's News, and the one at the corner of Madison avenue has already been secured by Messrs. Van Emburgh & Son, at present located under the City National Bank. On the Madison avenue side there will be three stores. The building will be 120 feet front and 100 feet deep.

The second and third floors are to be used as offices and flats and the top floor will be fitted up for the Camera Club.

Engine Company No. 2's house is to be removed to a lot, near the brook on Madison avenue, and, in its place, a four-story brick building will be erected, similar to the one on the opposite corner.

PERSONAL.

Sylvester Sharkey of Richmond street is ill at his house with the mumps.

Mrs. John Bushnell of Central avenue will give a reception on Friday, Feb. 10.

Next Thursday afternoon, at the residence of Mr. H. A. Streull of Hillside avenue, a tea will be given by Miss Streull.

Major and Mrs. Robert L. Burnett gave a children's party for their little son, at their home on Hillside avenue, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Levi Darby of Rahway will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Saturday, February 11, by a golden wedding.

Mrs. Mary C. Griffiths of the Woman's Home Missionary Society, will make an address in Vincent chapel, on Wednesday evening. All are invited, and no doubt those who attend will be greatly interested, as Mrs. Griffiths has many facts to state concerning home missionary work, both in the great cities and on the frontiers.

The Church too Small for the Crowd.

When the song service began at Grace avenue church last night nearly every seat in the house was taken. The people kept on coming and Dr. Mitchell interrupted the song service to ask that a number of Sunday school teachers leave comfortable pews and sit in the choir loft and on the platform. This request was promptly and the seats made vacant were quickly filled. The people kept on coming till no more could be accommodated and then stood about the door and hallways. The singing was on the usual high level. The subject for the next was Matt. viii, 10, "Having Eyes See Ye Not?" Dr. Mitchell delivered the sermon and at the close the lecture room for the young people was filled after service. Every seat in the church and over 200 standing women patiently stood around the sides and front of the room and out in the hall. Such a crowd is seldom seen. After a short service of sentence testimonies, the session went far-ward to the hour and eight joined the church.—Kansas City Star.

NEARLY BLED TO DEATH.

Mrs. Krimey Found Lying on the Floor by her Husband.

Mrs. Jacob Krimey of West Front street came near bleeding to death last Friday morning. Mrs. Krimey has been troubled with boils, and while she was lying in bed asleep. She was awakened by the warm blood trickling down her ankle. She arose and attempted to walk to the next room to get a piece of silver that she had used before on just such an occasion, but fainted before she reached it. Her fall awakened her aunt in an adjoining room, who called loudly for help. Her cries awakened a little child, sleeping near, who hastened for Mr. Krimey. When the husband arrived he found his wife lying stiff and cold, where she had fallen. He hastily procured a piece of silver and placed it in the cavity in the vein, stopping the slowly oozing blood. Mr. Krimey hurriedly summoned Dr. Brokaw, but the latter had to succeeded in bringing the sufferer back to consciousness.

Several years ago, when Mr. and Mrs. Krimey resided on Clinton avenue, a similar accident occurred and Mrs. Krimey's life was despaired of for several days.

A TRAGEDY AT ELIZABETH.

A Man Shoots a Friend and then Kills Himself.

A tragedy took place in the house of Alexander B. Brokaw, No. 1,047 Lafayette street, Elizabeth, last night. His son, George A. B. Brokaw, twenty years old, was shot in the right cheek and in the mouth near the jugular vein by a friend, John Hackett, a boarder in the house, while the latter was laboring under temporary insanity. The shot was fired a bullet into his own mouth, another into his head, over the left eye and a third shot back of his left ear. The physicians say he will die. He was taken in an ambulance to the City Hospital. Brokaw's wounds, while serious, are not considered fatal. Young Brokaw fired his right cheek passed out near his right ear.

FOR HEALTH, GRACE AND STRENGTH

Must Always Be Cultivated by Women.

Concerning a lady formerly located in this vicinity, the New York Advertiser has the following:

"Mme. Delsarte School of expression at No. 567 Fifth avenue is one of the most advanced institutions of culture for women in this metropolis. Mme. Alberti is at the head of it, and one feels upon introduction to her that she is the personification of Madame de Stael. Tall and fair; she is short and dark, inclined to be plump, dimpled and rosy. She immediately annihilates the impression of the erstwhile Billy-lally Delsartean, who only themselves serve into shadows, and soon after completing their studies die and join the Delsarte himself in the hereafter.

Mme. Alberti is for health, grace and strength, but first health. She says that all these absurd ideas about fainting exercises for women are wrong, and she tells that pupils are constantly coming to her from Delsarte teachers in the worst stages of long troubles, brought on by the harsh exercises given them. There is no reason why any well dressed woman should call "climbing the ladder," and it is certain that before the student is over it or her way will duly but, thank heaven, there are few who are strong enough to keep at such an exercise until they are exhausted.

The Swedish movements too. Mme. Alberti says, is a humbug. She says she is too hard for women—stretching movements, the running and the horse back exercises.

Madame's own system starts upon the beginning of the body and is very and ends with the perfection of both.

A Word to Thinking Buyers!

Does it hurt the quality of our 25c. Corsets to sell them at 12½? Does it make a really good Stocking any poorer to sell it for 10c., instead of 15c.

Does it lessen the value of a Table Linen that is worth 50c., to sell it for ,

Does it hurt the quality of a Towel that anyone will ask you 25c. for, to sell it for 17c?

Is a gentlemen's unlaundried Shirt any poorer because we sell it for 50c., and others ask 75c. for one as good?

EDITORIAL NOTES

The death of Hayes leaves not one ex-president living. Cleveland is out of the list, being president elect.

The secretary of the treasury renews his recommendation to congress that an appropriation of $50,000 be made for the purpose of enabling the treasury department to replace worn out and mutilated paper currency with spick and span new bills. Good. The secretary doubtless remembers that this may be a chalers year.

Hayes had some distinguished men in his cabinet during his term of the presidency and was not jealous of them. Among them were William M. Evarts, secretary of state; Carl Schurz, secretary of the interior, and John Sherman, secretary of the treasury. Carl Schurz supports Mr. Cleveland now, but he was a stanch Republican in 1876. John Sherman distinguished himself by the return to specie payments throughout the country Jan. 1, 1879. Six months before that date he had accumulated in the United States treasury $140,000,000 in the expectation that there would be a demand for it in exchange for legal tender notes. But there was little or no demand, and thus, quietly, without shock or disturbance, United States money passed from a paper to a specie basis.

Running a City Government.

Rev. Washington Gladden has his say about it in The Century in the form of a sketch of how the Cosmopolis City club" did. A number of prominent citizens of Cosmopolis wanted an appropriation of $5,000 for the public library. They could not get it, and were treated not too courteously by the city officials. There was no money for a library because Jim Mulloy had to have a $200,000 market house and Colonel Schneider had to have a $100,000 armory. These gentlemen's requests were granted because back of all was a tremendous job in real estate that benefited the ring inside of it immensely, and they were supposed to whack up in consequence with the city officials.

At this desperate stage a minister, a lawyer, a carpenter and some others formed the Cosmopolis City club. The worm turned at last. Each member interested a number of such citizens as he could reach most easily in the movement for reconstructing the city government. They called a meeting. But they did not publish the call in the papers. They did not want to bring down upon them all the cranks in Cosmopolis, they said. Two or three basic principles were clear to them in the start. "The one was that national party politics in the city government is senseless and meaningless. They made good men of all parties work together in the club. Another basic principle most of them agreed to was that citizens' organizations had no business to go into the volunteer detective field and hunt out crime and raid dens on their own account. The work of the citizens' organizations was to force the police department to do its own work in this respect. Judge Hamlin said:

"If my hostler neglects to keep my stable clean, I am not in the habit of showing my displeasure with him by doing the work myself and permitting him to sit and smoke on the sidewalk. That method of dealing with employees is justly regarded as unwise by all business men as when they are private workmen. The only way to get the laws enforced in this city is to compel the men to enforce them whose business it is."

Some more wisdom from "Judge Hamlin" was that the problem of municipal government in America was constantly muddled by legislative interference, and that state governments should in the main keep their fingers off a city government anyhow. State legislators in the majority of cases had no interests involved in a city government, and they did not generally understand municipal problems. While it would be putting things too strongly to say that a legislature should have no power to interfere in city government, his opinion "this power should be sharply restricted by constitutional provisions."

The club divided itself into sections. Each section took a given department of the city government and investigated it thoroughly. They looked into expenditures and the cost of supplies, into the contracts given out by the city councils and into the way in which the police, fire department and other branches of the city service performed their duties. They worked to interest good citizens in their own town government, creating first of all a public sentiment which would demand absolute honesty and efficiency in municipal administration. When that was done all the rest would be easy.

The outline of the Cosmopolis club and its scope were as follows:

There should be an association of citizens for the improvement of municipal government.

Its object should be permanent, and with the expectation of indefinite continuance. We should no more contemplate the termination of this work than that of the church or college. The time will never come when there will not be need of such an organization, though which municipal offices may be fostered and exposed.

The condition of membership should be the adoption of a declaration that in municipal affairs party politics should be ignored, and a pledge that the members will, in all these matters, act in independence of the claims of party.

The work of the association should be: (1) To spread information and arouse interest in topics relating to the welfare of the city, and especially to its government. (2) To collect and publish information upon these topics, including the enforcement or non-enforcement of the laws, the management of the city's finances, the manner in which contracts are made and executed, the conduct of elections, and so forth. (3) To inquire into the methods by which cities are governed and to see whether it is possible to improve our charter so that our administration shall be more simple and efficient.

ABOUT THE OPEN GR.

Last Scenes Attending th Burial of Mr. Blaine.

ELOQUENT TRIBUTE OF DR. HAMLI

Simplicity to a Painful Degree Mark Every Feature of the Funeral—Mr. Blaine Prostrated and Unable to Attend the Church Services.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Outside the mansion, during the brief service of prayer over the remains of the late distinguished citizen, had gathered a throng of reverent spectators. Hats were silently doffed and tearful quiet reigned as the pallbearers deposited their sacred burden in the hearse and the attendants buried it under as many flowers as could be placed therein. The cortege then started for the church.

Except Mrs. Blaine, the other member of Mr. Blaine's immediate family followed their dear relatives, Mrs. Johnson and Hyatt and the distinguished guests i regularly assigned carriages. The seating arrangements at the church were perfect, and although it was crowds there was no confusion. The entire church was hung with the funeral emblems.

At the Church.

It was 11:45 o'clock before the cortege arrived at the church. As the ushers entered the organ pealed forth, "O Come, Ye Di consolate," and Rev. Dr. Hamlin's rich heart beat at the head of the procession saying, "I am the resurrection and th life."

Slowly the pallbearers followed, and that came the casket, covered with palms, rose violets and lilies. Then followed the family, the president, cabinet and the invited guests. The delegations from Maine, New York and Philadelphia brought up th rear.

It took a long time to seat the great crowd that came with the casket, and I was after 12 o'clock when Dr. Hamlin began the services. His theme was still a death as he read the comforting words o Scripture from the Presbyterian funeral service.

A Prayerful Tribute.

Dr. Hamlin's prayer, which was the only approach to a funeral discourse that marked the impressive ceremonies of the day, was as follows:

"Thanks be unto God, the Father an the Son and the Holy Spirit, for Christis triumph in the presence of the open grave We render thee, mourning in this sacred and solemn place and presence, O God, our tribute of gratitude that thou didst make thy servant whose ashes we are now consigning to the resting place of all the living. We thank thee for all that mental endowment with which thou didst bless him, for all the fidelity in culture, in finement, in the pursuit of all that mak the human mind clear and true and strong and mighty that marked his life.

"We thank thee for his patriotism, his serene and unchanging faith in the institutions of the land he loved. We thank thee for his services to his country in days and years of peril, through critical times stead fly holding to his confidence in the great principles that underlie our institutions.

Blaine's Religious Faith.

"We thank thee for his faith in God, his faith in Jesus Christ, his acceptance of him as his personal Saviour and Redeemer. We thank thee for his broad charity, his kindness and sweetness of heart, that impressed all those that loveman and serve God. We thank thee for his strong serenity under the grief and crushing bereavements that in these last years have fallen upon his and upon his household. We thank thee for his fortitude during all these weeks of waiting, for his patience and his gentleness. We thank thee, Lord, for all that our departed brother through thy grace was as man and citizen, as patriot, as a servant of his country, as husband and father in the beautiful life of the home.

"We entreat thee that they may be able to look, not into the open grave, but into the open heavens; not at what they have lost, but at what the dear one gone has left behind.

"We entreat thee that the fragrant and precious memories of this dear husband and father, friend and kinsman may be their solace in these desolate and trying days. We ask thy blessing, O Lord, on God, upon the executive department of the government with which thy servant was so intimately associated. We commend to thee the president of the United States, the vice president and all the members of the cabinet with whom our departed brother labored, and we entreat that upon them all in this sense of loss and this new admonition of their own mortality there may come a new sanctity consciousness and serene trust in God and the Lord Jesus Christ.

For the Millions Who Loved Him.

"We ask thy blessing, O Lord, upon all the people of the land; upon the millions that with singular fidelity have loved him whose voice so many of them have heard whose counsels so many of them have followed, but who now rests speechless in death.

"We entreat thee that his patriotism, his lofty purposes, his sincere and constant love for the institutions of the land may animate all the people and may be a blessed heritage for every citizen of the republic.

"We commend to thee the nations of the earth—all those lands that have felt the touch of his hand in the great relations of diplomacy—and we pray thee that there may come to them all a more profound trust in God, in people, in the liberties wherewith God is making people free, and in all those blessed gifts that come from him to the nation that loves and serves the Lord of Hosts. We ask thy blessing, O Lord, upon this church. We thank thee that thy servant had part in its very beginning; that he did not despise the day of small things. We thank thee that he loved and aided it in its early days and its progress; that he worshiped here and sat at this communion table.

Supplication For the Family.

"And now, O Lord, we are go hence and take our places about the open grave and deposit there this sacred and precious dust, wit them go with us as this family return to their desolate home! With thee be with them! Wilt thou make good the void that is in their hearts? May this many times bereaved, this sorely afflicted household have the abundant comfort and strength and grace of Jesus Christ, our Lord, we beseech thee, our heavenly Father."

The Lord's Prayer was then recited by the pastor and a part of the congregation, and the benediction was invoked upon all present, and at 12:45 the church services closed. The casket was raised and placed once more in the hearse, all the distinguished concourse standing as it was borne from the church.

It was noted that Mrs. Blaine was not among the mourners. Among so many deeply veiled figures her form had not been noticed, but it was whispered that, overcome by grief, she had remained at the house.

Prior to the starting of the funeral procession from Lafayette square Mrs. Blaine had requested to be left alone for a few minutes with the honored dead. The parlor had been cleared for this purpose, and when Mrs. Blaine emerged after from 5 to 10 minutes' silent communion with her grief she made her way, supported on the arm of her son and daughter, Miss Hadd, to the room where her husband had died, and there gave way to her grief in utter prostration.

Mrs. Hale and other sympathizing friends followed her to the death chamber, but their friendly ministrations were of no avail, and Mrs. Blaine was compelled to remain behind.

The masses of people in the vicinity of the church, kept from too close approach to the doors of the edifice by a detachment of policemen, pressed closer as the stir about the main doorway told them that the services were over. The procession was soon moving in the direction of the cemetery, headed by a platoon of police. It moved westward on N street to Twenty-first, thence north to I street, crossing Rock creek into Georgetown.

Dust to Dust.

On the succession of terraces that border the winding paths leading to the grave the thousands of spectators were standing. The floral tributes, so numerous that five wagons were necessary to convey them to the cemetery, were arranged artistically back of the grave on a huge strip of canvas.

Mud and melting snow were everywhere under foot, and temporary plank walks had been placed over the grave. On these the family, friends and official associates of Mr. Blaine stood during the last ceremony. Dull overhead the sky was laden with leaden clouds that foreshadowed rain.

Dr. Hamlin read the simple burial service of the Presbyterian church. This was followed by a brief supplementary prayer, and following came the benediction, and all that was mortal of James Gillespie Blaine was consigned to earth.

Then the crowd dispersed. All entered their carriages and were driven away—all but one, James G. Blaine, who is junior no longer, who stood beside the grave of his father. The sexton waited at a little distance with the casket and the grave diggers had filled in the remaining space. When all was accomplished he returned to his home, and the last group of spectators dispersed.

Mr. Blaine's Will.

The will was executed several weeks since at about the time Mr. Blaine was seized with the first serious heart trouble, which announced the rapid approach of the end.

It will be probated in Augusta, Me., which was his legal residence. The disposition is in harmony of his property in character with the confidence he always reposed in his wife, and which was such a noticeable feature of his family relations. Everything is left unreservedly to Mrs. Blaine. She is to be sole executrix of the instrument and is not to be required to give any bond. Mr. Blaine's property, according to the estimate of a gentleman whose relations with him enable him to speak with correctness, will amount to about $600,000. It is composed of improved real estate in Washington and in Maine, and of coal and timber lands in West Virginia and other states, and small holdings of personal property.

Mr. Blaine's expenses, especially in later years, have been very heavy, and had he lived it was his purpose to begin the development of his property the valuation of his estate would probably have been doubled within a few years to come. Both lands are likely to increase in value as their resources are developed, so that when the time comes for a division of the property among the heirs and residuary legatees the estate will amount to considerably more than at present. There are but three children now living—Mrs. Damrosch, Miss Hattie and Jas. G. Blaine, 3d—to share in the bounty of the children of Mrs. Coppinger, her oldest daughter, who died three years ago.

Memorial Services at Augusta.

AUGUSTA, Me., Jan. 31.—While the last honors were being paid over the remains of the late James G. Blaine at Washington, regular funeral services were held in the Congregational church in this city, so that the people among whom the departed statesman lived during his career might attest their regard for him as a man and their sorrow at his death. The church was filled. The altar was draped with the national colors, and in front of it was placed a large portrait of the dead statesman, with a black mourning background relieved by smilax and flowers about the portrait.

The Blaine family pew was hung with floral emblems, evergreens and white roses. After the regular service remarks were made by Hon. J. W. Beadbury, O. D. Baker and H. M. Heath. The remarks of ex-Senator Bradbury were doubly expressive. He is now 90 years of age, and when he spoke of the ways of Providence by which a man of Mr. Blaine's age, which at the zenith of his possibilities should be taken and those advanced in age and with little usefulness be left, the scene was very affecting.

FAVORABLE TO HAWAII.

Uncle Sam Seems Disposed to Annexation.

JOHNNY BULL, HOWEVER, OBJECTS.

Mr. Chandler Introduces a Bill In the House—Dr. Scott Asserts Hawaiians Are Overwhelmingly Opposed to Annexation—Protectorate With Great Britain Best For the Kingdom—Other News.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—There are some important developments in the Hawaiian situation. First, it is pretty clearly indicated that the administration is not in any way lukewarm in the matter, as was at first supposed. Secondly, the action of the commander of the Boston, against which Great Britain is about to file or has filed a formal protest, has received the official approval of the president and his cabinet.

The sentiment in favor of annexing is rapidly extending. Several members of the cabinet have expressed themselves as being in favor of accepting the proposition, but as the action necessary to accomplish annexation must come as well from the legislature as the executive branch of the government, the declarations do not in themselves amount to more than the expression of opinion of private citizens.

The matter will doubtless be considered at the cabinet meeting today, but of course nothing will be done in the matter, except probably to arrange for the reception of the Hawaiian annexation commissioners on their arrival in this city next Friday.

The President's Attitude.

It has been reported that President Harrison is in favor of the annexation of Hawaii. There is in support of this statement the president's well known liking of territorial expansion, which has for its object the enlargement of the sphere of usefulness and activity of this nation. His action upon the part taken in the revolution by the United States officials and forces may also be regarded as proof of the correctness of the report.

A gentleman who is especially familiar with the history of the relations between this country and the Hawaiian islands said: "The interests of the United States in Hawaii are paramount to those of any other nation. The islands, save in the matter of their political relations, really belong to the United States, and why should not that one other step of annexation be taken?"

A Joint Protectorate Advised.

In an interview Dr. Mott Smith said he thought a dual protectorate by the United States and Great Britain over the islands would be the natural outcome. "There will be a great amount of diplomatic conference and negotiations over the matter. "One thing is certain. The queen and Hawaii are not to be wiped out without a struggle to keep going. The government has always been able to take care of itself. "As to the queen, if the United States annexes the islands, she would be treated in a manner worthy of a nation and probably granted an allowance."

In Congress.

In the senate there is a distinctively American feeling on the Hawaiian question, which is not confined to any party.

There can be no doubt that the majority of the members of the foreign relations committee of the senate favor the establishment of American domination on the islands, but it just what shape is a matter of detail that has not yet been considered.

The arrival of the commissioners from Hawaii is awaited with much interest, but pending their arrival the question of annexation and the establishment of a protectorate is being discussed by the members of the senate in the committee rooms and cloak rooms.

Mr. Chandler (Rep., N. H.) stepped to the front as an avowed Hawaiian annexationist, and if he had his way the president would have been instructed by both houses to enter into negotiations with the representatives of the provisional government of the late kingdom of Hawaii and to submit the convention to congress for ratification by legislation. But this was blocked by Mr. White (Dem., La.), who objected to immediate action, and Mr. Chandler's resolution was laid over.

Mr. Chandler's Ideas.

Mr. Chandler says that the time has come for the United States to annex the Hawaiian islands. For years they have been gravitating toward us, but *as long as a self sup*porting autonomous government could be maintained on the islands there was no reason for annexation. Now, however, it is apparent that positive action must be taken; the native government can no longer stand, and the people are willing to come to us. It is not by necessary for the United States to embark in any general policy of annexation or colonization. What we want is Hawaii in the Pacific and one or two points in the West Indies. We need them for coaling stations and for strategic outposts, and we can stop there.

The Queen Cables England.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—The statement is made here that ex-Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii has sent cable advices to the British government at London via New Zealand concerning the situation at Honolulu. Knowing this fact, the provisional government was anxious that the true facts of the revolution should be known to the United States government before the story sent to the world by the queen's agents could reach this country. The Claudine was accordingly chartered, the commissioners appointed and sent on their way to Washington.

Johnny Bull Protests.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The British government has instructed Sir Julian Pauncefote, its minister at Washington, to protest against the action of the United States officials and forces in Hawaii.

THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

Policies Her Majesty Would Inaugurate For England's Good.

LONDON, Jan. 31.—The queen's speech, which was given to parliament today, besides promising the introduction of the Irish legislative bill, an electoral registration reform bill and a county council reform measure, intimates that a licensing reform measure, a local option scheme, a bill dealing with the election of county magistrates and proposals affecting the Established Church of Scotland and the Church of Wales will be offered for the consideration of parliament. The attention of the house is asked to the report of the Irish evicted tenants' commission and the government proposals based thereon.

Allusion is avoided regarding agitation for the release of the dynamite convicts and political prisoners. Referring to international matters, the speech hopefully refers to the Behring sea arbitration about to open in Paris, to the timely settlement of the recent ministerial crisis in Cairo and the restoration of harmony with the khedive, and to the monetary conference at Brussels as assisting the governments represented fully to understand one another's views.

Regarding the condition of the home and foreign trade, the speech is more optimistic than might have been expected. The relations of her majesty's government with all foreign powers is declared satisfactory.

POPULISTS THREATEN FORCE.

Republican Members of the House Will Not Go Until Put Out.

TOPEKA, Jan. 31.—The crisis will soon be reached in the house muddle. Just before the house adjourned Speaker Dunsmore (Pop.) arose and handed to Speaker Douglass, the Republican presiding officer, a sealed communication. Dunsmore exacted a promise from him not to reveal its purport. The letter is a notice to the Republicans to quit. It sets forth that the Republican house is an illegal body; that the Republicans are obstructionists, delaying the business of the house, and notifies Speaker Douglass that he and all alleged Republican clerks and officials must withdraw and no longer attempt to usurp the powers of the Populist house, which is the only legal house of representatives.

Representative Campbell, a Populist leader, said: "If the Republicans do not go peaceably we will call on the governor to execute his perogative, and he will have to act. He will send a company of militia here to see that the rules of the house are obeyed and the business of the house is not obstructed."

Speaker Douglass said: "The Republican house is the legally organized house, and I propose to hold the speaker's chair, and in doing so I will have the law abiding people of Kansas with me. We know we are right, and we will maintain those rights until forced to retire at the point of the bayonet."

Governor Werts' Nominations.

TRENTON, Jan. 31.—The governor sent the following nominations to the senate: For lay judge of the court of errors and appeals in place of Jonathan S. Whittaker, whose term expires, William Walter Phelps, at present United States minister to Germany; for law part warden of Hudson county, James P. Laverty; for prosecutor of the pleas of Hudson county, Charles H. Winfield; for law judge of common pleas court of Ocean county, James F. Otis; for prosecutor of the pleas of Mercer county, Bayard Stockton; for judge of the common pleas court of Morris county, Francis Childs; for lay judge of Morris county, Charles Harkins; for prosecutor of the pleas of Sussex county, Theodore Timonson; for law judge of the common pleas court of Bergen county, James M. Van Valen; for law judge of the common pleas court of Monmouth county, Archibald A. Higgins.

Politics in Hayti.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—A letter from Port Limon confirmed the report that on the day of the election in Hayti Hippolyte had troops stationed at the polls, with instructions to arrest all oppositionists who put in an appearance. Not only that, but some time before the election was held a large number of opposition voters were put into prison. When they were released they were advised to change their political allegiance.

Our Part In Panama.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31.—Speaker Crisp appointed the special committee which will investigate the Panama scandal on this side of the Atlantic. Colonel John R. Fellows of New York is the chairman, and the other members are Thomas J. Geary of California, Josiah Patterson of Tennessee, H. Henry Powers of Vermont and Bellamy Storer of Ohio.

Bequeathed Five Millions.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 31.—The provisions of the will of the late A. A. Low, father of President Low of Columbia college, were made public. The exact value of the estate is not known, but it is believed to be between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000. The greater part of the real estate in this city is left to Seth Low. The charitable bequests amount to $67,500.

Trying to Defeat Carlisle.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 31.—Senator Carlisle's enemies is his own party are plotting mischief by reviving old charges of intemperance. The charges are not new. They have been made several times before, but they have never injured Senator Carlisle and have not deprived him of the highest honors in his state.

Rhode Island's Legislature.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 31.—The legislature begins its annual session today. Governor Brown in his message recommends bonding the debt of the state for $4,000,000 and the expending of a greater part of the money in placing the highways all through Rhode Island in good condition.

The Italian Bank Scandal.

ROME, Jan. 31.—Signor A. Mouzilli, director of the bureau of industry and commerce, who was arrested for complicity in the bank scandals, says: "Others of high standing will be arrested too. I shall have ex-cabinet ministers and ex-ministers to keep me company in jail."

HOMESTEAD POISONING.

Dempsey Goes on the Stand In Beatty's Defense.

CROTON OIL AND ARSENIC FOUND.

Another Victim, the Wife of a Steward, Dies at Annapolis—The Coroner's Jury Finds Poison In the Stomach of Louis Szinyzy, a Carnegie Workman.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 31.—The trial of Beatty attracted great throngs at criminal court. Until noon the time was occupied in reading abstracts from testimony taken in the Dempsey trial and examination of witnesses, who represented Gallagher's and Davidson's reputation for honesty and veracity as anything but creditable. In the afternoon Dr. Parmele of Homestead testified to treating several cases from the Homestead mill. They were cholera morbus and diarrhea. He then stated that if the quantity of poison as indicated by the confessions of Gallagher and Davidson were administered to the workmen, they could never have got away from the mill except in ambulances.

Dempsey Testifies.

Hugh F. Dempsey, who has been tried and convicted on the same charge as the defendant, testified that he had no acquaintance with Gallagher or Davidson prior to their introduction to him by Beatty. Witness positively disclaimed all knowledge or connection with the alleged plot to poison or sicken the workmen; had employed Gallagher and Davidson, as he had three or four others, to secure certain information as to what was being done in the mill. The interest of the Knights of Labor in the Homestead strike, witness said, was a cooperative interest in labor associations.

"I sent these men to Homestead in the interest of labor organizations, but entirely upon my own responsibility," he continued.

Continuing under cross-examination, Mr. Dempsey testified that Beatty had not engaged any other than Gallagher and Davidson by his direction.

Two Good Men Were on the Way.

"I received a telegram from Beatty, dated Cincinnati, asking for $30 and saying two good men were on the way, but I did not understand it, as I had not sent him for any men. I believe I did telegraph Beatty to go to Hugh Kavanaugh in Cincinnati and get $30. Davidson never made any reports to me."

Professor George Hay, the analytical chemist, testified that one-twelfth of a drop of croton oil, or the amount supposed to have been given to each of the 300 men who ate in the cookhouse over which Gallagher presided, would act only as a mild laxative, if it should not at all. Croton oil could not possibly remain in the system four days and then be detected by an examination. The detection of croton oil in excretions is impossible.

Dr. Wylie testified that it would be impossible to give three grains of arsenic to 300 men and expect a large proportion of them to die.

Croton Oil and Arsenic Found.

The coroner's inquest on the remains of Louis Szinyzy, a Hungarian, of Ohio, who died at the Alleghany hospital a few weeks ago, was concluded. Chemist A. E. Hunt testified that an analysis of Szinyzy's stomach revealed enough croton oil and arsenic to cause death.

A verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts brought out and recommended that the court take the matter up and place the responsibility for death.

A dispatch from Annapolis states that Mrs. Lou Lock, wife of the Homestead steward, died there. Mrs. Wolfe was taken ill after partaking of a meal at the mill last September and never recovered.

The End In View.

ALBANY, Jan. 31. — Governor Flower signed the bill appropriating $700,000 for continuing work upon the capitol building. The governor says: "In approving a larger appropriation last year I quoted the estimate of the commissioner of the capitol that the total amount needed for the completion of the structure was then $2,351,-035.32, and that by the expenditure of $800,000 that year, $750,000 this year and the remainder, $750,000, next year the capitol would be finally completed.

A Duel Satisfies French Honor.

PARIS, Jan. 31.—Deputies Deroulede and Pichon fought a duel with swords. The duel was the result of an insult offered by Deroulede to Pichon in the chamber of deputies on Saturday, when Deroulede called out to Pichon, "You are M. Herz's sleeping partner." Deroulede wounded Pichon seriously in the ribs, while Derolede himself received a scratch from M. Pichon's sword in the face.

THE DUNKIRK STRIKE FAILS.

The Men Will Be Taken Back Where Their Places Are Not Filled.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Jan. 31.—The strike at the Brooks Locomotive works is ended beyond a doubt. The strikers themselves acknowledge that their case is hopeless. The strike fell flat when the Brooks people demonstrated that they could run the works with outside men. Many of the old men have returned, and in a day or two the full complement of workmen will have been enrolled and the making of locomotives move along as before. President Hinman says the old men can return if they wish to, but that competent workmen now employed will not be discharged to make room for them. Everything is quiet around the works.

Bishop Wigger Will Not Talk.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Bishop Wigger of Newark, N. J., declined to furnish a copy of Archbishop Satolli's letter, saying that it would be improper for him to do so, but he said that he received it on Friday night and that it was written in Latin. He remarked also that he was too good a Latin scholar to mistake its meaning, and that this was that the Bishop had decided in his favor on all the points made against him by Father Killeen of Bayonne, N. J.

Gloves and Slippers.

Long white undressed kid gloves are worn with evening dresses. They are easy fitting, slightly wrinkled on the arms and must meet the sleeves, says Harper's Bazar, which also furnishes these items about slippers:

Slippers, of the satin of the gown, are low cut, with pointed toes and high French heels. Straps across the instep are on many slippers, but plain ones are preferred. They may be trimmed with a brooch or buckle of rhinestones, or else with a large choux of chiffon of the same color. Yellow satin slippers sometimes have dark rosettes of silk muslin or of lace. Black satin slippers and black stockings are still preferred by many, as they make the foot look small. With colored slippers the stockings are of the same shade. White slippers are worn with dresses of various colors. The suede slippers soon stretch out of shape and are therefore losing favor.

Points About Veils.

The fashionable purple veil is as unbecoming to most women as anything could be. It makes the ordinary complexion look ghastly. A radiant blond is the only person who can wear it with advantage. Among extreme novelties, which cannot, however, be commended as good form, are black veils sprinkled over with green, pink and yellow dots. An example of this kind was mounted on wire and adorned round the top with a frill of its own material about four or five inches deep. Then a few inches below the chin it was gathered slightly and finished off with a rosette of black bobe ribbon. The plain black net, without spots, of softest and most delicate texture, is calculated to refine the beauty of the most perfect complexion and is becoming to most faces. Dark complexioned girls should wear very fine nets with a mesh not too close.

A Food That Contains Phosphorus.

A German chemist is authority for the statement that apples contain more phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. For this reason, as well as because the apple contains several acids, noticeably malic acid, it is an excellent brain food and remedy against the ills that come of sedentary habits and rich food.

A SARCASTIC WOMAN.

A FAIR CREATURE WHO CAN MAKE YOU FEEL VERY UNEASY.

She Is Often Met Upon the Street, in the Shopping District. In Your Own Home, but the Worst Place of All is in Her Own Beautiful Residence.

You have met the sarcastic woman, I am sure, but I hope you contrived an escape before her talons of sarcasm inflicted more than a surface mark on your heart. In an ordinary mood she is one of the most repulsive creatures to encounter, and when her overtolled wrath starts its downward course you had better quicken your pace, for the result is hazardous. Besides having the power of hurling you with her wrath she also possesses the mystic faculty of freezing. She can make chills of humiliation shake your anatomy during a sunniest day of August, and you will unconsciously gaze upward to see if Boreas is not pouring over the mountain ledges his bleak cold breath upon you. The sarcastic woman deserves to be called uncouth and should occupy one of the lower steps on the life stair.

The old excuse, "an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth," is perhaps allowable, since human nature seems to glory in the sentiment, even when it is far better to resist. The woman who attacks—not always the woman who responds—is the target for censure. Meet the sarcastic woman on the street. Just as she is approaching she throws a sweet light of recognition across her face. You immediately regret your judgment, declaring that she is a sweet creature after all, and when your own lips have parted with a full blown smile she draws herself up to her fullest attitude, merely bowing with that frozen know you indifference. Oh, that dwindled down, dwarfish sensation! You begin to feel yourself to see if you have not suddenly lost in height and circumference.

But pass into a fashionable dry goods store, where you will soon see her, and proceed to select for yourself that much needed substantial wool dress, for which you are compelled to make goods and money correspond; she will hold about a loz of high priced goods and before you are aware of her presence she innocently catches hold of the same piece which you have just instructed the clerk to measure off, instantly puts it aside, remarking to her companion or the clerk, "Oh, I thought it was something nice, it is cotton." Again, at the glove counter, you may be scrutinizing a pair of dollar and a half kids, and she will dash gloriously up, almost treading on your toes, and with a winning smile to the clerk say that she "would like to look at some gloves, please." The sympathizing young man ventures to ask, "About what price glove would you like, ma'am?" Whereupon she victoriously replies, "Those long French suedes at two fifty. It never pays to buy a cheap glove." And she is earnestly on the lookout to wound your feelings, then sear, as she thinks, from your society.

Occasionally she has the extreme temerity to enter your home hurriedly and familiarly. Clasping your hands with undue confidence, she insists that she be not allowed to interfere with your work, and "will just sit in the hall or your room." The tables of location being turned, she will be unusually pleasant—in fact, not many moments elapse before you find yourself on the top plank of the fence, ready to shower her skirts by and by you respond to her "do come, really, soon," and walk up the front steps of her home with a confidential feeling of welcome. In answer to the door bell perhaps she will come, and you see a cordial "good afternoon." Her features quickly undergo a rigid transformation as she utters a cold reply, and she stands in the doorway in a manner to keep you out.

Inviting you in with polite affability, she seems more interested in home affairs than you could. Of course you never leave at once, and while you remain must make the best of it. The first chance for escape you modestly leave, vowing to yourself that you will never go there again or have anything to do with her. You may be shrewd enough to keep out of her way after several rebuffs, but if you do not the first time she finds you in company with male acquaintances sapiike she will spring upon you, inflicting her most virulent poison.

A sarcastic woman is invariably envious, and as she cannot envy man, but is known to be the kind to court his favor, she takes this her cherished opportunity, to throw a rosy light upon her own deeds and a deep shade upon yours. Of her works "the half cannot be told." Let the high tempered woman emit her flames of anger, let the chronic tattler keep on with her husky whisper, lend a patient ear to the blarney lipped flatterer, but if you would avoid the most annoying of human nuisance, if you would spare your heart the most poignant cuts and stubborn-to-be-healed wounds, turn the corner when you see that sarcastic woman.—Zula B. Cook in Detroit Free Press.

Fumigating a Bedroom.

Do not keep a sick person long in one room without taking him out and fumigating. Put sulphur in an iron or earthenware pan that will stand the heat, and set it on bricks placed in the center and in the pan containing water up to the top of the bricks. Set the sulphur on fire, close all the the windows and crevices, so it cannot escape. Loosen and hang upon chairs all the clothing to be freshened; keep the door closed six or eight hours, then open all the windows and doors and let in a blaze into the room for a day. Nothing costs a sick person so much as to think of the pure, clean room he is lying in.—New York Recorder.

How Rhoda Broughton Looks.

Rhoda Broughton is above the middle height and graceful in figure; the hair, rolled back from the low, broad, sunny looking forehead, is becomingly tinged with gray over the right temple, harmonizing well with the darker shades on the neat, well shaped head. The mouth and chin indicate firmness and resolution. In repose the expression might almost be called sad, but as she speaks a flood of light from her eyes set well apart at once dispels the idea, and the pleasant, musical laugh betrays the vein of fun and wit which is of a cordial kind—which runs through her books.—Exchange.

It Does Seem Rather Strange.

Strange how eager the young women are to rush into the literary profession when so many of the others have failed to realize the highest destiny of woman. In journalism there are Kate Field and Gail Hamilton. There are Susan Coolidge, Mary Mapes Dodge, Celia Thaxter, Louise Imogen Guiney, Constance Fenimore Woolson, Edith Thomas, Grace King, Agnes Repplier, Lucy Larcom, Charles Egbert Craddock, Emma Hooper and Mary Wilkins, besides an appalling array of lesser lights, all spinsters.—New York Sun.

Writes on a Typewriter.

Edna Lyall, the author of "Donovan," lives at Eastbourne in a big, picturesque house.

The approach is by gates right and left, which open into a garden filled with shrubs. On seeking admittance you are taken up to a bright, cheerful room which is the real home of the quivered and visible spirit of being devoted to literary and artistic pursuits. As the young author, Edna Lyall, rises from the typewriter in the corner opposite the door, with kindly greeting, you are at once struck with her extremely youthful appearance. She is about the medium height, pale in complexion, with dark hair rolled back from a broad forehead, which betokens a strongly intellectual and logical cast of mind. She has well defined, arched eyebrows, and very dark blue eyes, which light up softly as she speaks. Her manner is gentle and sympathetic, and her voice is sweet in tone. She wears a simply made gown of olive green material, relieved with embroidery of a lighter color.

Her writing room is severe and substantial. The floor is covered with Indian matting, strewn about with a few brightly colored Indian and Persian rugs, and in the center is a comfortable couch with a quilted lying on it. The pretty American walnut wood writing table against the wall on the right has a raised desk and little cupboards and drawers below, which never many good bits of china. On the farther side is a handsome revolving table filled with books, and in the corner stands an old grandfather's clock of the Seventeenth century. There is a neat arrangement for hiding manuscripts out of sight, a tall piece of furniture with little narrow drawers.—Mrs. Riddell.

Eiddellian Decoration.

There is such a thing as carrying the love of flowers to a ridiculous length. It can be carried so far as to almost set on edge the teeth of the beholders of it. I believe in ornamenting and decorating one's home with flowers, indeed I am a great lover of pretty things of every sort, but when some decoration reaches as far as the legs of one's piano it is time to cry "Halt!" or "Enough!" a horse laugh very long ago in which all of the piano legs were ornamented with huge bows of yellow and cardinal ribbon, a decoration not at all unsuitable having been used for this purpose. Now I am quite sure that all of my readers will agree with me that the less one tries to ornament piano legs, the better it will be for the feelings of one's friends.

No amount of ribbon or anything else can make piano legs beautiful. It would be upon this folly of putting piano legs into trousers as into ribbons. One would not be any more incongruous than the other. Of all things, piano legs are the most difficult to dress, and the home decorator will be wise not to trifle with them. Leave them as their maker made them and you will avoid an fair outside of the realm of artistic decoration.

And I, for one, have never been able to see anything beautiful or artistic in painted and bottlenosed cast and scoop shovels, warming pans, pipes and clothespins.—Housewife.

She Knows All About Machinery.

Mary Washington girls can boast of possessing a young lady who knows all about machinery. The most unusual is that of Miss Elliott, daughter of Colonel Elliott, of the United States engineer corps. Colonel Elliott is one of the most skillful engineers in the government service. He has no son, and his daughter has been his constant companion. She went about with him on Sport for Parties.

One of the variations of a "peanut hunt" is to see who can carry the most peanuts in one hand from one table to another. A man ought to win this. Forty-two is said to be a good number by those who have tried it. Then the winner is to be rewarded, while the "booby," too, must be remembered.

Another trial for an evening party consists in carrying potatoes from one table to another in a table or waistcoat. The potatoes, which should be small, are placed on a table with a potato fork. The one who can carry most potatoes from one table to the other in a given time wins. The tables must be placed so far back as to keep up the potato, and care required lest it fall. Cincinnati Enquirer.

For the Hair.

In South America the women use the juice of the soap tree as a wash to restore their hair. The yolk of an egg is considered a good thing, but the hair must be washed well afterward. A very excellent thing is the juice of quinine in powder, which is said to make hair grow. Take half a pint of good spirit, in which dissolve a quarter of an ounce of sulphate of quinine, then thin tightly in a bottle and with these lotion for a few days, shaking it occasionally. Afterward add a pint of rum and an ounce of powdered Peruvian bark; leave this for a week or ten days, then filter through blotting paper, and then mix the two mixtures together and use to wash the roots of the hair with a sponge, half the quinine mixture and half water.—London Society.

Unique Employment of Two Women.

The Women's New Century guild, of Philadelphia, now employs forty women who go about from house to house to relate gossip, pass doors, shake carpets, drape a door or window, rip and clean an old gown and, in short, to do the countless tiresome things which housewives find it difficult to have done well. To this luxury they add that of women skilled in the serving of appetizing lunches, breakfasts and dinners. Those they do not bring in as a matter, but prepare from the resources of the house. They take charge of the house, do the marketing, and sometimes remain for several days to keep things of affairs while the mistress is entertaining extra guests.—Philadelphia Letter

A Retired Mother's Sacrifice.

At the time of the first call for volunteers a matronly lady accompanied by her son, a fine youth of about nineteen years, entered a store on Broadway, New York, and purchased a full soldier's outfit for him. With evident emotion she remarked: "This, my son, is all that I can do. I have given all I have to my country, and may God be with you. It is all a mother can do."—Cor. New York Press.

WELCOME NOVELTIES.

THE SPENCER WAIST WHICH OUR GRANDMOTHER WORE.

The Old Bodices Are Attractive Too—Another Old Friend In the Dignified Black Satin Dress—Costumes for the Misses Aged, but Worn by Debutantes.

It is a rapid age, and the craving for novelty for outrun the inspiration of those whose genius is expected to create it, so there is nothing to do but to ring the changes on old ideas that in former times have given us pleasure. Welcome, indeed, thinks the New York Sun fashion editor, are some of the revivals which she never ceasing rotation of Dame Fortune's wheel restores to us. Among them we find again the pretty Spencer waists, which our mothers worn when we were in pinafores, and very attractive are these simple old bodices, pinched just the least bit at the neck and again at the belt, like the exquisitely neat print gowns of the village housewife, whose afternoon toilet for neighborly calls is finished when over the clean print is tied a lawn apron, snowy white. The new Spencer waist is of shot velvet, or of changeable Russian velour, or of fancy silk, and it is worn with a skirt of cloth or of heavy corded silk. A quaint conceit is that of making those gowns of exceptionally rich material and without any trimming except the collar and belt, which is of jeweled passementerie. A gathered waist of shot gold and green velvet, with a gold lace band for a collar and gold ribbon for a belt, has five bands of the velvet for the skirt decoration, ornamenting a bronze brown skirt of cloth.

THE SPENCER WAIST.

Another revival is that of the black satin dress, which comes to us now as an old friend, in a new guise, for the staid dignity of the somber costume, once the sign manual of middle aged gentility, is now disturbed by most frivolous displays of youthful color, and the matron's gown is appropriated by the youngest and tenderest of maidens for their debutantes affect those gowns for afternoon receptions and the theater, and have them made up with scant, full skirts just clearing the ground and huge shoulder frills or sleeve puffs of color. The new pantiential violet blue made a blond belle's beauty dazzling in its brilliancy frilled over the shoulder of her black satin gown monstrously, and the neck of the gown was cut slightly low and the sash folded in the conventional fashion.

Fit for a Mother-in-law.

To paraphrase a remark of the famous John Jerrock's, "Matrimony is the finest of wars, with nine out of ten women only five and twenty per cent. of the danger." It is unusually a defective commissariat which leads to the failure of many a nuptial campaign which has opened under the fairest auspices. Victory may be frequently snatched from defeat if the female commissary knows how to avail of culinary expedients. The following simple recipe is suggested as a conjugal flag of truce preliminary to negotiations for an armistice: The Bijou of a pint of oysters when this comes to a boil place therein the oysters for one minute only. Chop fine some celery, which boil in water for thirty minutes. In the meantime make a white sauce, composed of milk, butter and a little arrowroot to thicken, add the celery after straining, place the oysters on toast, pour over them the sauce and serve. This will be enough for three persons—say a man, his wife and his mother-in-law, if the last is under control.

Cream.

Fashionable capes, deep and full, are of plaid stuff, lined throughout with changeable silk and having deep cape collars and standing cape as well of velvet, the color of the velvet being that most common in the plaid. The length of these capes is about that really worn, and it is certain that many women will wear them all winter.

Sleeves Growing Larger.

Some of the newest empire sleeves measure 14 yards across the top before they are adjusted to the bodice, and but little of this width is taken up in the making up of the sleeve.

Helping Her Out.

It was in a mission Sunday school where the teachers were young and pretty girls from the Back Bay, and the pupils little children from the colored district. It was the last day before the summer vacation, and the teacher was distributing the mite boxes. She was much chagrined that one small child, looking much dejected, and she bent down to hear the objection, which she felt was there, to the mite box. The little one hoped that they had just filled one mite box.

"I know," said the teacher, "but see, this is a new one for the vacation. See what a pretty one it is, and I want to see who will save the most pennies for the poor little heathen that do not have any Sunday school."

The little one did not look encouraged, but held the box away from her with perfect dislike, and finally with tears in her eyes confessed:

"Oh, Miss O'Flanagan, who lives in our alley, is gettin a divorce, and I promised to give all my pennies to help."—Mahogany Tree.

Reason for Politeness.

The supposed English lack of grace in manners is due to the fact that the habit of social intercourse is a matter for continual amusement to the French. They have a theory that politeness is a duty, and that good manners are to be learned by her some personal pain to serve—which, moreover, he is capable of serving than he is of being gracious.

It is related that M. Prudhomme, while traveling by rail, fell in with an Englishman who talked steadily with him in French for an hour and a half.

When they parted the Frenchman said:

"I am very happy to have had this opportunity to exchange my impressions with an affable gentleman such as you—the more so from the fact that, as a general thing, your countrymen are not at all communicative."

"Oh!" said the Englishman in very bad French, "I only talked, you know, because it gave me a chance to practice my French!"—Youth's Companion.
